19 ¶ [o] Then the same day at evening, being the first day of the week, when the doors were shut where the disciples were assembled for fear of the Jews, came Jesus and stood in the midst, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you.

20 And when he had so said, he shewed unto them his hands and his side. [p] Then were the disciples glad, when they saw the Lord.

21 Then said Jesus to them again, Peace be unto you: [q] as my Father hath sent me, even so send I you.

22 And when he had said this, he breathed on them, and saith unto them, Receive ye the Holy Ghost:

23 [r] Whose soever sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them; and whose soever sins ye retain, they are retained.

24 ¶ But Thomas, one of the twelve,

[s] called Didymus, was not with them when Jesus came.

25 The other disciples therefore said unto him, We have seen the Lord. But he said unto them, Except I shall see in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and thrust my hand into his side, I will not believe.

26 ¶ And after eight days again his disciples were within, and Thomas with them: then came Jesus, the doors being shut, and stood in the midst, and said, Peace be unto you.

27 Then saith he to Thomas, Reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands; and [t] reach hither thy hand, and thrust it into my side: and be not faithless, but believing.

28 And Thomas answered and said unto him, My Lord and my God.

29 Jesus saith unto him, Thomas, because thou hast seen me, thou hast believed: [u] blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed.

30 ¶ [x] And many other signs truly did Jesus in the presence of his disciples, which are not written in this book:

31 [y] But these are written, that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; [z] and that believing ye might have life through his name.

CHAPTER XXI.

Christ appearing again to his disciples was known of them by the great draught of fishes.

AFTER these things Jesus shewed himself again to the disciples at the sea of Tiberias; and on this wise shewed he himself.

2 There were together Simon Peter, and Thomas called Didymus, and [a] Nathanael of Cana in Galilee, and [b] the sons of Zebedee, and two other of his disciples.

3 Simon Peter saith unto them, I go a fishing. They say unto him, We also go with thee. They went forth, and entered into a ship immediately; and that night they caught nothing.

4 But when the morning was now come, Jesus stood on the shore: but the disciples [c] knew not that it was Jesus.

5 Then [d] Jesus saith unto them, [2] Children, have ye any meat? They answered him, No.

6 And he said unto them, [e] Cast the net on the right side of the ship, and ye shall find. They cast therefore, and now they were not able to draw it for the multitude of fishes.

7 Therefore [f] that disciple whom Jesus loved saith unto Peter, It is the Lord. Now when Simon Peter heard that it was the Lord, he girt his fisher's coat unto him, (for he was naked,) and did cast himself into the sea.

8 And the other disciples came in a little ship; (for they were not far from land, but as it were two hundred cubits,) dragging the net with fishes.

9 As soon then as they were come to land, they saw a fire of coals there, and fish laid thereon, and bread.

10 Jesus saith unto them, Bring of the fish which ye have now caught.

11 Simon Peter went up, and drew the net to land full of great fishes, an hundred and fifty and three: and for all there were so many, yet was not the net broken.

12 Jesus saith unto them, [g] Come and dine. And none of the disciples durst ask him, Who art thou? knowing that it was the Lord.

13 Jesus then cometh, and taketh bread, and giveth them, and fish likewise.

14 This is now [h] the third time that Jesus shewed himself to his disciples, after that he was risen from the dead.

15 ¶ So when they had dined, Jesus saith to Simon Peter, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me more than these? He saith unto him, Yea, Lord; thou knowest that I love thee. He saith unto him, Feed my lambs.

16 He saith to him again the second time, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me? He saith unto him, Yea, Lord; thou knowest that I love thee. [i] He saith unto him, Feed my sheep.

17 He saith unto him the third time, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me? Peter was grieved because he said unto him the third time, Lovest thou me? And he said unto him, Lord, [k] thou knowest all things; thou knowest that I love thee. Jesus saith unto him, Feed my sheep.

18 [l] Verily, verily, I say unto thee, When thou wast young, thou girdedst thyself, and walkedst whither thou wouldest: but when thou shalt be old, thou shalt stretch forth thy hands, and another shall gird thee, and carry thee whither thou wouldest not.

19 This spake he, signifying [m] by what death he should glorify God. And when he had spoken this, he saith unto him, Follow me.

20 Then Peter, turning about, seeth

the disciple [n] whom Jesus loved following; which also leaned on his breast at supper, and said, Lord, which is he that betrayeth thee?

21 Peter seeing him saith to Jesus, Lord, and what shall this man do?

22 Jesus saith unto him, If I will that he tarry [o] till I come, what is that to thee? follow thou me.

23 Then went this saying abroad among the brethren, that that disciple should not die: yet Jesus said not unto him, He shall not die; but, If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee?

24 This is the disciple which testifieth of these things, and wrote these things: and [p] we know that his testimony is true.

25 [q] And there are also many other things which Jesus did, the which, if they should be written every one, [r] I suppose that even the world itself could not contain the books that should be written. Amen.

THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES.

CHAPTER I.

Christ prepareth his apostles for his ascension, and promiseth to send the Holy Ghost.

THE former treatise have I made, O [a] Theophilus, of all that Jesus began both to do and teach,

2 [b] Until the day in which he was taken up, after that he through the Holy Ghost [c] had given commandments unto the apostles whom he had chosen:

3 [d] To whom also he shewed himself alive after his passion by many infallible proofs, being seen of them forty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God:

4 [e] And, [2] being assembled together with them, commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but wait for the promise of the Father, [f] which, saith he, ye have heard of me.

5 [g] For John truly baptized with water; [h] but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence.

6 When they therefore were come together, they asked of him, saying, [i] Lord, wilt thou at this time [k] restore again the kingdom to Israel?

7 And he said unto them, [l] It is not for you to know the times or the seasons, which the Father hath put in his own power.

8 [m] But ye shall receive [3] power, [n] after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and [o] ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judæa, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth.

9 [p] And when he had spoken these things, while they beheld, [q] he was taken up; and a cloud received him out of their sight.

10 And while they looked stedfastly toward heaven as he went up, behold, two men stood by them [r] in white apparel;

11 Which also said, [s] Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, [t] shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven.

12 [u] Then returned they unto Jerusalem from the mount called Olivet, which is from Jerusalem a sabbath day's journey.

13 And when they were come in, they went up [x] into an upper room, where abode both [y] Peter, and James, and John, and Andrew, Philip, and Thomas, Bartholomew, and Matthew, James the son of Alphæus, and [z] Simon Zelotes, and [a] Judas the brother of James.

14 [b] These all continued with one accord in prayer and supplication, with [c] the women, and Mary the mother of Jesus, and with [d] his brethren.

15 ¶ And in those days Peter stood up in the midst of the disciples, and said, (the number [e] of names together were about an hundred and twenty,)

16 Men and brethren, this scripture must needs have been fulfilled, [f] which the Holy Ghost by the mouth of David spake before concerning Judas, [g] which was guide to them that took Jesus.

17 For [h] he was numbered with us, and had obtained part of [i] this ministry.

18 [k] Now this man purchased a field with [l] the reward of iniquity; and falling headlong, he burst asunder in the midst, and all his bowels gushed out.

19 And it was known unto all the dwellers at Jerusalem; insomuch as that field is called in their proper tongue, Aceldama, that is to say, The field of blood.

20 For it is written in the book of Psalms, [m] Let his habitation be desolate, and let no man dwell therein: and [n] his [2] bishoprick let another take.

21 Wherefore of these men which have companied with us all the time that the Lord Jesus went in and out among us,

22 [o] Beginning from the baptism of John, unto that same day that [p] he was taken up from us, must one be ordained [q] to be a witness with us of his resurrection.

23 And they appointed two, Joseph called [r] Barsabas, who was surnamed Justus, and Matthias.

24 And they prayed, and said, Thou, Lord, [s] which knowest the hearts of all men, shew whether of these two thou hast chosen,

25 [t] That he may take part of this ministry and apostleship, from which Judas by transgression fell, that he might go to his own place.

26 And they gave forth their lots; and the lot fell upon Matthias; and he was numbered with the eleven apostles.

CHAPTER II.

The apostles are admired by some, and derided by others, and work many miracles.

AND when [a] the day of Pentecost was fully come, [b] they were all with one accord in one place.

2 And suddenly there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind, and [c] it filled all the house where they were sitting.

3 And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them.

4 And [d] they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began [e] to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance.

5 And there were dwelling at Jerusalem Jews, devout men, out of every nation under heaven.

6 Now [2] when this was noised abroad, the multitude came together, and were [3] confounded, because that every man heard them speak in his own language.

7 And they were all amazed and marvelled, saying one to another, Behold, are not all these which speak [f] Galilæans?

8 And how hear we every man in our own tongue, wherein we were born?

9 Parthians, and Medes, and Elamites, and the dwellers in Mesopotamia, and in Judæa, and Cappadocia, in Pontus, and Asia,

10 Phrygia, and Pamphylia, in Egypt, and in the parts of Libya about Cyrene, and strangers of Rome, Jews and proselytes, 11 Cretes and Arabians, we do hear them speak in our tongues the wonderful works of God.

12 And they were all amazed, and were in doubt, saying one to another, What meaneth this?

13 Others mocking said, These men are full of new wine.

14 ¶ But Peter, standing up with the eleven, lifted up his voice, and said unto them, Ye men of Judæa, and all ye that dwell at Jerusalem, be this known unto you, and hearken to my words:

15 For these are not drunken, as ye suppose, [g] seeing it is but the third hour of the day.

16 But this is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel;

17 [h] And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, [i] I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh: and your sons and [k] your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams:

18 And on my servants and on my handmaidens I will pour out in those days of my Spirit; [l] and they shall prophesy:

19 [m] And I will shew wonders in heaven above, and signs in the earth beneath; blood, and fire, and vapour of smoke:

20 [n] The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before that great and notable day of the Lord come:

21 And it shall come to pass, that [o] whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved.

22 Ye men of Israel, hear these words; Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved of God among you [p] by miracles and wonders and signs, which God did by him in the midst of you, as ye yourselves also know:

23 Him, [q] being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, [r] ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain:

24 [s] Whom God hath raised up, having loosed the pains of death: because it was not possible that he should be holden of it.

25 For David speaketh concerning him, [t] I foresaw the Lord always before my face, for he is on my right hand, that I should not be moved:

26 Therefore did my heart rejoice, and my tongue was glad: moreover also my flesh shall rest in hope:
27 Because thou wilt not leave my soul in hell, neither wilt thou suffer thine Holy One to see corruption.
28 Thou hast made known to me the ways of life; thou shalt make me full of joy with thy countenance.
29 Men and brethren, [2] let me freely speak unto you [u] of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, and his sepulchre is with us unto this day.
30 Therefore being a prophet, [x] and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne;
31 He seeing this before spake of the resurrection of Christ, [y] that his soul was not left in hell, neither his flesh did see corruption.
32 [z] This Jesus hath God raised up, [a] whereof we all are witnesses.
33 Therefore [b] being by the right hand of God exalted, and [c] having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, he [d] hath shed forth this, which ye now see and hear.
34 For David is not ascended into the heavens: but he saith himself, [e] The LORD said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, 35 Until I make thy foes thy footstool.
36 Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly, that God [f] hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ.
37 ¶ Now when they heard this, [g] they were pricked in their heart, and said unto Peter and to the rest of the apostles, Men and brethren, what shall we do?
38 Then Peter said unto them, [h] Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.
39 For the promise is unto you, and [i] to your children, and [k] to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call.
40 And with many other words did he testify and exhort, saying, Save yourselves from this untoward generation.
41 ¶ Then they that gladly received his word were baptized: and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls.
42 [l] And they continued stedfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers.
43 And fear came upon every soul: and [m] many wonders and signs were done by the apostles.
44 And all that believed were together, and [n] had all things common;
45 And sold their possessions and goods, and [o] parted them to all men, as every man had need.
46 [p] And they, continuing daily with one accord [q] in the temple, and [r] breaking bread [2] from house to house, did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart, 47 Praising God, and [s] having favour with all the people. And [t] the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved.

CHAPTER III.

Peter professeth cures not to be wrought by his power, but through faith in the name of Jesus.

NOW Peter and John went up together [a] into the temple at the hour of prayer, [b] being the ninth hour.
2 And [c] a certain man lame from his mother's womb was carried, whom they laid daily at the gate of the temple which is called Beautiful, [d] to ask alms of them that entered into the temple;
3 Who seeing Peter and John about to go into the temple asked an alms.
4 And Peter, fastening his eyes upon him with John, said, Look on us.
5 And he gave heed unto them, expecting to receive something of them.
6 Then Peter said, Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee: [e] In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk.
7 And he took him by the right hand, and lifted him up: and immediately his feet and ancle bones received strength.
8 And he [f] leaping up stood, and walked, and entered with them into the temple, walking, and leaping, and praising God.
9 [g] And all the people saw him walking and praising God:
10 And they knew that it was he which [h] sat for alms at the Beautiful gate of the temple: and they were filled with wonder and amazement at that which had happened unto him.
11 And as the lame man which was healed held Peter and John, all the people ran together unto them in the porch [i] that is called Solomon's, greatly wondering.
12 ¶ And when Peter saw it, he answered unto the people, Ye men of Israel, why marvel ye at this? or why look ye so earnestly on us, as though by our own power or holiness we had made this man to walk?

13 [k] The God of Abraham, and of Isaac, and of Jacob, the God of our fathers, [l] hath glorified his Son Jesus; whom ye [m] delivered up, and [n] denied him in the presence of Pilate, when he was determined to let him go.

14 But ye denied [o] the Holy One [p] and the Just, and desired a murderer to be granted unto you;

15 And killed the [2] Prince of life, [q] whom God hath raised from the dead; [r] whereof we are witnesses.

16 [s] And his name through faith in his name hath made this man strong, whom ye see and know: yea, the faith which is by him hath given him this perfect soundness in the presence of you all.

17 And now, brethren, I wot that [t] through ignorance ye did it, as did also your rulers.

18 But [u] those things, which God before had shewed [x] by the mouth of all his prophets, that Christ should suffer, he hath so fulfilled.

19 ¶ [y] Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord;

20 And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you:

21 [z] Whom the heaven must receive until the times of [a] restitution of all things, [b] which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began.

22 For Moses truly said unto the fathers, [c] A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me; him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you.

23 And it shall come to pass, that every soul, which will not hear that prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people.

24 Yea, and all the prophets from Samuel and those that follow after, as many as have spoken, have likewise foretold of these days.

25 [d] Ye are the children of the prophets, and of the covenant which God made with our fathers, saying unto Abraham, [e] And in thy seed shall all the kindreds of the earth be blessed.

26 [f] Unto you first God, having raised up his Son Jesus, [g] sent him to bless you, [h] in turning away every one of you from his iniquities.

CHAPTER IV.

The rulers of the Jews imprison Peter and John, and command them to preach no more in the name of Jesus.

AND as they spake unto the people, the priests, and the [2] captain of the temple, and the Sadducees, came upon them,

2 [a] Being grieved that they taught the people, and preached through Jesus the resurrection from the dead.

3 And they laid hands on them, and put them in hold unto the next day: for it was now eventide.

4 Howbeit many of them which heard the word believed; and the number of the men was about five thousand.

5 ¶ And it came to pass on the morrow, that their rulers, and elders, and scribes,

6 And [b] Annas the high priest, and Caiaphas, and John, and Alexander, and as many as were of the kindred of the high priest, were gathered together at Jerusalem.

7 And when they had set them in the midst, they asked, [c] By what power, or by what name, have ye done this?

8 [d] Then Peter, filled with the Holy Ghost, said unto them, Ye rulers of the people, and elders of Israel,

9 If we this day be examined of the good deed done to the impotent man, by what means he is made whole;

10 Be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, [e] that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, [f] whom God raised from the dead, even by him doth this man stand here before you whole.

11 [g] This is the stone which was set at nought of you builders, which is become the head of the corner.

12 [h] Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved.

13 ¶ Now when they saw the boldness of Peter and John, [i] and perceived that they were unlearned and ignorant men, they marvelled; and they took knowledge of them, that they had been with Jesus.

14 And beholding the man which was healed [k] standing with them, they could say nothing against it.

15 But when they had commanded them to go aside out of the council, they conferred among themselves,

16 Saying, [l] What shall we do to these men? for that indeed a notable miracle hath been done by them is [m] manifest to all them that dwell in Jerusalem; and we cannot deny it.

17 But that it spread no further among the people, let us straitly threaten them, that they speak henceforth to no man in this name.

18 [n] And they called them, and commanded them not to speak at all nor teach in the name of Jesus.

19 But Peter and John answered and said unto them, [o] Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye.

20 [p] For we cannot but speak the things which [q] we have seen and heard.

21 So when they had further threatened them, they let them go, finding nothing how they might punish them, [r] because of the people: for all men glorified God for [s] that which was done.

22 For the man was above forty years old, on whom this miracle of healing was shewed.

23 ¶ And being let go, [t] they went to their own company, and reported all that the chief priests and elders had said unto them.

24 And when they heard that, they lifted up their voice to God with one accord, and said, Lord, [u] thou art God, which hast made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and all that in them is:

25 Who by the mouth of thy servant David hast said, [x] Why did the heathen rage, and the people imagine vain things?

26 The kings of the earth stood up, and the rulers were gathered together against the Lord, and against his Christ.

27 For [y] of a truth against [z] thy holy child Jesus, [a] whom thou hast anointed, both Herod, and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles, and the people of Israel, were gathered together, 28 [b] For to do whatsoever thy hand and thy counsel determined before to be done.

29 And now, Lord, behold their threatenings: and grant unto thy servants, [c] that with all boldness they may speak thy word, 30 By stretching forth thine hand to heal; [d] and that signs and wonders may be done [e] by the name of [f] thy holy child Jesus.

31 ¶ And when they had prayed, [g] the place was shaken where they were assembled together; and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, [h] and they spake the word of God with boldness.

32 And the multitude of them that believed [i] were of one heart and of one soul: [k] neither said any of them that ought of the things which he possessed was his own; but they had all things common.

33 And with [l] great power gave the apostles [m] witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus: and [n] great grace was upon them all.

34 Neither was there any among them that lacked: [o] for as many as were possessors of lands or houses sold them, and brought the prices of the things that were sold,

35 [p] And laid them down at the apostles' feet: [q] and distribution was made unto every man according as he had need.

36 And Joses, who by the apostles was surnamed Barnabas, (which is, being interpreted, The son of consolation,) a Levite, and of the country of Cyprus, 37 [r] Having land, sold it, and brought the money, and laid it at the apostles' feet.

CHAPTER V.

After working many miracles, the apostles are again imprisoned, but delivered by an angel.

BUT a certain man named Ananias, with Sapphira his wife, sold a possession,

2 And kept back part of the price, his wife also being privy to it, [a] and brought a certain part, and laid it at the apostles' feet.

3 [b] But Peter said, Ananias, why hath [c] Satan filled thine heart [2] to lie to the Holy Ghost, and to keep back part of the price of the land?

4 Whiles it remained, was it not thine own? and after it was sold, was it not in thine own power? why hast thou conceived this thing in thine heart? thou hast not lied unto men, but unto God.

5 And Ananias hearing these words [d] fell down, and gave up the ghost: and great fear came on all them that heard these things.

6 And the young men arose, [e] wound him up, and carried him out, and buried him.

7 And it was about the space of three hours after, when his wife, not knowing what was done, came in.

8 And Peter answered unto her, Tell me whether ye sold the land for so much? And she said, Yea, for so much.

9 Then Peter said unto her, How is it that ye have agreed together f to tempt the Spirit of the Lord? behold, the feet of them which have buried thy husband are at the door, and shall carry thee out.

10 g Then fell she down straightway at his feet, and yielded up the ghost: and the young men came in, and found her dead, and, carrying her forth, buried her by her husband.

11 h And great fear came upon all the church, and upon as many as heard these things.

12 ¶ And i by the hands of the apostles were many signs and wonders wrought among the people; (k and they were all with one accord in Solomon's porch.

13 And l of the rest durst no man join himself to them: m but the people magnified them.

14 And believers were the more added to the Lord, multitudes both of men and women.)

15 Insomuch that they brought forth the sick [2] into the streets, and laid them on beds and couches, n that at the least the shadow of Peter passing by might overshadow some of them.

16 There came also a multitude out of the cities round about unto Jerusalem, bringing o sick folks, and them which were vexed with unclean spirits: and they were healed every one.

17 ¶ p Then the high priest rose up, and all they that were with him, (which is the sect of the Sadducees,) and were filled with [3] indignation, 18 q And laid their hands on the apostles, and put them in the common prison.

19 But r the angel of the Lord by night opened the prison doors, and brought them forth, and said, 20 Go, stand and speak in the temple to the people [s] all the words of this life.

21 And when they heard that, they entered into the temple early in the morning, and taught. t But the high priest came, and they that were with him, and called the council together, and all the senate of the children of Israel, and sent to the prison to have them brought.

22 But when the officers came, and found them not in the prison, they returned, and told,

23 Saying, The prison truly found we shut with all safety, and the keepers standing without before the doors: but when we had opened, we found no man within.

24 Now when the high priest and u the captain of the temple and the chief priests heard these things, they doubted of them whereunto this would grow.

25 Then came one and told them, saying, Behold, the men whom ye put in prison are standing in the temple, and teaching the people.

26 Then went the captain with the officers, and brought them without violence: x for they feared the people, lest they should have been stoned.

27 And when they had brought them, they set them before the council: and the high priest asked them,

28 Saying, y Did not we straitly command you that ye should not teach in this name? and, behold, ye have filled Jerusalem with your doctrine, z and intend to bring this man's a blood upon us.

29 ¶ Then Peter and the other apostles answered and said, b We ought to obey God rather than men.

30 c The God of our fathers raised up Jesus, whom ye slew and d hanged on a tree.

31 e Him hath God exalted with his right hand to be f a Prince and g a Saviour, h for to give repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins.

32 And i we are his witnesses of these things; and so is also the Holy Ghost, k whom God hath given to them that obey him.

33 ¶ l When they heard that, they were cut to the heart, and took counsel to slay them.

34 Then stood there up one in the council, a Pharisee, named m Gamaliel, a doctor of the law, had in reputation among all the people, and commanded to put the apostles forth a little space;

35 And said unto them, Ye men of Israel, take heed to yourselves what ye intend to do as touching these men.

36 For before these days rose up Theudas, boasting himself to be somebody; to whom a number of men, about four hundred, joined themselves: who was slain; and all, as many as [2] obeyed him, were scattered, and brought to nought.

37 After this man rose up Judas of Galilee in the days of the taxing, and drew away much people after him: he also perished; and all, even as many as obeyed him, were dispersed.

38 And now I say unto you, Refrain from these men, and let them alone: n for if this counsel or this work be of men, it will come to nought.

39 ° But if it be of God, ye cannot overthrow it; lest haply ye be found even ᵖ to fight against God.

40 And to him they agreed: and when they had ᑫ called the apostles, ʳ and beaten them, they commanded that they should not speak in the name of Jesus, and let them go.

41 ¶ And they departed from the presence of the council, ˢ rejoicing that they were counted worthy to suffer shame for his name.

42 And daily ᵗ in the temple, and in every house, ᵘ they ceased not to teach and preach Jesus Christ.

CHAPTER VI.

The apostles appoint the office of deaconship to seven chosen men, of whom Stephen is one.

AND in those days, ᵃ when the number of the disciples was multiplied, there arose a murmuring of the ᵇ Grecians against the Hebrews, because their widows were neglected ᶜ in the daily ministration.

2 Then the twelve called the multitude of the disciples unto them, and said, ᵈ It is not reason that we should leave the word of God, and serve tables.

3 Wherefore, brethren, ᵉ look ye out among you seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business.

4 But we ᶠ will give ourselves continually to prayer, and to the ministry of the word.

5 ¶ And the saying pleased the whole multitude: and they chose Stephen, ᵍ a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost, and ʰ Philip, and Prochorus, and Nicanor, and Timon, and Parmenas, and ⁱ Nicolas a proselyte of Antioch:

6 Whom they set before the apostles: and ᵏ when they had prayed, ˡ they laid their hands on them.

7 And ᵐ the word of God increased; and the number of the disciples multiplied in Jerusalem greatly; and a great company ⁿ of the priests were obedient to the faith.

8 And Stephen, full of faith and power, did great wonders and miracles among the people.

9 ¶ Then there arose certain of the synagogue, which is called the synagogue of the Libertines, and Cyrenians, and Alexandrians, and of them of Cilicia and of Asia, disputing with Stephen.

10 And ° they were not able to resist the wisdom and the spirit by which he spake.

11 ᵖ Then they suborned men, which said, We have heard him speak blasphemous words against Moses, and against God.

12 And they stirred up the people, and the elders, and the scribes, and came upon him, and caught him, and brought him to the council,

13 And set up false witnesses, which said, This man ceaseth not to speak blasphemous words against this holy place, and the law:

14 ᑫ For we have heard him say, that this Jesus of Nazareth shall ʳ destroy this place, and shall change the [2] customs which Moses delivered us.

15 And all that sat in the council, looking stedfastly on him, saw his face as it had been the face of an angel.

CHAPTER VII.

Stephen sheweth that Abraham worshipped God, and that Moses witnessed of Christ.

THEN said the high priest, Are these things so?

2 And he said, ᵃ Men, brethren, and fathers, hearken; The God of glory appeared unto our father Abraham, when he was in Mesopotamia, before he dwelt in Charran,

3 And said unto him, ᵇ Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and come into the land which I shall shew thee.

4 Then ᶜ came he out of the land of the Chaldæans, and dwelt in Charran: and from thence, when his father was dead, he removed him into this land, wherein ye now dwell.

5 And he gave him none inheritance in it, no, not so much as to set his foot on: ᵈ yet he promised that he would give it to him for a possession, and to his seed after him, when as yet he had no child.

6 And God spake on this wise, ᵉ That his seed should sojourn in a strange land; and that they should bring them into bondage, and entreat them evil ᶠ four hundred years.

7 And the nation to whom they shall be in bondage will I judge, said God: and after that shall they come forth, and ᵍ serve me in this place.

8 ʰ And he gave him the covenant of circumcision: ⁱ and so Abraham begat Isaac, and circumcised him the eighth day; ᵏ and Isaac begat Jacob; and ˡ Jacob begat the twelve patriarchs.

9 ᵐ And the patriarchs, moved with envy, sold Joseph into Egypt: ⁿ but God was with him,

10 And delivered him out of all his afflictions, [o] and gave him favour and wisdom in the sight of Pharaoh king of Egypt; and he made him governor over Egypt and all his house.

11 [p] Now there came a dearth over all the land of Egypt and Chanaan, and great affliction: and our fathers found no sustenance.

12 [q] But when Jacob heard that there was corn in Egypt, he sent out our fathers first.

13 [r] And at the second time Joseph was made known to his brethren; and Joseph's kindred was made known unto Pharaoh.

14 [s] Then sent Joseph, and called his father Jacob to him, and [t] all his kindred, threescore and fifteen souls.

15 [u] So Jacob went down into Egypt, [x] and died, he, and our fathers,

16 And [y] were carried over into Sychem, and laid in [z] the sepulchre that Abraham bought for a sum of money of the sons of Emmor the father of Sychem.

17 But when [a] the time of the promise drew nigh, which God had sworn to Abraham, [b] the people grew and multiplied in Egypt, 18 Till another king arose, which knew not Joseph.

19 The same dealt subtilly with our kindred, and evil entreated our fathers, [c] so that they cast out their young children, to the end they might not live.

20 [d] In which time Moses was born, and [e] was [2] exceeding fair, and nourished up in his father's house three months:

21 And [f] when he was cast out, Pharaoh's daughter took him up, and nourished him for her own son.

22 And Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, and was [g] mighty in words and in deeds.

23 [h] And when he was full forty years old, it came into his heart to visit his brethren the children of Israel.

24 And seeing one of them suffer wrong, he defended him, and avenged him that was oppressed, and smote the Egyptian:

25 [3] For he supposed his brethren would have understood how that God by his hand would deliver them: but they understood not.

26 [i] And the next day he shewed himself unto them as they strove, and would have set them at one again, saying, Sirs, ye are brethren; why do ye wrong one to another?

27 But he that did his neighbour wrong thrust him away, saying, [k] Who made thee a ruler and a judge over us?

28 Wilt thou kill me, as thou diddest the Egyptian yesterday?

29 [l] Then fled Moses at this saying, and was a stranger in the land of Madian, where he begat two sons.

30 [m] And when forty years were expired, there appeared to him in the wilderness of mount Sina an angel of the Lord in a flame of fire in a bush.

31 When Moses saw it, he wondered at the sight: and as he drew near to behold it, the voice of the Lord came unto him, 32 Saying, [n] I am the God of thy fathers, the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. Then Moses trembled, and durst not behold.

33 [o] Then said the Lord to him, Put off thy shoes from thy feet: for the place where thou standest is holy ground.

34 [p] I have seen, I have seen the affliction of my people which is in Egypt, and I have heard their groaning, and am come down to deliver them. And now come, I will send thee into Egypt.

35 This Moses whom they refused, saying, Who made thee a ruler and a judge? the same did God send to be a ruler and a deliverer [q] by the hand of the angel which appeared to him in the bush.

36 [r] He brought them out, after that he had [s] shewed wonders and signs in the land of Egypt, [t] and in the Red sea, [u] and in the wilderness forty years.

37 ¶ This is that Moses, which said unto the children of Israel, [x] A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, [2] like unto me; [y] him shall ye hear.

38 [z] This is he, that was in the church in the wilderness with [a] the angel which spake to him in the mount Sina, and with our fathers: [b] who received the lively [c] oracles to give unto us:

39 To whom our fathers would not obey, but thrust him from them, and in their hearts turned back again into Egypt,

40 [d] Saying unto Aaron, Make us gods to go before us: for as for this Moses, which brought us out of the land of Egypt, we wot not what is become of him.

41 [e] And they made a calf in those days, and offered sacrifice unto the idol, and rejoiced in the works of their own hands.

42 Then [f] God turned, and gave them up to worship [g] the host of heaven; as it is written in the book of the prophets, [h] O ye house of Israel, have ye offered to me slain beasts and sacrifices by the space of forty years in the wilderness?

43 Yea, ye took up the tabernacle of Moloch, and the star of your god Remphan, figures which ye made to worship them: and I will carry you away beyond Babylon.

44 Our fathers had the tabernacle of witness in the wilderness, as he had appointed, [3] speaking unto Moses, [i] that he should make it according to the fashion that he had seen.

45 [k] Which also our fathers [2] that came after brought in with Jesus into the possession of the Gentiles, [l] whom God drave out before the face of our fathers, unto the days of David;

46 [m] Who found favour before God, and [n] desired to find a tabernacle for the God of Jacob.

47 [o] But Solomon built him an house.

48 Howbeit [p] the most High dwelleth not in temples made with hands; as saith the prophet,

49 [q] Heaven is my throne, and earth is my footstool: what house will ye build me? saith the Lord: or what is the place of my rest?

50 Hath not my hand made all these things?

51 ¶ Ye [r] stiffnecked and [s] uncircumcised in heart and ears, ye do always resist the Holy Ghost: as your fathers did, so do ye.

52 [t] Which of the prophets have not your fathers persecuted? and they have slain them which shewed before of the coming of [u] the Just One; of whom ye have been now the betrayers and murderers:

53 [x] Who have received the law by the disposition of angels, and have not kept it.

54 ¶ [y] When they heard these things, they were cut to the heart, and they gnashed on him with their teeth.

55 But he, [z] being full of the Holy Ghost, looked up stedfastly into heaven, and saw the glory of God, and Jesus standing on the right hand of God, 56 And said, Behold, [a] I see the heavens opened, and the [b] Son of man standing on the right hand of God.

57 Then they cried out with a loud voice, and stopped their ears, and ran upon him with one accord,

58 And [c] cast him out of the city, [d] and stoned him: and [e] the witnesses laid down their clothes at a young man's feet, whose name was Saul.

59 And they stoned Stephen, [f] calling upon God, and saying, Lord Jesus, [g] receive my spirit.

60 And he [h] kneeled down, and cried with a loud voice, [i] Lord, lay not this sin to their charge. And when he had said this, he fell asleep.

CHAPTER VIII.

Peter and John enlarge the church, and, preaching the word of the Lord, return to Jerusalem.

AND [a] Saul was consenting unto his death. And at that time there was a great persecution against the church which was at Jerusalem; and [b] they were all scattered abroad throughout the regions of Judæa and Samaria, except the apostles.

2 And devout men carried Stephen to his burial, and [c] made great lamentation over him.

3 As for Saul, [d] he made havock of the church, entering into every house, and haling men and women committed them to prison.

4 Therefore [e] they that were scattered abroad went every where preaching the word.

5 Then [f] Philip went down to the city of Samaria, and preached Christ unto them.

6 And the people with one accord gave heed unto those things which Philip spake, hearing and seeing the miracles which he did.

7 For [g] unclean spirits, crying with loud voice, came out of many that were possessed with them: and many taken with palsies, and that were lame, were healed.

8 And there was great joy in that city.

9 But there was a certain man, called Simon, which beforetime in the same city [h] used sorcery, and bewitched the people of Samaria, [i] giving out that himself was some great one:

10 To whom they all gave heed, from the least to the greatest, saying, This man is the great power of God.

11 And to him they had regard, because that of long time he had bewitched them with sorceries.

12 But when they believed Philip preaching the things [k] concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women.

13 Then Simon himself believed also: and when he was baptized, he continued with Philip, and wondered, beholding the [2] miracles and signs which were done.

14 Now when the apostles which were at Jerusalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent unto them Peter and John:

15 Who, when they were come down, prayed for them, [l] that they might receive the Holy Ghost:

16 (For [m] as yet he was fallen upon none of them: only [n] they were baptized in [o] the name of the Lord Jesus.)

17 Then [p] laid they their hands on them, and they received the Holy Ghost.

18 And when Simon saw that through laying on of the apostles' hands the Holy Ghost was given, he offered them money,

19 Saying, Give me also this power, that on whomsoever I lay hands, he may receive the Holy Ghost.

20 But Peter said unto him, Thy money perish with thee, because [q] thou hast thought that [r] the gift of God may be purchased with money.

21 Thou hast neither part nor lot in this matter: for thy heart is not right in the sight of God.

22 Repent therefore of this thy wickedness, and pray God, [s] if perhaps the thought of thine heart may be forgiven thee.

23 For I perceive that thou art in [t] the gall of bitterness, and in the bond of iniquity.

24 Then answered Simon, and said, [u] Pray ye to the Lord for me, that none of these things which ye have spoken come upon me.

25 And they, when they had testified and preached the word of the Lord, returned to Jerusalem, and preached the gospel in many villages of the Samaritans.

26 And the angel of the Lord spake unto Philip, saying, Arise, and go toward the south unto the way that goeth down from Jerusalem unto Gaza, which is desert.

27 And he arose and went: and, behold, [x] a man of Ethiopia, an eunuch of great authority under Candace queen of the Ethiopians, who had the charge of all her treasure, and [y] had come to Jerusalem for to worship, 28 Was returning, and sitting in his chariot read Esaias the prophet.

29 Then the Spirit said unto Philip, Go near, and join thyself to this chariot.

30 And Philip ran thither to him, and heard him read the prophet Esaias, and said, Understandest thou what thou readest?

31 And he said, How can I, except some man should guide me? And he desired Philip that he would come up and sit with him.

32 The place of the scripture which he read was this, [z] He was led as a sheep to the slaughter; and like a lamb dumb before his shearer, so opened he not his mouth:

33 In his humiliation his judgment was taken away: and who shall declare his generation? for his life is taken from the earth.

34 And the eunuch answered Philip, and said, I pray thee, of whom speaketh the prophet this? of himself, or of some other man?

35 Then Philip opened his mouth, [a] and began at the same scripture, and preached unto him Jesus.

36 And as they went on their way, they came unto a certain water: and the eunuch said, See, here is water; [b] what doth hinder me to be baptized?

37 And Philip said, [c] If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest. And he answered and said, [d] I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God.

38 And he commanded the chariot to stand still: and they went down both into the water, both Philip and the eunuch; and he baptized him.

39 And when they were come up out of the water, [e] the Spirit of the Lord caught away Philip, that the eunuch saw him no more: and he went on his way rejoicing.

40 But Philip was found at Azotus: and passing through he preached in all the cities, till he came to Cæsarea.

CHAPTER IX.

Saul is called to the apostleship, baptized by Ananias, and preacheth Christ boldly.

AND [a] Saul, yet breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord, went unto the high priest,

2 And desired of him letters to Damascus to the synagogues, that if he found any [2]of this way, whether they were men or women, he might bring them bound unto Jerusalem.

3 And [b]as he journeyed, he came near Damascus: and suddenly there shined round about him a light from heaven:

4 And he fell to the earth, and heard a voice saying unto him, Saul, Saul, [c]why persecutest thou me?

5 And he said, Who art thou, Lord? And the Lord said, I am Jesus whom thou persecutest: [d]it is hard for thee to kick against the pricks.

6 And he trembling and astonished said, Lord, [e]what wilt thou have me to do? And the Lord said unto him, Arise, and go into the city, and it shall be told thee what thou must do.

7 And [f]the men which journeyed with him stood speechless, hearing a voice, but seeing no man.

8 And Saul arose from the earth; and when his eyes were opened, he saw no man: but they led him by the hand, and brought him into Damascus.

9 And he was three days without sight, and neither did eat nor drink.

10 ¶ And there was a certain disciple at Damascus, [g]named Ananias; and to him said the Lord in a vision, Ananias. And he said, Behold, I am here, Lord.

11 And the Lord said unto him, Arise, and go into the street which is called Straight, and enquire in the house of Judas for one called Saul, [h]of Tarsus: for, behold, he prayeth, 12 And hath seen in a vision a man named Ananias coming in, and putting his hand on him, that he might receive his sight.

13 Then Ananias answered, Lord, I have heard by many of this man, [i]how much evil he hath done to thy saints at Jerusalem:

14 And here he hath authority from the chief priests to bind all [k]that call on thy name.

15 But the Lord said unto him, Go thy way: for [l]he is a chosen vessel unto me, to bear my name before [m]the Gentiles, and [n]kings, and the children of Israel:

16 For [o]I will shew him how great things he must suffer for my name's sake.

17 [p]And Ananias went his way, and entered into the house; and [q]putting his hands on him said, Brother Saul, the Lord, even Jesus, that appeared unto thee in the way as thou camest, hath sent me, that thou mightest receive thy sight, and [r]be filled with the Holy Ghost.

18 And immediately there fell from his eyes as it had been scales: and he received sight forthwith, and arose, and was baptized.

19 And when he had received meat, he was strengthened. [s]Then was Saul certain days with the disciples which were at Damascus.

20 And straightway he preached Christ in the synagogues, [t]that he is the Son of God.

21 But all that heard him were amazed, and said: [u]Is not this he that destroyed them which called on this name in Jerusalem, and came hither for that intent, that he might bring them bound unto the chief priests?

22 But Saul increased the more in strength, [x]and confounded the Jews which dwelt at Damascus, proving that this is very Christ.

23 ¶ And after that many days were fulfilled, [y]the Jews took counsel to kill him:

24 [z]But their laying await was known of Saul. And they watched the gates day and night to kill him.

25 Then the disciples took him by night, and [a]let him down by the wall in a basket.

26 And [b]when Saul was come to Jerusalem, he assayed to join himself to the disciples: but they were all afraid of him, and believed not that he was a disciple.

27 [c]But Barnabas took him, and brought him to the apostles, and declared unto them how he had seen the Lord in the way, and that he had spoken to him, [d]and how he had preached boldly at Damascus in the name of Jesus.

28 And [e]he was with them coming in and going out at Jerusalem.

29 And he spake boldly in the name of the Lord Jesus, and disputed against the [f]Grecians: [g]but they went about to slay him.

30 Which when the brethren knew, they brought him down to Cæsarea, and sent him forth to Tarsus.

31 [h]Then had the churches rest throughout all Judæa and Galilee and Samaria, and were edified; and walking in the fear of the Lord, and in the comfort of the Holy Ghost, were multiplied.

32 ¶ And it came to pass, as Peter passed [i]throughout all quarters, he came down also to the saints which dwelt at Lydda.

33 And there he found a certain man named Æneas, which had kept his bed eight years, and was sick of the palsy.

34 And Peter said unto him, Æneas, [k] Jesus Christ maketh thee whole: arise, and make thy bed. And he arose immediately.

35 And all that dwelt at Lydda and [l] Saron saw him, and [m] turned to the Lord.

36 ¶ Now there was at Joppa a certain disciple named Tabitha, which by interpretation is called [2] Dorcas: this woman was full [n] of good works and almsdeeds which she did.

37 And it came to pass in those days, that she was sick, and died: whom when they had washed, they laid her in [o] an upper chamber.

38 And forasmuch as Lydda was nigh to Joppa, and the disciples had heard that Peter was there, they sent unto him two men, desiring him that he would not [3] delay to come to them.

39 Then Peter arose and went with them. When he was come, they brought him into the upper chamber: and all the widows stood by him weeping, and shewing the coats and garments which Dorcas made, while she was with them.

40 But Peter [p] put them all forth, and [q] kneeled down, and prayed; and turning him to the body [r] said, Tabitha, arise. And she opened her eyes: and when she saw Peter, she sat up.

41 And he gave her his hand, and lifted her up, and when he had called the saints and widows, presented her alive.

42 And it was known throughout all Joppa; [s] and many believed in the Lord.

43 And it came to pass, that he tarried many days in Joppa with one [t] Simon a tanner.

CHAPTER X.

Cornelius sendeth for Peter, who is taught not to despise the Gentiles.

THERE was a certain man in Cæsarea called Cornelius, a centurion of the band called the Italian band,

2 [a] A devout man, and one that [b] feared God with all his house, which gave much alms to the people, and prayed to God alway.

3 [c] He saw in a vision evidently about the ninth hour of the day an angel of God coming in to him, and saying unto him, Cornelius.

4 And when he looked on him, he was afraid, and said, What is it, Lord? And he said unto him, Thy prayers and thine alms are come up for a memorial before God.

5 And now send men to Joppa, and call for one Simon, whose surname is Peter:

6 He lodgeth with one [d] Simon a tanner, whose house is by the sea side: [e] he shall tell thee what thou oughtest to do.

7 And when the angel which spake unto Cornelius was departed, he called two of his household servants, and a devout soldier of them that waited on him continually;

8 And when he had declared all these things unto them, he sent them to Joppa.

9 ¶ On the morrow, as they went on their journey, and drew nigh unto the city, [f] Peter went up upon the house-top to pray about the sixth hour:

10 And he became very hungry, and would have eaten: but while they made ready, he fell into a trance,

11 And [g] saw heaven opened, and a certain vessel descending unto him, as it had been a great sheet knit at the four corners, and let down to the earth:

12 Wherein were all manner of four-footed beasts of the earth, and wild beasts, and creeping things, and fowls of the air.

13 And there came a voice to him, Rise, Peter; kill, and eat.

14 But Peter said, Not so, Lord; [h] for I have never eaten any thing that is common or unclean.

15 And the voice spake unto him again the second time, [i] What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common.

16 This was done thrice: and the vessel was received up again into heaven.

17 Now while Peter doubted in himself what this vision which he had seen should mean, behold, the men which were sent from Cornelius had made enquiry for Simon's house, and stood before the gate,

18 And called, and asked whether Simon, which was surnamed Peter, were lodged there.

19 ¶ While Peter thought on the vision, [k] the Spirit said unto him, Behold, three men seek thee.

20 [l] Arise therefore, and get thee down, and go with them, doubting nothing: for I have sent them.

21 Then Peter went down to the men which were sent unto him from Cornelius; and said, Behold, I am he whom ye seek: what is the cause wherefore ye are come?

22 And they said, [m]Cornelius the centurion, a just man, and one that feareth God, and [n]of good report among all the nation of the Jews, was warned from God by an holy angel to send for thee into his house, and to hear words of thee.

23 Then called he them in, and lodged them. And on the morrow Peter went away with them, [o]and certain brethren from Joppa accompanied him.

24 And the morrow after they entered into Cæsarea. And Cornelius waited for them, and had called together his kinsmen and near friends.

25 And as Peter was coming in, Cornelius met him, and fell down at his feet, and worshipped him.

26 But Peter took him up, saying, [p]Stand up; I myself also am a man.

27 And as he talked with him, he went in, and found many that were come together.

28 And he said unto them, Ye know how [q]that it is an unlawful thing for a man that is a Jew to keep company, or come unto one of another nation; but [r]God hath shewed me that I should not call any man common or unclean.

29 Therefore came I unto you without gainsaying, as soon as I was sent for: I ask therefore for what intent ye have sent for me?

30 And Cornelius said, Four days ago I was fasting until this hour; and at the ninth hour I prayed in my house, and, behold, [s]a man stood before me [t]in bright clothing,

31 And said, Cornelius, [u]thy prayer is heard, [x]and thine alms are had in remembrance in the sight of God.

32 Send therefore to Joppa, and call hither Simon, whose surname is Peter; he is lodged in the house of one Simon a tanner by the sea side: who, when he cometh, shall speak unto thee.

33 Immediately therefore I sent to thee; and thou hast well done that thou art come. Now therefore are we all here present before God, to hear all things that are commanded thee of God.

34 ¶ Then Peter opened his mouth, and said, [y]Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons:

35 But [z]in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him.

36 The word which God sent unto the children of Israel, [a]preaching peace by Jesus Christ: ([b]he is Lord of all:)

37 That word, I say, ye know, which was published throughout all Judæa, and [c]began from Galilee, after the baptism which John preached;

38 How [d]God anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Ghost and with power: who went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed of the devil; [e]for God was with him.

39 And [f]we are witnesses of all things which he did both in the land of the Jews, and in Jerusalem; [g]whom they slew and hanged on a tree:

40 Him [h]God raised up the third day, and shewed him openly;

41 [i]Not to all the people, but unto witnesses chosen before of God, even to us, [k]who did eat and drink with him after he rose from the dead.

42 And [l]he commanded us to preach unto the people, and to testify [m]that it is he which was ordained of God to be the Judge [n]of quick and dead.

43 [o]To him give all the prophets witness, that through his name [p]whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins.

44 ¶ While Peter yet spake these words, [q]the Holy Ghost fell on all them which heard the word.

45 [r]And they of the circumcision which believed were astonished, as many as came with Peter, [s]because that on the Gentiles also was poured out the gift of the Holy Ghost.

46 For they heard them speak with tongues, and magnify God. Then answered Peter, 47 Can any man forbid water, that these should not be baptized, which have received the Holy Ghost [t]as well as we?

48 [u]And he commanded them to be baptized [x]in the name of the Lord. Then prayed they him to tarry certain days.

CHAPTER XI.

Peter maketh his defence. The disciples first called Christians at Antioch.

AND the apostles and brethren that were in Judæa heard that the Gentiles had also received the word of God.

2 And when Peter was come up to Jerusalem, [a]they that were of the circumcision contended with him,

3 Saying, [b]Thou wentest in to men uncircumcised, [c]and didst eat with them.

4 But Peter rehearsed the matter from the beginning, and expounded it [d] by order unto them, saying,

5 [e] I was in the city of Joppa praying: and in a trance I saw a vision, A certain vessel descend, as it had been a great sheet, let down from heaven by four corners; and it came even to me:

6 Upon the which when I had fastened mine eyes, I considered, and saw fourfooted beasts of the earth, and wild beasts, and creeping things, and fowls of the air.

7 And I heard a voice saying unto me, Arise, Peter; slay and eat.

8 But I said, Not so, Lord: for nothing common or unclean hath at any time entered into my mouth.

9 But the voice answered me again from heaven, What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common.

10 And this was done three times: and all were drawn up again into heaven.

11 And, behold, immediately there were three men already come unto the house where I was, sent from Cæsarea unto me.

12 And [f] the spirit bade me go with them, nothing doubting. Moreover [g] these six brethren accompanied me, and we entered into the man's house:

13 [h] And he shewed us how he had seen an angel in his house, which stood and said unto him, Send men to Joppa, and call for Simon, whose surname is Peter;

14 Who shall tell thee words, whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved.

15 And as I began to speak, the Holy Ghost fell on them, [i] as on us at the beginning.

16 Then remembered I the word of the Lord, how that he said, [k] John indeed baptized with water; but [l] ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost.

17 [m] Forasmuch then as God gave them the like gift as he did unto us, who believed on the Lord Jesus Christ; [n] what was I, that I could withstand God?

18 When they heard these things, they held their peace, and glorified God, saying, [o] Then hath God also to the Gentiles granted repentance unto life.

19 ¶ [p] Now they which were scattered abroad upon the persecution that arose about Stephen travelled as far as Phenice, and Cyprus, and Antioch, preaching the word to none but unto the Jews only.

20 And some of them were men of Cyprus and Cyrene, which, when they were come to Antioch, spake unto [q] the Grecians, preaching the Lord Jesus.

21 And [r] the hand of the Lord was with them: and a great number believed, and [s] turned unto the Lord.

22 ¶ Then tidings of these things came unto the ears of the church which was in Jerusalem: and they sent forth [t] Barnabas, that he should go as far as Antioch.

23 Who, when he came, and had seen the grace of God, was glad, and [u] exhorted them all, that with purpose of heart they would cleave unto the Lord.

24 For he was a good man, and [x] full of the Holy Ghost and of faith: [y] and much people was added unto the Lord.

25 Then departed Barnabas to [z] Tarsus, for to seek Saul:

26 And when he had found him, he brought him unto Antioch. And it came to pass, that a whole year they assembled themselves [2] with the church, and taught much people. And the disciples were called Christians first in Antioch.

27 ¶ And in these days came [a] prophets from Jerusalem unto Antioch.

28 And there stood up one of them named [b] Agabus, and signified by the spirit that there should be great dearth throughout all the world: which came to pass in the days of Claudius Cæsar.

29 Then the disciples, every man according to his ability, determined to send [c] relief unto the brethren which dwelt in Judæa:

30 [d] Which also they did, and sent it to the elders by the hands of Barnabas and Saul.

CHAPTER XII.

Herod persecuteth the Christians, killeth James, and imprisoneth Peter.

NOW about that time Herod the king [3] stretched forth his hands to vex certain of the church.

2 And he killed James [a] the brother of John with the sword.

3 And because he saw it pleased the Jews, he proceeded further to take Peter also. (Then were [b] the days of unleavened bread.)

4 And [c] when he had apprehended him, he put him in prison, and delivered him to four quaternions of soldiers to keep him; intending after Easter to bring him forth to the people.

5 Peter therefore was kept in prison: but [4] prayer was made without ceasing of the church unto God for him.

6 And when Herod would have brought him forth, the same night Peter was sleeping between two soldiers, bound with two chains: and the keepers before the door kept the prison.

7 And, behold, [d] the angel of the Lord came upon him, and a light shined in the prison: and he smote Peter on the side, and raised him up, saying, Arise up quickly. And his chains fell off from his hands.

8 And the angel said unto him, Gird thyself, and bind on thy sandals. And so he did. And he saith unto him Cast thy garment about thee, and follow me.

9 And he went out, and followed him; and [e] wist not that it was true which was done by the angel; but thought [f] he saw a vision.

10 When they were past the first and the second ward, they came unto the iron gate that leadeth unto the city; [g] which opened to them of his own accord: and they went out, and passed on through one street; and forthwith the angel departed from him.

11 And when Peter was come to himself, he said, Now I know of a surety, that [h] the Lord hath sent his angel, and [i] hath delivered me out of the hand of Herod, and from all the expectation of the people of the Jews.

12 And when he had considered the thing, [k] he came to the house of Mary the mother of [l] John, whose surname was Mark; where many were gathered together [m] praying.

13 And as Peter knocked at the door of the gate, a damsel came [2] to hearken, named Rhoda.

14 And when she knew Peter's voice, she opened not the gate for gladness, but ran in, and told how Peter stood before the gate.

15 And they said unto her, Thou art mad. But she constantly affirmed that it was even so. Then said they, [n] It is his angel.

16 But Peter continued knocking: and when they had opened the door, and saw him, they were astonished.

17 But he, [o] beckoning unto them with the hand to hold their peace, declared unto them how the Lord had brought him out of the prison. And he said, Go shew these things unto James, and to the brethren. And he departed, and went into another place.

18 Now as soon as it was day, there was no small stir among the soldiers, what was become of Peter.

19 And when Herod had sought for him, and found him not, he examined the keepers, and commanded that they should be put to death. And he went down from Judæa to Cæsarea, and there abode.

20 ¶ And Herod [3] was highly displeased with them of Tyre and Sidon: but they came with one accord to him, and, having made Blastus [4] the king's chamberlain their friend, desired peace; because [p] their country was nourished by the king's country.

21 And upon a set day Herod, arrayed in royal apparel, sat upon his throne, and made an oration unto them.

22 And the people gave a shout, saying, It is the voice of a god, and not of a man.

23 And immediately the angel of the Lord [q] smote him, because [r] he gave not God the glory: and he was eaten of worms, and gave up the ghost.

24 ¶ But [s] the word of God grew and multiplied.

25 And Barnabas and Saul returned from Jerusalem, when they had fulfilled their [5] ministry, and [t] took with them [u] John, whose surname was Mark.

CHAPTER XIII.

Paul and Barnabas chosen to go to the Gentiles: Paul preacheth at Antioch, that Jesus is Christ.

NOW there were [a] in the church that was at Antioch certain prophets and teachers; as [b] Barnabas, and Simeon that was called Niger, and [c] Lucius of Cyrene, and Manaen, [2] which had been brought up with Herod the tetrarch, and Saul.

2 As they ministered to the Lord, and fasted, the Holy Ghost said, [d] Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work [e] whereunto I have called them.

3 And [f] when they had fasted and prayed, and laid their hands on them, they sent them away.

4 ¶ So they, being sent forth by the Holy Ghost, departed unto Seleucia; and from thence they sailed to [g] Cyprus.

5 And when they were at Salamis, [h] they preached the word of God in the synagogues of the Jews: and they had also [i] John to their minister.

6 And when they had gone through the isle unto Paphos, they found [k] a certain sorcerer, a false prophet, a Jew, whose name was Bar-jesus:

7 Which was with the deputy of the country. Sergius Paulus, a prudent man, who called for Barnabas and Saul, and desired to hear the word of God.

8 But [l] Elymas the sorcerer (for so is his name by interpretation) withstood them, seeking to turn away the deputy from the faith.

9 Then Saul, (who also is called Paul,) [m] filled with the Holy Ghost, set his eyes on him,

10 And said, O full of all subtilty and all mischief, [n] thou child of the devil, thou enemy of all righteousness, wilt thou not cease to pervert the right ways of the Lord?

11 And now, behold, [o] the hand of the Lord is upon thee, and thou shalt be blind, not seeing the sun for a season. And immediately there fell on him a mist and a darkness; and he went about seeking some to lead him by the hand.

12 Then the deputy, when he saw what was done, believed, being astonished at the doctrine of the Lord.

13 Now when Paul and his company loosed from Paphos, they came to Perga in Pamphylia: and [p] John departing from them returned to Jerusalem.

14 ¶ But when they departed from Perga, they came to Antioch in Pisidia, and [q] went into the synagogue on the sabbath day, and sat down.

15 And [r] after the reading of the law and the prophets the rulers of the synagogue sent unto them, saying, Ye men and brethren, if ye have [s] any word of exhortation for the people, say on.

16 Then Paul stood up, and [t] beckoning with his hand said, Men of Israel, and [u] ye that fear God, give audience.

17 The God of this people of Israel [x] chose our fathers, and exalted the people [y] when they dwelt as strangers in the land of Egypt, [z] and with an high arm brought he them out of it.

18 And [a] about the time of forty years [2] suffered he their manners in the wilderness.

19 And when [b] he had destroyed seven nations in the land of Chanaan, [c] he divided their land to them by lot.

20 And after that [d] he gave unto them judges about the space of four hundred and fifty years, [e] until Samuel the prophet.

21 [f] And afterward they desired a king: and God gave unto them Saul the son of Cis, a man of the tribe of Benjamin, by the space of forty years.

22 And [g] when he had removed him, [h] he raised up unto them David to be their king; to whom also he gave testimony, and said, [i] I have found David the son of Jesse, [k] a man after mine own heart, which shall fulfil all my will.

23 [l] Of this man's seed hath God according [m] to his promise raised unto Israel [n] a Saviour, Jesus:

24 [o] When John had first preached before his coming the baptism of repentance to all the people of Israel.

25 And as John fulfilled his course, he said, [p] Whom think ye that I am? I am not he. But, behold, there cometh one after me, whose shoes of his feet I am not worthy to loose.

26 Men and brethren, children of the stock of Abraham, and whosoever among you feareth God, [q] to you is the word of this salvation sent.

27 For they that dwell at Jerusalem, and their rulers, [r] because they knew him not, nor yet the voices of the prophets [s] which are read every sabbath day, [t] they have fulfilled them in condemning him.

28 [u] And though they found no cause of death in him, [x] yet desired they Pilate that he should be slain.

29 [y] And when they had fulfilled all that was written of him, [z] they took him down from the tree, and laid him in a sepulchre.

30 [a] But God raised him from the dead:

31 And [b] he was seen many days of them which came up with him [c] from Galilee to Jerusalem, [d] who are his witnesses unto the people.

32 And we declare unto you glad tidings, how that [e] the promise which was made unto the fathers,

33 God hath fulfilled the same unto us their children, in that he hath raised up Jesus again; as it is also written in the second psalm, [f] Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee.

34 And as concerning that he raised him up from the dead, now no more to return to corruption, he said on this wise, [g] I will give you the sure [2] mercies of David.

35 Wherefore he saith also in another psalm, [h] Thou shalt not suffer thine Holy One to see corruption.

36 For David, [3] after he had served his own generation by the will of God, [i] fell on sleep, and was laid unto his fathers, and saw corruption:

37 But he, whom God raised again, saw no corruption.

38 ¶ Be it known unto you therefore, men and brethren, that [k] through this man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins:

39 And [l] by him all that believe are justified from all things, from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses.

40 Beware therefore, lest that come upon you, which is spoken of in [m] the prophets;

41 Behold, ye despisers, and wonder, and perish: for I work a work in your days, a work which ye shall in no wise believe, though a man declare it unto you.

42 And when the Jews were gone out of the synagogue, the Gentiles besought that these words might be preached to them [4] the next sabbath.

43 Now when the congregation was broken up, many of the Jews and religious proselytes followed Paul and Barnabas: who, speaking to them, [n] persuaded them to continue in [o] the grace of God.

44 ¶ And the next sabbath day came almost the whole city together to hear the word of God.

45 But when the Jews saw the multitudes, they were filled with envy, and [p] spake against those things which were spoken by Paul, contradicting and blaspheming.

46 Then Paul and Barnabas waxed bold, and said, [q] It was necessary that the word of God should first have been spoken to you: but [r] seeing ye put it from you, and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, [s] we turn to the Gentiles.

47 For so hath the Lord commanded us, saying, [t] I have set thee to be a light of the Gentiles, that thou shouldest be for salvation unto the ends of the earth.

48 And when the Gentiles heard this, they were glad, and glorified the word of the Lord: [u] and as many as were ordained to eternal life believed.

49 And the word of the Lord was published throughout all the region.

50 But the Jews stirred up the devout and honourable women, and the chief men of the city, and [x] raised persecution against Paul and Barnabas, and expelled them out of their coasts.

51 [y] But they shook off the dust of their feet against them, and came unto Iconium.

52 And the disciples [z] were filled with joy, and with the Holy Ghost.

CHAPTER XIV.

Paul and Barnabas persecuted from Iconium, and pass through divers churches.

AND it came to pass in Iconium, that they went both together into the synagogue of the Jews, and so spake, that a great multitude both of the Jews and also of the Greeks believed.

2 But the unbelieving Jews stirred up the Gentiles, and made their minds evil affected against the brethren.

3 Long time therefore abode they speaking boldly in the Lord, [a] which gave testimony unto the word of his grace, and granted signs and wonders to be done by their hands.

4 But the multitude of the city was divided: and part held with the Jews, and part with the [b] apostles.

5 And when there was an assault made both of the Gentiles, and also of the Jews with their rulers, [c] to use them despitefully, and to stone them,

6 They were ware of it, and [d] fled unto Lystra and Derbe, cities of Lycaonia, and unto the region that lieth round about:

7 And there they preached the gospel.

8 ¶ [e] And there sat a certain man at Lystra, impotent in his feet, being a cripple from his mother's womb, who never had walked:

9 The same heard Paul speak: who stedfastly beholding him, and [f] perceiving that he had faith to be healed,

10 Said with a loud voice, [g] Stand upright on thy feet. And he leaped and walked.

11 And when the people saw what Paul had done, they lifted up their voices, saying in the speech of Lycaonia, [h] The gods are come down to us in the likeness of men.

12 And they called Barnabas, Jupiter; and Paul, Mercurius, because he was the chief speaker.

13 Then the priest of Jupiter, which was before their city, brought oxen and garlands unto the gates, [i] and would have done sacrifice with the people.

14 Which when the apostles, Barnabas and Paul, heard of, [k] they rent their clothes, and ran in among the people, crying out,

15 And saying, Sirs, [l] why do ye these things? [m] We also are men of like passions with you, and preach unto you that ye should turn from [n] these vanities [o] unto the living God, [p] which made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and all things that are therein:

16 [q] Who in times past suffered all nations to walk in their own ways.

17 [r] Nevertheless he left not himself without witness, in that he did good, and [s] gave us rain from heaven, and fruitful seasons, filling our hearts with food and gladness.

18 And with these sayings scarce restrained they the people, that they had not done sacrifice unto them.

19 ¶ [t] And there came thither certain Jews from Antioch and Iconium, who persuaded the people, [u] and, having stoned Paul, drew him out of the city, supposing he had been dead.

20 Howbeit, as the disciples stood round about him, he rose up, and came into the city: and the next day he departed with Barnabas to Derbe.

21 And when they had preached the gospel to that city, [x] and [2] had taught many, they returned again to Lystra, and to Iconium, and Antioch,

22 Confirming the souls of the disciples, and [y] exhorting them to continue in the faith, and that [z] we must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God.

23 And when they had [a] ordained them elders in every church, and had prayed with fasting, they commended them to the Lord, on whom they believed.

24 And after they had passed throughout Pisidia, they came to Pamphylia.

25 And when they had preached the word in Perga, they went down into Attalia:

26 And thence sailed to Antioch, [b] from whence they had been [c] recommended to the grace of God for the work which they fulfilled.

27 And when they were come, and had gathered the church together, [d] they rehearsed all that God had done with them, and how he had [e] opened the door of faith unto the Gentiles.

28 And there they abode long time with the disciples.

CHAPTER XV.

Dissension touching circumcision, about which the apostles consult, sending letters.

AND [a] certain men which came down from Judæa taught the brethren, and said, [b] Except ye be circumcised [c] after the manner of Moses, ye cannot be saved.

2 When therefore Paul and Barnabas had no small dissension and disputation with them, they determined that [d] Paul and Barnabas, and certain other of them, should go up to Jerusalem unto the apostles and elders about this question.

3 And [e] being brought on their way by the church, they passed through Phenice and Samaria, [f] declaring the conversion of the Gentiles: and they caused great joy unto all the brethren.

4 And when they were come to Jerusalem, they were received of the church, and of the apostles and elders, and [g] they declared all things that God had done with them.

5 But there [2] rose up certain of the sect of the Pharisees which believed, saying, [h] That it was needful to circumcise them, and to command them to keep the law of Moses.

6 ¶ And the apostles and elders came together for to consider of this matter.

7 And when there had been much disputing, Peter rose up, and said unto them, [i] Men and brethren, ye know how that a good while ago God made choice among us, that the Gentiles by my mouth should hear the word of the gospel, and believe.

8 And God, [k] which knoweth the hearts, bare them witness, [l] giving them the Holy Ghost, even as he did unto us;

9 [m] And put no difference between us and them, [n] purifying their hearts by faith.

10 Now therefore why tempt ye God, [o] to put a yoke upon the neck of the disciples, which neither our fathers nor we were able to bear?

11 But [p] we believe that through the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ we shall be saved, even as they.

12 ¶ Then all the multitude kept silence, and gave audience to Barnabas and Paul, declaring what miracles and wonders God had [q] wrought among the Gentiles by them.

13 ¶ And after they had held their peace, [r] James answered, saying, Men and brethren, hearken unto me:

14 [s] Simeon hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for his name.

15 And to this agree the words of the prophets; as it is written,

16 [t] After this I will return, and will build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down; and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up:

17 That the residue of men might seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles, upon whom my name is called, saith the Lord, who doeth all these things.

18 Known unto God are all his works from the beginning of the world.

19 Wherefore [u] my sentence is, that we trouble not them, which from among the Gentiles [x] are turned to God:

20 But that we write unto them, that they abstain [y] from pollutions of idols, and [z] from fornication, and from things strangled, [a] and from blood.

21 For Moses of old time hath in every city them that preach him, [b] being read in the synagogues every sabbath day.

22 Then pleased it the apostles and elders, with the whole church, to send chosen men of their own company to Antioch with Paul and Barnabas; namely, Judas surnamed [c] Barsabas, and Silas, chief men among the brethren:

23 And they wrote letters by them after this manner; The apostles and elders and brethren send greeting unto the brethren which are of the Gentiles in Antioch and Syria and Cilicia:

24 Forasmuch as we have heard, that [d] certain which went out from us have troubled you with words, subverting your souls, saying, Ye must be circumcised, and keep the law: to whom we gave no such commandment:

25 It seemed good unto us, being assembled with one accord, to send chosen men unto you with our beloved Barnabas and Paul,

26 [e] Men that have hazarded their lives for the name of our Lord Jesus Christ.

27 We have sent therefore Judas and Silas, who shall also tell you the same things by [2] mouth.

28 For it seemed good to the Holy Ghost, and to us, to lay upon you no greater burden than these necessary things;

29 [f] That ye abstain from meats offered to idols, and [g] from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication: from which if ye keep yourselves, ye shall do well. Fare ye well.

30 So when they were dismissed, they came to Antioch: and when they had gathered the multitude together, they delivered the epistle:

31 Which when they had read, they rejoiced for the [3] consolation.

32 And Judas and Silas, being prophets also themselves, [h] exhorted the brethren with many words, and confirmed them.

33 And after they had tarried there a space, they were let [i] go in peace from the brethren unto the apostles.

34 Notwithstanding it pleased Silas to abide there still.

35 [k] Paul also and Barnabas continued in Antioch, teaching and preaching the word of the Lord, with many others also.

36 ¶ And some days after Paul said unto Barnabas, Let us go again and visit our brethren [l] in every city where we have preached the word of the Lord, and see how they do.

37 And Barnabas determined to take with them [m] John, whose surname was Mark.

38 But Paul thought not good to take him with them, [n] who departed from them from Pamphylia, and went not with them to the work.

39 And the contention was so sharp between them, that they departed asunder one from the other: and so Barnabas took Mark, and sailed unto Cyprus;

40 And Paul chose Silas, and departed, [o] being recommended by the brethren unto the grace of God.

41 And he went through Syria and Cilicia, [p] confirming the churches.

CHAPTER XVI.

Paul circumciseth Timothy, converteth Lydia, and casteth out a spirit of divination.

THEN came he to [a] Derbe and Lystra: and, behold, a certain disciple was there, [b] named Timotheus, [c] the son of a certain woman, which was a Jewess, and believed; but his father was a Greek:

2 Which [d] was well reported of by the brethren that were at Lystra and Iconium.

3 Him would Paul have to go forth with him; and [e] took and circumcised him because of the Jews which were in those quarters: for they knew all that his father was a Greek.

4 And as they went through the cities, they delivered them the decrees for to keep, [f] that were ordained of the apostles and elders which were at Jerusalem.

5 And [g] so were the churches established in the faith, and increased in number daily.

6 Now when they had gone throughout Phrygia and the region of Galatia, and were forbidden of the Holy Ghost to preach the word in Asia,

7 After they were come to Mysia, they assayed to go into Bithynia: but the Spirit suffered them not.

8 And they passing by Mysia [h] came down to Troas.

9 And a vision appeared to Paul in the night; There stood a [i] man of Macedonia, and prayed him, saying, Come over into Macedonia, and help us.

10 And after he had seen the vision, immediately we endeavoured to go [k] into Macedonia, assuredly gathering that the Lord had called us for to preach the gospel unto them.

11 Therefore loosing from Troas, we came with a straight course to Samothracia, and the next day to Neapolis;

12 And from thence to [l] Philippi, which is [2] the chief city of that part of Macedonia, and a colony: and we were in that city abiding certain days.

13 And on the [3] sabbath we went out of the city by a river side, where prayer was wont to be made: and we sat down, and spake unto the women which resorted thither.

14 ¶ And a certain woman named Lydia, a seller of purple, of the city of Thyatira, which worshipped God, heard us: whose [m] heart the Lord opened, that she attended unto the things which were spoken of Paul.

15 And when she was baptized, and her household, she besought us, saying, If ye have judged me to be faithful to the Lord, come into my house, and abide there. And [n] she constrained us.

16 ¶ And it came to pass, as we went to prayer, a certain damsel [o] possessed with a spirit [4] of divination met us, which brought her masters [p] much gain by soothsaying:

17 The same followed Paul and us, and cried, saying, These men are the servants of the most high God, which shew unto us the way of salvation.

18 And this did she many days. But Paul, [q] being grieved, turned and said to the spirit, I command thee in the name of Jesus Christ to come out of her. [r] And he came out the same hour.

19 ¶ And [s] when her masters saw that the hope of their gains was gone, [t] they caught Paul and Silas, and [u] drew them into the [5] marketplace unto the rulers,

20 And brought them to the magistrates, saying, These men, being Jews, [x] do exceedingly trouble our city,

21 And teach customs, which are not lawful for us to receive, neither to observe, being Romans.

22 And the multitude rose up together against them: and the magistrates rent off their clothes, [y] and commanded to beat them.

23 And when they had laid many stripes upon them, they cast them into prison, charging the jailor to keep them safely:

24 Who, having received such a charge, thrust them into the inner prison, and made their feet fast in the stocks.

25 ¶ And at midnight Paul and Silas prayed, and sang praises unto God: and the prisoners heard them.

26 [z] And suddenly there was a great earthquake, so that the foundations of the prison were shaken: and immediately [a] all the doors were opened, and every one's bands were loosed.

27 And the keeper of the prison awaking out of his sleep, and seeing the prison doors open, he drew out his sword, and would have killed himself, supposing that the prisoners had been fled.

28 But Paul cried with a loud voice, saying, Do thyself no harm: for we are all here.

29 Then he called for a light, and sprang in, and came trembling, and fell down before Paul and Silas, 30 And brought them out, and said, [b] Sirs, what must I do to be saved?

31 And they said, [c] Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house.

32 And they spake unto him the word of the Lord, and to all that were in his house.

33 And he took them the same hour of the night, and washed their stripes; and was baptized, he and all his, straightway.

34 And when he had brought them into his house, [d] he set meat before them, and rejoiced, believing in God with all his house.

35 And when it was day, the magistrates sent the serjeants, saying, Let those men go.

36 And the keeper of the prison told this saying to Paul, The magistrates have sent to let you go: now therefore depart, and go in peace.

37 But Paul said unto them, They have beaten us openly uncondemned, [e] being Romans, and have cast us into prison; and now do they thrust us out privily? nay verily: but let them come themselves and fetch us out.

38 And the serjeants told these words unto the magistrates: and they feared, when they heard that they were Romans.

39 And they came and besought them, and brought them out, and [f] desired them to depart out of the city.

40 And they went out of the prison, [g] and entered into the house of Lydia: and when they had seen the brethren, they comforted them, and departed.

CHAPTER XVII.

Paul persecuted at Thessalonica, sent to Berea, and afterward preacheth at Athens.

NOW when they had passed through Amphipolis and Apollonia, they came to Thessalonica, where was a synagogue of the Jews:

2 And Paul, as his manner was, [a] went in unto them, and three sabbath days reasoned with them out of the scriptures,

3 Opening and alleging, [b] that Christ must needs have suffered, and risen again from the dead; and that this Jesus, [2] whom I preach unto you, is Christ.

4 [c] And some of them believed, and consorted with Paul and [d] Silas; and of the devout Greeks a great multitude, and of the chief women not a few.

5 ¶ But the Jews which believed not, moved with envy, took unto them certain lewd fellows of the baser sort, and gathered a company, and set all the city on an uproar, and assaulted the house of [e] Jason, and sought to bring them out to the people.

6 And when they found them not, they drew Jason and certain brethren unto the rulers of the city, crying, [f] These that have turned the world upside down are come hither also;

7 Whom Jason hath received: and these all do contrary to the decrees of Cæsar, [g] saying that there is another king, one Jesus.

8 And they troubled the people and the rulers of the city, when they heard these things.

9 And when they had taken security of Jason, and of the other, they let them go.

10 ¶ And [h] the brethren immediately sent away Paul and Silas by night unto Berea: who coming thither went into the synagogue of the Jews.

11 These were more noble than those in Thessalonica, in that they received the word with all readiness of mind, and [i] searched the scriptures daily, whether those things were so.

12 Therefore many of them believed; also of honourable women which were Greeks, and of men, not a few.

13 But when the Jews of Thessalonica had knowledge that the word of God was preached of Paul at Berea, they came thither also, and stirred up the people.

14 [k] And then immediately the brethren sent away Paul to go as it were to the sea: but Silas and Timotheus abode there still.

15 And they that conducted Paul brought him unto Athens: and [l] receiving a commandment unto Silas and Timotheus for to come to him with all speed, they departed.

16 ¶ Now while Paul waited for them at Athens, [m] his spirit was stirred in him, when he saw the city [2] wholly given to idolatry.

17 Therefore disputed he in the synagogue with the Jews, and with the devout persons, and in the market daily with them that met with him:

18 Then certain philosophers of the Epicureans, and of the Stoicks, encountered him. And some said, What will this [3] babbler say? other some, He seemeth to be a setter forth of strange gods: because he preached unto them Jesus, and the resurrection.

19 And they took him, and brought him unto [4] Areopagus, saying, May we know what this new doctrine, whereof thou speakest, is?

20 For thou bringest certain strange things to our ears: we would know therefore what these things mean.

21 (For all the Athenians and strangers which were there spent their time in nothing else, but either to tell, or to hear some new thing.)

22 ¶ Then Paul stood in the midst of [2] Mars' hill, and said, Ye men of Athens, I perceive that in all things ye are too superstitious.

23 For as I passed by, and beheld your [3] devotions, I found an altar with this inscription, TO THE UNKNOWN GOD. Whom therefore ye ignorantly worship, him declare I unto you.

24 [n] God that made the world and all things therein, seeing that he is [o] Lord of heaven and earth, [p] dwelleth not in temples made with hands;

25 Neither is worshipped with men's hands, [q] as though he needed any thing, seeing [r] he giveth to all life, and breath, and all things;

26 And hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed, and [s] the bounds of their habitation;

27 [t] That they should seek the Lord, if haply they might feel after him, and find him, [u] though he be not far from every one of us:

28 For [x] in him we live, and move, and have our being; [y] as certain also of your own poets have said, For we are also his offspring.

29 Forasmuch then as we are the offspring of God, [z] we ought not to think that the Godhead is like unto gold, or silver, or stone, graven by art and man's device.

30 And [a] the times of this ignorance God winked at; but [b] now commandeth all men every where to repent:

31 Because he hath appointed a day, in the which [c] he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath [1] given assurance unto all men, in that [d] he hath raised him from the dead.

32 ¶ And when they heard of the resurrection of the dead, some mocked: and others said, We will hear thee again of this matter.

33 So Paul departed from among them.

34 Howbeit certain men clave unto him, and believed: among the which was Dionysius the Areopagite, and a woman named Damaris, and others with them.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Paul laboureth and preacheth at Corinth, is accused before Gallio, but dismissed.

AFTER these things Paul departed from Athens, and came to Corinth;

2 And found a certain Jew named [a] Aquila, born in Pontus, lately come from Italy, with his wife Priscilla; (because that Claudius had commanded all Jews to depart from Rome:) and came unto them.

3 And because he was of the same craft, he abode with them, [b] and wrought: for by their occupation they were tentmakers.

4 [c] And he reasoned in the synagogue every sabbath, and persuaded the Jews and the Greeks.

5 And [d] when Silas and Timotheus were come from Macedonia, Paul was [e] pressed in the spirit, and testified to the Jews that Jesus [2] was Christ.

6 And [f] when they opposed themselves, and blasphemed, [g] he shook his raiment, and said unto them, [h] Your blood be upon your own heads; [i] I am clean: [k] from henceforth I will go unto the Gentiles.

7 ¶ And he departed thence, and entered into a certain man's house, named Justus, one that worshipped God, whose house joined hard to the synagogue.

8 [l] And Crispus, the chief ruler of the synagogue, believed on the Lord with all his house; and many of the Corinthians hearing believed, and were baptized.

9 Then [m] spake the Lord to Paul in the night by a vision, Be not afraid, but speak, and hold not thy peace:

10 [n] For I am with thee, and no man shall set on thee to hurt thee: for I have much people in this city.

11 And he [3] continued there a year and six months, teaching the word of God among them.

12 ¶ And when Gallio was the deputy of Achaia, the Jews made insurrection with one accord against Paul, and brought him to the judgment seat, 13 Saying, This fellow persuadeth men to worship God contrary to the law.

14 And when Paul was now about to open his mouth, Gallio said unto the Jews, [o] If it were a matter of wrong or wicked lewdness, O ye Jews, reason would that I should bear with you:

15 But if it be a question of words and names, and of your law, look ye to it; for I will be no judge of such matters.

16 And he drave them from the judgment seat.

17 Then all the Greeks took [p] Sosthenes, the chief ruler of the synagogue, and beat him before the judgment seat. And Gallio cared for none of those things.

18 ¶ And Paul after this tarried there yet a good while, and then took his leave of the brethren, and sailed thence into Syria, and with him Priscilla and Aquila; having [q] shorn his head in [r] Cenchrea: for he had a vow.

19 And he came to Ephesus, and left them there: but he himself entered into the synagogue, and reasoned with the Jews.

20 When they desired him to tarry longer time with them, he consented not;

21 But bade them farewell, saying, [s] I must by all means keep this feast that cometh in Jerusalem: but I will return again unto you, [t] if God will. And he sailed from Ephesus.

22 And when he had landed at Cæsarea, and gone up, and saluted the church, he went down to Antioch.

23 And after he had spent some time there, he departed, and went over all the country of [u] Galatia and Phrygia in order, [x] strengthening all the disciples.

24 ¶ [y] And a certain Jew named Apollos, born at Alexandria, an eloquent man, and mighty in the scriptures, came to Ephesus.

25 This man was instructed in the way of the Lord; and being [z] fervent in the spirit, he spake and taught diligently the things of the Lord, [a] knowing only the baptism of John.

26 And he began to speak boldly in the synagogue: whom when Aquila and Priscilla had heard, they took him unto them, and expounded unto him the way of God more perfectly.

27 And when he was disposed to pass into Achaia, the brethren wrote, exhorting the disciples to receive him: who, when he was come, [b] helped them much which had believed through grace:

28 For he mightily convinced the Jews, and that publickly, [c] shewing by the scriptures that Jesus [2] was Christ.

CHAPTER XIX.

The Holy Ghost given by Paul's hands, whose doctrine the Jews blaspheme.

AND it came to pass, that, while [a] Apollos was at Corinth, Paul having passed through the upper coasts came to Ephesus: and finding certain disciples,

2 He said unto them, Have ye received the Holy Ghost since ye believed? And they said unto him, [b] We have not so much as heard whether there be any Holy Ghost.

3 And he said unto them, Unto what then were ye baptized? And they said, [c] Unto John's baptism.

4 Then said Paul, [d] John verily baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying unto the people, that they should believe on him which should come after him, that is, on Christ Jesus.

5 When they heard this, they were baptized [e] in the name of the Lord Jesus.

6 And when Paul had [f] laid his hands upon them, the Holy Ghost came on them; and [g] they spake with tongues, and prophesied.

7 And all the men were about twelve.

8 [h] And he went into the synagogue, and spake boldly for the space of three months, disputing and persuading the things [i] concerning the kingdom of God.

9 But [k] when divers were hardened, and believed not, but spake evil [l] of that way before the multitude, he departed from them, and separated the disciples, disputing daily in the school of one Tyrannus.

10 And [m] this continued by the space of two years; so that all they which dwelt in Asia heard the word of the Lord Jesus, both Jews and Greeks.

11 And [n] God wrought special miracles by the hands of Paul:

12 [o] So that from his body were brought unto the sick handkerchiefs or aprons, and the diseases departed from them, and the evil spirits went out of them.

13 ¶ [p] Then certain of the vagabond Jews, exorcists, [q] took upon them to call over them which had evil spirits the name of the Lord Jesus, saying, We adjure you by Jesus whom Paul preacheth.

14 And there were seven sons of one Sceva, a Jew, and chief of the priests, which did so.

15 And the evil spirit answered and said, Jesus I know, and Paul I know; but who are ye?

16 And the man in whom the evil spirit was leaped on them, and overcame them, and prevailed against them, so that they fled out of that house naked and wounded.

17 And this was known to all the Jews and Greeks also dwelling at Ephesus; and [r] fear fell on them all, and the name of the Lord Jesus was magnified.

18 And many that believed came, and [s] confessed, and shewed their deeds.

19 Many of them also which used curious arts brought their books together, and burned them before all men: and they counted the price of them, and found it fifty thousand pieces of silver.

20 [t] So mightily grew the word of God and prevailed.

21 ¶ [u] After these things were ended, Paul [x] purposed in the spirit, when he had passed through Macedonia and Achaia, to go to Jerusalem, saying, After I have been there, [y] I must also see Rome.

22 So he sent into Macedonia two of [z] them that ministered unto him, Timotheus and [a] Erastus; but he himself stayed in Asia for a season.

23 And [b] the same time there arose no small stir about [c] that way.

24 For a certain man named Demetrius, a silversmith, which made silver shrines for Diana, brought [d] no small gain unto the craftsmen;

25 Whom he called together with the workmen of like occupation, and said, Sirs, ye know that by this craft we have our wealth.

26 Moreover ye see and hear, that not alone at Ephesus, but almost throughout all Asia, this Paul hath persuaded and turned away much people, saying that [e] they be no gods, which are made with hands:

27 So that not only this our craft is in danger to be set at nought; but also that the temple of the great goddess Diana should be despised, and her magnificence should be destroyed, whom all Asia and the world worshippeth.

28 And when they heard these sayings, they were full of wrath, and cried out, saying, Great is Diana of the Ephesians.

29 And the whole city was filled with confusion: and having caught [f] Gaius and [g] Aristarchus, men of Macedonia, Paul's companions in travel, they rushed with one accord into the theatre.

30 And when Paul would have entered in unto the people, the disciples suffered him not.

31 And certain of the chief of Asia, which were his friends, sent unto him, desiring him that he would not adventure himself into the theatre.

32 Some therefore cried one thing, and some another: for the assembly was confused; and the more part knew not wherefore they were come together.

33 And they drew Alexander out of the multitude, the Jews putting him forward. And [h] Alexander [i] beckoned with the hand, and would have made his defence unto the people.

34 But when they knew that he was a Jew, all with one voice about the space of two hours cried out, Great is Diana of the Ephesians.

35 And when the townclerk had appeased the people, he said, Ye men of Ephesus, what man is there that knoweth not how that the city of the Ephesians is [2] a worshipper of the great goddess Diana, and of the image which fell down from Jupiter?

36 Seeing then that these things cannot be spoken against, ye ought to be quiet, and to do nothing rashly.

37 For ye have brought hither these men, which are neither robbers of churches, nor yet blasphemers of your goddess.

38 Wherefore if Demetrius, and the craftsmen which are with him, have a matter against any man, [3] the law is open, and there are deputies: let them implead one another.

39 But if ye enquire any thing concerning other matters, it shall be determined in a [4] lawful assembly.

40 For we are in danger to be called in question for this day's uproar, there being no cause whereby we may give an account of this concourse.

41 And when he had thus spoken, he dismissed the assembly.

CHAPTER XX.

Paul celebrateth the Lord's supper, and preacheth, and Eutychus falleth dead.

AND after the uproar was ceased, Paul called unto him the disciples, and embraced them, and [a] departed for to go into Macedonia.

2 And when he had gone over those parts, and had given them much exhortation, he came into Greece,

3 And there abode three months. And [b] when the Jews laid wait for him, as he was about to sail into Syria, he purposed to return through Macedonia.

4 And there accompanied him into Asia Sopater of Berea; and of the Thessalonians, [c] Aristarchus and Secundus; and [d] Gaius of Derbe, and [e] Timotheus; and of Asia, [f] Tychicus and [g] Trophimus.

5 These going before tarried for us at Troas.

6 And we sailed away from Philippi after [h] the days of unleavened bread, and came unto them [i] to Troas in five days; where we abode seven days.

7 And upon [k] the first day of the week, when the disciples came together [l] to break bread, Paul preached unto them, ready to depart on the morrow; and continued his speech until midnight.

8 And there were many lights [m] in the upper chamber, where they were gathered together.

9 And there sat in a window a certain young man named Eutychus, being fallen into a deep sleep: and as Paul was long preaching, he sunk down with sleep, and fell down from the third loft, and was taken up dead.

10 And Paul went down, and [n] fell on him, and embracing him said, [o] Trouble not yourselves; for his life is in him.

11 When he therefore was come up again, and had broken bread, and eaten, and talked a long while, even till break of day, so he departed.

12 And they brought the young man alive, and were not a little comforted.

13 ¶ And we went before to ship, and sailed unto Assos, there intending to take in Paul: for so had he appointed, minding himself to go afoot.

14 And when he met with us at Assos, we took him in, and came to Mitylene.
15 And we sailed thence, and came the next day over against Chios; and the next day we arrived at Samos, and tarried at Trogyllium; and the next day we came to Miletus.
16 For Paul had determined to sail by Ephesus, because he would not spend the time in Asia: for [p] he hasted, if it were possible for him, [q] to be at Jerusalem [r] the day of Pentecost.
17 ¶ And from Miletus he sent to Ephesus, and called the elders of the church.
18 And when they were come to him, he said unto them, Ye know, [s] from the first day that I came into Asia, after what manner I have been with you at all seasons,
19 Serving the Lord with all humility of mind, and with many tears, and temptations, which befell me [t] by the lying in wait of the Jews:
20 And how [u] I kept back nothing that was profitable unto you, but have shewed you, and have taught you publickly, and from house to house,
21 [x] Testifying both to the Jews, and also to the Greeks, [y] repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ.
22 And now, behold, [z] I go bound in the spirit unto Jerusalem, not knowing the things that shall befall me there:
23 Save that [a] the Holy Ghost witnesseth in every city, saying that bonds and afflictions [2] abide me.
24 But [b] none of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself, [c] so that I might finish my course with joy, [d] and the ministry, [e] which I have received of the Lord Jesus, to testify the gospel of the grace of God.
25 And now, behold, [f] I know that ye all, among whom I have gone preaching the kingdom of God, shall see my face no more.
26 Wherefore I take you to record this day, that I am [g] pure from the blood of all men.
27 For [h] I have not shunned to declare unto you all [i] the counsel of God.
28 ¶ [k] Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over the which the Holy Ghost [l] hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, [m] which he hath purchased [n] with his own blood.
29 For I know this, that after my departing [o] shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock.
30 Also [p] of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them.
31 Therefore watch, and remember, that [q] by the space of three years I ceased not to warn every one night and day with tears.
32 And now, brethren, I commend you to God, and [r] to the word of his grace, which is able [s] to build you up, and to give you [t] an inheritance among all them which are sanctified.
33 [u] I have coveted no man's silver, or gold, or apparel.
34 Yea, ye yourselves know, [x] that these hands have ministered unto my necessities, and to them that were with me.
35 I have shewed you all things, [y] how that so labouring ye ought to support the weak, and to remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how he said, It is more blessed to give than to receive.
36 ¶ And when he had thus spoken, he [z] kneeled down, and prayed with them all.
37 And they all wept sore, and [a] fell on Paul's neck, and kissed him,
38 Sorrowing most of all for the words [b] which he spake, that they should see his face no more. And they accompanied him unto the ship.

CHAPTER XXI.

Paul goeth to Jerusalem, is apprehended and in great danger, but is rescued.

AND it came to pass, that after we were gotten from them, and had launched, we came with a straight course unto Coos, and the day following unto Rhodes, and from thence unto Patara:
2 And finding a ship sailing over unto Phenicia, we went aboard, and set forth.
3 Now when we had discovered Cyprus, we left it on the left hand, and sailed into Syria, and landed at Tyre: for there the ship was to unlade her burden.
4 And finding disciples, we tarried there seven days: [a] who said to Paul through the Spirit, that he should not go up to Jerusalem.
5 And when we had accomplished those days, we departed and went our way; and they all brought us on our way, with wives and children, till we were out of the city: and [b] we kneeled down on the shore, and prayed.
6 And when we had taken our leave one of another, we took ship; and they returned [c] home again.

7 And when we had finished our course from Tyre, we came to Ptolemais, and saluted the brethren, and abode with them one day.

8 And the next day we that were of Paul's company departed, and came unto Cæsarea: and we entered into the house of Philip [d] the evangelist, [e] which was one of the seven; and abode with him.

9 And the same man had four daughters, virgins, [f] which did prophesy.

10 And as we tarried there many days, there came down from Judæa a certain prophet, named [g] Agabus.

11 And when he was come unto us, he took Paul's girdle, and bound his own hands and feet, and said, Thus saith the Holy Ghost, [h] So shall the Jews at Jerusalem bind the man that owneth this girdle, and shall deliver him into the hands of the Gentiles.

12 And when we heard these things, both we, and they of that place, besought him not to go up to Jerusalem.

13 Then Paul answered, [i] What mean ye to weep and to break mine heart? for I am ready not to be bound only, but also to die at Jerusalem for the name of the Lord Jesus.

14 And when he would not be persuaded, we ceased, saying, [k] The will of the Lord be done.

15 And after those days we took up our carriages, and went up to Jerusalem.

16 There went with us also certain of the disciples of Cæsarea, and brought with them one Mnason of Cyprus, an old disciple, with whom we should lodge.

17 [l] And when we were come to Jerusalem, the brethren received us gladly.

18 And the day following Paul went in with us unto [m] James; and all the elders were present.

19 And when he had saluted them, [n] he declared particularly what things God had wrought among the Gentiles [o] by his ministry.

20 And when they heard it, they glorified the Lord, and said unto him, Thou seest, brother, how many thousands of Jews there are which believe; and they are all [p] zealous of the law:

21 And they are informed of thee, that thou teachest all the Jews which are among the Gentiles to forsake Moses, saying that they ought not to circumcise their children, neither to walk after the customs.

22 What is it therefore? the multitude must needs come together: for they will hear that thou art come.

23 Do therefore this that we say to thee: We have four men which have a vow on them;

24 Them take, and purify thyself with them, and be at charges with them, that they may [q] shave their heads: and all may know that those things, whereof they were informed concerning thee, are nothing; but that thou thyself also walkest orderly, and keepest the law.

25 As touching the Gentiles which believe, [r] we have written and concluded that they observe no such thing, save only that they keep themselves from things offered to idols, and from blood, and from strangled, and from fornication.

26 Then Paul took the men, and the next day purifying himself with them [s] entered into the temple, [t] to signify the accomplishment of the days of purification, until that an offering should be offered for every one of them.

27 And when the seven days were almost ended, [u] the Jews which were of Asia, when they saw him in the temple, stirred up all the people, and [x] laid hands on him,

28 Crying out, Men of Israel, help: This is the man, [y] that teacheth all men every where against the people, and the law, and this place: and further brought Greeks also into the temple, and hath polluted this holy place.

29 (For they had seen before with him in the city [z] Trophimus an Ephesian, whom they supposed that Paul had brought into the temple.)

30 And [a] all the city was moved, and the people ran together: and they took Paul, and drew him out of the temple: and forthwith the doors were shut.

31 And as they went about to kill him, tidings came unto the chief captain of the band, that all Jerusalem was in an uproar.

32 [b] Who immediately took soldiers and centurions, and ran down unto them: and when they saw the chief captain and the soldiers, they left beating of Paul.

33 Then the chief captain came near, and took him, and [c] commanded him to be bound with two chains; and demanded who he was, and what he had done.

34 And some cried one thing, some another, among the multitude: and when he could not know the certainty for the tumult, he commanded him to be carried into the castle.

35 And when he came upon the stairs, so it was, that he was borne of the soldiers for the violence of the people.

36 For the multitude of the people followed after, crying, [d] Away with him.

37 And as Paul was to be led into the castle, he said unto the chief captain, May I speak unto thee? Who said, Canst thou speak Greek?

38 [e] Art not thou that Egyptian, which before these days madest an uproar, and leddest out into the wilderness four thousand men that were murderers?

39 But Paul said, [f] I am a man which am a Jew of Tarsus, a city in Cilicia, a citizen of no mean city: and, I beseech thee, suffer me to speak unto the people.

40 And when he had given him licence, Paul stood on the stairs, and [g] beckoned with the hand unto the people. And when there was made a great silence, he spake unto them in the Hebrew tongue, saying,

CHAPTER XXII.

Paul telleth of his conversion; claiming the privilege of a Roman, he escapeth scourging.

MEN, [a] brethren, and fathers, hear ye my defence which I make now unto you.

2 (And when they heard that he spake in the Hebrew tongue to them, they kept the more silence: and he saith,)

3 [b] I am verily a man which am a Jew, born in Tarsus, a city in Cilicia, yet brought up in this city [c] at the feet of [d] Gamaliel, and taught [e] according to the perfect manner of the law of the fathers, and [f] was zealous toward God, [g] as ye all are this day.

4 [h] And I persecuted this way unto the death, binding and delivering into prisons both men and women.

5 As also the high priest doth bear me witness, and [i] all the estate of the elders: [k] from whom also I received letters unto the brethren, and went to Damascus, to bring them which were there bound unto Jerusalem, for to be punished.

6 And [l] it came to pass, that, as I made my journey, and was come nigh unto Damascus about noon, suddenly there shone from heaven a great light round about me.

7 And I fell unto the ground, and heard a voice saying unto me, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?

8 And I answered, Who art thou, Lord? And he said unto me, I am Jesus of Nazareth, whom thou persecutest.

9 And [m] they that were with me saw indeed the light, and were afraid; but they heard not the voice of him that spake to me.

10 And I said, What shall I do, Lord? And the Lord said unto me, Arise, and go into Damascus; and there it shall be told thee of all things which are appointed for thee to do.

11 And when I could not see for the glory of that light, being led by the hand of them that were with me, I came into Damascus.

12 And [n] one Ananias, a devout man according to the law, [o] having a good report of all the [p] Jews which dwelt there, 13 Came unto me, and stood, and said unto me, Brother Saul, receive thy sight. And the same hour I looked up upon him.

14 And he said, [q] The God of our fathers [r] hath chosen thee, that thou shouldest know his will, and [s] see [t] that Just One, and [u] shouldest hear the voice of his mouth.

15 [x] For thou shalt be his witness unto all men of [y] what thou hast seen and heard.

16 And now why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, [z] and wash away thy sins, [a] calling on the name of the Lord.

17 And [b] it came to pass, that, when I was come again to Jerusalem, even while I prayed in the temple, I was in a trance;

18 And [c] saw him saying unto me, [d] Make haste, and get thee quickly out of Jerusalem: for they will not receive thy testimony concerning me.

19 And I said, Lord, [e] they know that I imprisoned and [f] beat in every synagogue them that believed on thee:

20 [g] And when the blood of thy martyr Stephen was shed, I also was standing by, and [h] consenting unto his death, and kept the raiment of them that slew him.

21 And he said unto me, Depart: [i] for I will send thee far hence unto the Gentiles.

22 And they gave him audience unto this word, and then lifted up their voices, and said, [k] Away with such a fellow from the earth: for it is not fit that [l] he should live.

23 And as they cried out, and cast off their clothes, and threw dust into the air,

24 The chief captain commanded him to be brought into the castle, and bade that he should be examined by scourging; that he might know wherefore they cried so against him.

25 And as they bound him with thongs, Paul said unto the centurion that stood by, [m] Is it lawful for you to scourge a man that is a Roman, and uncondemned?

26 When the centurion heard that, he went and told the chief captain, saying, Take heed what thou doest: for this man is a Roman.

27 Then the chief captain came, and said unto him, Tell me, art thou a Roman? He said, Yea.

28 And the chief captain answered, With a great sum obtained I this freedom. And Paul said, But I was free born.

29 Then straightway they departed from him which should have [2] examined him: and the chief captain also was afraid, after he knew that he was a Roman, and because he had bound him.

30 On the morrow, because he would have known the certainty wherefore he was accused of the Jews, he loosed him from his bands, and commanded the chief priests and all their council to appear, and brought Paul down, and set him before them.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Dissension among Paul's accusers, and he is sent by the chief captain to Felix.

AND Paul, earnestly beholding the council, said, Men and brethren, [a] I have lived in all good conscience before God until this day.

2 And the high priest Ananias commanded them that stood by him [b] to smite him on the mouth.

3 Then said Paul unto him, God shall smite thee, thou whited wall: for sittest thou to judge me after the law, and [c] commandest me to be smitten contrary to the law?

4 And they that stood by said, Revilest thou God's high priest?

5 Then said Paul, [d] I wist not, brethren, that he was the high priest: for it is written, [e] Thou shalt not speak evil of the ruler of thy people.

6 But when Paul perceived that the one part were Sadducees, and the other Pharisees, he cried out in the council, Men and brethren, [f] I am a Pharisee, the son of a Pharisee: [g] of the hope and resurrection of the dead I am called in question.

7 And when he had so said, there arose a dissension between the Pharisees and the Sadducees: and the multitude was divided.

8 [h] For the Sadducees say that there is no resurrection, neither angel, nor spirit: but the Pharisees confess both.

9 And there arose a great cry: and the scribes that were of the Pharisees' part arose, and strove, saying, [i] We find no evil in this man: but [k] if a spirit or an angel hath spoken to him, [l] let us not fight against God.

10 And when there arose a great dissension, the chief captain, fearing lest Paul should have been pulled in pieces of them, commanded the soldiers to go down, and to take him by force from among them, and to bring him into the castle.

11 And [m] the night following the Lord stood by him, and said, Be of good cheer, Paul: for as thou hast testified of me in Jerusalem, so must thou bear witness also at Rome.

12 And when it was day, [n] certain of the Jews banded together, and bound themselves [2] under a curse, saying that they would neither eat nor drink till they had killed Paul.

13 And they were more than forty which had made this conspiracy.

14 And they came to the chief priests and elders, and said, We have bound ourselves under a great curse, that we will eat nothing until we have slain Paul.

15 Now therefore ye with the council signify to the chief captain that he bring him down unto you to morrow, as though ye would enquire something more perfectly concerning him: and we, or ever he come near, are ready to kill him.

16 And when Paul's sister's son heard of their lying in wait, he went and entered into the castle, and told Paul.

17 Then Paul called one of the centurions unto him, and said, Bring this young man unto the chief captain: for he hath a certain thing to tell him.

18 So he took him, and brought him to the chief captain, and said, Paul the prisoner called me unto him, and prayed me to bring this young man unto thee, who hath something to say unto thee.

19 Then the chief captain took him by the hand, and went with him aside privately, and asked him, What is that thou hast to tell me?

20 And he said, [o] The Jews have agreed to desire thee that thou wouldest bring down Paul to morrow into the council, as though they would enquire somewhat of him more perfectly.

21 But do not thou yield unto them: for there lie in wait for him of them more than forty men, which have bound themselves with an oath, that they will neither eat nor drink till they have killed him: and now are they ready, looking for a promise from thee.

22 So the chief captain then let the young man depart, and charged him, See thou tell no man that thou hast shewed these things to me.

23 And he called unto him two centurions, saying, Make ready two hundred soldiers to go to Cæsarea, and horsemen threescore and ten, and spearmen two hundred, at the third hour of the night;

24 And provide them beasts, that they may set Paul on, and bring him safe unto Felix the governor.

25 And he wrote a letter after this manner:

26 Claudius Lysias unto the most excellent governor Felix sendeth greeting.

27 [p] This man was taken of the Jews, and should have been killed of them: then came I with an army, and rescued him, having understood that he was a Roman.

28 [q] And when I would have known the cause wherefore they accused him, I brought him forth into their council:

29 Whom I perceived to be accused [r] of questions of their law, [s] but to have nothing laid to his charge worthy of death or of bonds.

30 And [t] when it was told me how that the Jews laid wait for the man, I sent straightway to thee, and [u] gave commandment to his accusers also to say before thee what they had against him. Farewell.

31 Then the soldiers, as it was commanded them, took Paul, and brought him by night to Antipatris.

32 On the morrow they left the horsemen to go with him, and returned to the castle:

33 Who, when they came to Cæsarea, and delivered the epistle to the governor, presented Paul also before him.

34 And when the governor had read the letter, he asked of what province he was. And when he understood that he was of [x] Cilicia;

35 [y] I will hear thee, said he, when thine accusers are also come. And he commanded him to be kept in [z] Herod's judgment hall.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Paul answereth for his life and doctrine, and preacheth Christ to the governor and his wife.

AND after [a] five days [b] Ananias the high priest descended with the elders, and with a certain orator named Tertullus, who informed the governor against Paul.

2 And when he was called forth, Tertullus began to accuse him, saying, Seeing that by thee we enjoy great quietness, and that very worthy deeds are done unto this nation by thy providence,

3 We accept it always, and in all places, most noble Felix, with all thankfulness.

4 Notwithstanding, that I be not further tedious unto thee, I pray thee that thou wouldest hear us of thy clemency a few words.

5 [c] For we have found this man a pestilent fellow, and a mover of sedition among all the Jews throughout the world, and a ringleader of the sect of the Nazarenes:

6 [d] Who also hath gone about to profane the temple: whom we took, and would [e] have judged according to our law.

7 [f] But the chief captain Lysias came upon us, and with great violence took him away out of our hands,

8 [g] Commanding his accusers to come unto thee: by examining of whom thyself mayest take knowledge of all these things, whereof we accuse him.

9 And the Jews also assented, saying that these things were so.

10 Then Paul, after that the governor had beckoned unto him to speak, answered, Forasmuch as I know that thou hast been of many years a judge unto this nation, I do the more cheerfully answer for myself:

11 Because that thou mayest understand, that there are yet but twelve days since I went up to Jerusalem [h] for to worship.

12 [i] And they neither found me in the temple disputing with any man, neither raising up the people, neither in the synagogues, nor in the city:

13 Neither can they prove the things whereof they now accuse me.

14 But this I confess unto thee, that after [k] the way which they call heresy, so worship I the [l] God of my fathers, believing all things which are written in [m] the law and in the prophets:

15 And [n] have hope toward God, which they themselves also allow, [o] that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust.

16 And [p] herein do I exercise myself, to have always a conscience void of offence toward God, and toward men.

17 Now after many years [q] I came to bring alms to my nation, and offerings.

18 [r] Whereupon certain Jews from Asia found me purified in the temple, neither with multitude, nor with tumult.

19 [s] Who ought to have been here before thee, and object, if they had ought against me.

20 Or else let these same here say, if they have found any evil doing in me, while I stood before the council, 21 Except it be for this one voice, that I cried standing among them, [t] Touching the resurrection of the dead I am called in question by you this day.

22 And when Felix heard these things, having more perfect knowledge of that way, he deferred them, and said, When [u] Lysias the chief captain shall come down, I will know the uttermost of your matter.

23 And he commanded a centurion to keep Paul, and to let him have liberty, and [x] that he should forbid none of his acquaintance to minister or come unto him.

24 And after certain days, when Felix came with his wife Drusilla, which was a Jewess, he sent for Paul, and heard him concerning the faith in Christ.

25 And as he reasoned of righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come, Felix trembled, and answered, Go thy way for this time; when I have a convenient season, I will call for thee.

26 He hoped also that [y] money should have been given him of Paul, that he might loose him: wherefore he sent for him the oftener, and communed with him.

27 But after two years Porcius Festus came into Felix' room: and Felix, [z] willing to shew the Jews a pleasure, left Paul bound.

CHAPTER XXV.

Paul, being accused by the Jews, before Festus, appealeth unto Cæsar.

NOW when Festus was come into the province, after three days he ascended from Cæsarea to Jerusalem.

2 [a] Then the high priest and the chief of the Jews informed him against Paul, and besought him,

3 And desired favour against him, that he would send for him to Jerusalem, [b] laying wait in the way to kill him.

4 But Festus answered, that Paul should be kept at Cæsarea, and that he himself would depart shortly thither.

5 Let them therefore, said he, which among you are able, go down with me, and accuse this man, [c] if there be any wickedness in him.

6 And when he had tarried among them [2] more than ten days, he went down unto Cæsarea; and the next day sitting on the judgment seat commanded Paul to be brought.

7 And when he was come, the Jews which came down from Jerusalem stood round about, [d] and laid many and grievous complaints against Paul, which they could not prove.

8 While he answered for himself, [e] Neither against the law of the Jews, neither against the temple, nor yet against Cæsar, have I offended any thing at all.

9 But Festus, [f] willing to do the Jews a pleasure, answered Paul, and said, [g] Wilt thou go up to Jerusalem, and there be judged of these things before me?

10 Then said Paul, I stand at Cæsar's judgment seat, where I ought to be judged: to the Jews have I done no wrong, as thou very well knowest.

11 [h] For if I be an offender, or have committed any thing worthy of death, I refuse not to die: but if there be none of these things whereof these accuse me, no man may deliver me unto them. [i] I appeal unto Cæsar.

12 Then Festus, when he had conferred with the council, answered, Hast thou appealed unto Cæsar? unto Cæsar shalt thou go.

13 And after certain days king Agrippa and Bernice came unto Cæsarea to salute Festus.

14 And when they had been there many days, Festus declared Paul's cause unto the king, saying, [k] There is a certain man left in bonds by Felix:

15 [l] About whom, when I was at Jerusalem, the chief priests and the elders of the Jews informed me, desiring to have judgment against him.

16 [m] To whom I answered, It is not the manner of the Romans to deliver any man to die, before that he which is accused have the accusers face to face, and have licence to answer for himself concerning the crime laid against him.

17 Therefore, when they were come hither, [n] without any delay on the morrow I sat on the judgment seat, and commanded the man to be brought forth.

18 Against whom when the accusers stood up, they brought none accusation of such things as I supposed:

19 [o] But had certain questions against him of their own superstition, and of one Jesus, which was dead, whom Paul affirmed to be alive.

20 And because [2] I doubted of such manner of questions, I asked him whether he would go to Jerusalem, and there be judged of these matters.

21 But when Paul had appealed to be reserved unto the [3] hearing of Augustus, I commanded him to be kept till I might send him to Cæsar.

22 Then [p] Agrippa said unto Festus, I would also hear the man myself. To morrow, said he, thou shalt hear him.

23 And on the morrow, when Agrippa was come, and Bernice, with great pomp, and was entered into the place of hearing, with the chief captains, and principal men of the city, at Festus' commandment Paul was brought forth.

24 And Festus said, King Agrippa, and all men which are here present with us, ye see this man, about whom [q] all the multitude of the Jews have dealt with me, both at Jerusalem, and also here, crying that he ought [r] not to live any longer.

25 But when I found that [s] he had committed nothing worthy of death, [t] and that he himself hath appealed to Augustus, I have determined to send him.

26 Of whom I have no certain thing to write unto my lord. Wherefore I have brought him forth before you, and specially before thee, O king Agrippa, that, after examination had, I might have somewhat to write.

27 For it seemeth to me unreasonable to send a prisoner, and not withal to signify the crimes laid against him.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Paul, before Agrippa, telleth of his life, his conversion, and call to the apostleship.

THEN Agrippa said unto Paul, Thou art permitted to speak for thyself. Then Paul stretched forth the hand, and answered for himself:

2 I think myself happy, king Agrippa, because I shall answer for myself this day before thee touching all the things whereof I am accused of the Jews:

3 Especially because I know thee to be expert in all customs and questions which are among the Jews: wherefore I beseech thee to hear me patiently.

4 My manner of life from my youth, which was at the first among mine own nation at Jerusalem, know all the Jews;

5 Which knew me from the beginning, if they would testify, that after [a] the most straitest sect of our religion I lived a Pharisee.

6 [b] And now I stand and am judged for the hope of [c] the promise made of God unto our fathers:

7 Unto which promise [d] our twelve tribes, instantly serving God [2e] day and night, [f] hope to come. For which hope's sake, king Agrippa, I am accused of the Jews.

8 Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you, that God should raise the dead?

9 [g] I verily thought with myself, that I ought to do many things contrary to the name of Jesus of Nazareth.

10 [h] Which thing I also did in Jerusalem: and many of the saints did I shut up in prison, having received authority [i] from the chief priests; and when they were put to death, I gave my voice against them.

11 [k] And I punished them oft in every synagogue, and compelled them to blaspheme; and being exceedingly mad against them, I persecuted them even unto strange cities.

12 [l] Whereupon as I went to Damascus with authority and commission from the chief priests, 13 At midday, O king, I saw in the way a light from heaven, above the brightness of the sun, shining round about me and them which journeyed with me.

14 And when we were all fallen to the earth, I heard a voice speaking unto me, and saying in the Hebrew tongue, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me? it is hard for thee to kick against the pricks.

15 And I said, Who art thou, Lord? And he said, I am Jesus whom thou persecutest.

16 But rise, and stand upon thy feet: for I have appeared unto thee for this purpose, [m] to make thee a minister and a witness both of these things which thou hast seen, and of those things in the which I will appear unto thee;

17 Delivering thee from the people, and from the Gentiles, [n] unto whom now I send thee,

18 [o] To open their eyes, and [p] to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, [q] that they may receive forgiveness of sins, and [r] inheritance among them which are [s] sanctified by faith that is in me.

19 Whereupon, O king Agrippa, I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision:

20 But [t] shewed first unto them of Damascus, and at Jerusalem, and throughout all the coasts of Judæa, and then to the Gentiles, that they should repent and turn to God, and do [u] works meet for repentance.

21 For these causes [x] the Jews caught me in the temple, and went about to kill me.

22 Having therefore obtained help of God, I continue unto this day, witnessing both to small and great, saying none other things than those [y] which the prophets and [z] Moses did say should come:

23 [a] That Christ should suffer, and [b] that he should be the first that should rise from the dead, and [c] should shew light unto the people, and to the Gentiles.

24 And as he thus spake for himself, Festus said with a loud voice, Paul, [d] thou art beside thyself; much learning doth make thee mad.

25 But he said, I am not mad, most noble Festus; but speak forth the words of truth and soberness.

26 For the king knoweth of these things, before whom also I speak freely: for I am persuaded that none of these things are hidden from him; for this thing was not done in a corner.

27 King Agrippa, believest thou the prophets? I know that thou believest.

28 Then Agrippa said unto Paul, Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian.

29 And Paul said, [e] I would to God, that not only thou, but also all that hear me this day, were both almost, and altogether such as I am, except these bonds.

30 And when he had thus spoken, the king rose up, and the governor, and Bernice, and they that sat with them:

31 And when they were gone aside, they talked between themselves, saying, [f] This man doeth nothing worthy of death or of bonds.

32 Then said Agrippa unto Festus, This man might have been set at liberty, [g] if he had not appealed unto Cæsar.

CHAPTER XXVII.

Paul foretelleth of the danger of the voyage to Rome, but is not believed.

AND when [a] it was determined that we should sail into Italy, they delivered Paul and certain other prisoners unto one named Julius, a centurion of Augustus' band.

2 And entering into a ship of Adramyttium, we launched, meaning to sail by the coasts of Asia; one [b] Aristarchus, a Macedonian of Thessalonica, being with us.

3 And the next day we touched at Sidon. And Julius [c] courteously entreated Paul, and gave him liberty to go unto his friends to refresh himself.

4 And when we had launched from thence, we sailed under Cyprus, because the winds were contrary.

5 And when we had sailed over the sea of Cilicia and Pamphylia, we came to Myra, a city of Lycia.

6 And there the centurion found a ship of Alexandria sailing into Italy; and he put us therein.

7 And when we had sailed slowly many days, and scarce were come over against Cnidus, the wind not suffering us, we sailed under [2] Crete, over against Salmone;

8 And, hardly passing it, came unto a place which is called The fair havens; nigh whereunto was the city of Lasea.

9 Now when much time was spent, and when sailing was now dangerous, [d] because the fast was now already past, Paul admonished them,

10 And said unto them, Sirs, I perceive that this voyage will be with [3] hurt and much damage, not only of the lading and ship, but also of our lives.

11 Nevertheless the centurion believed the master and the owner of the ship, more than those things which were spoken by Paul.

12 And because the haven was not commodious to winter in, the more part advised to depart thence also, if by any means they might attain to Phenice, and there to winter; which is an haven of Crete, and lieth toward the south west and north west.

13 And when the south wind blew softly, supposing that they had obtained their purpose, loosing thence, they sailed close by Crete.

14 But not long after there [2] arose against it a tempestuous wind, called Euroclydon.

15 And when the ship was caught, and could not bear up into the wind, we let her drive.

16 And running under a certain island which is called Clauda, we had much work to come by the boat:

17 Which when they had taken up, they used helps, undergirding the ship; and, fearing lest they should fall into the quicksands, strake sail, and so were driven.

18 And we being exceedingly tossed with a tempest, the next day they lightened the ship;

19 And the third day [e] we cast out with our own hands the tackling of the ship.

20 And when neither sun nor stars in many days appeared, and no small tempest lay on us, all hope that we should be saved was then taken away.

21 But after long abstinence Paul stood forth in the midst of them, and said, Sirs, ye should have hearkened unto me, and not have loosed from Crete, and to have gained this harm and loss.

22 And now I exhort you to be of good cheer: for there shall be no loss of any man's life among you, but of the ship.

23 [f] For there stood by me this night the angel of God, whose I am, and [g] whom I serve,

24 Saying, Fear not, Paul; thou must be brought before Cæsar: and, lo, God hath given thee all them that sail with thee.

25 Wherefore, sirs, be of good cheer: [h] for I believe God, that it shall be even as it was told me.

26 Howbeit [i] we must be cast upon a certain island.

27 But when the fourteenth night was come, as we were driven up and down in Adria, about midnight the shipmen deemed that they drew near to some country;

28 And sounded, and found it twenty fathoms: and when they had gone a little further, they sounded again, and found it fifteen fathoms.

29 Then fearing lest we should have fallen upon rocks, they cast four anchors out of the stern, and wished for the day.

30 And as the shipmen were about to flee out of the ship, when they had let down the boat into the sea, under colour as though they would have cast anchors out of the foreship,

31 Paul said to the centurion and to the soldiers, Except these abide in the ship, ye cannot be saved.

32 Then the soldiers cut off the ropes of the boat, and let her fall off.

33 And while the day was coming on, Paul besought them all to take meat, saying, This day is the fourteenth day that ye have tarried and continued fasting, having taken nothing.

34 Wherefore I pray you to take some meat: for this is for your health: for [k] there shall not an hair fall from the head of any of you.

35 And when he had thus spoken, he took bread, and [l] gave thanks to God in presence of them all: and when he had broken it, he began to eat.

36 Then were they all of good cheer, and they also took some meat.

37 And we were in all in the ship two hundred threescore and sixteen [m] souls.

38 And when they had eaten enough, they lightened the ship, and cast out the wheat into the sea.

39 And when it was day, they knew not the land: but they discovered a certain creek with a shore, into the which they were minded, if it were possible, to thrust in the ship.

40 And when they had [2] taken up the anchors, they committed themselves unto the sea, and loosed the rudder bands, and hoised up the mainsail to the wind, and made toward shore.

41 And falling into a place where two seas met, [n] they ran the ship aground; and the forepart stuck fast, and remained unmoveable, but the hinder part was broken with the violence of the waves.

42 And the soldiers' counsel was to kill the prisoners, lest any of them should swim out, and escape.

43 But the centurion, willing to save Paul, kept them from their purpose; and commanded that they which could swim should cast themselves first into the sea, and get to land:

44 And the rest, some on boards, and some on broken pieces of the ship. And so it came to pass, [o] that they escaped all safe to land.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Paul entertained of the barbarians; unharmed by the viper; some of the Jews persuaded.

AND when they were escaped, then they knew that [a] the island was called Melita.

2 And the [b] barbarous people shewed us no little kindness: for they kindled a fire, and received us every one, because of the present rain, and because of the cold.

3 And when Paul had gathered a bundle of sticks, and laid them on the fire, there came a viper out of the heat, and fastened on his hand.

4 And when the barbarians saw the venomous beast hang on his hand, they said among themselves, No doubt this man is a murderer, whom, though he hath escaped the sea, yet vengeance suffereth not to live.

5 And he shook off the beast into the fire, and [c] felt no harm.

6 Howbeit they looked when he should have swollen, or fallen down dead suddenly: but after they had looked a great while, and saw no harm come to him, they changed their minds, and [d] said that he was a god.

7 In the same quarters were possessions of the chief man of the island, whose name was Publius; who received us, and lodged us three days courteously.

8 And it came to pass, that the father of Publius lay sick of a fever and of a bloody flux: to whom Paul entered in, and [e] prayed, and [f] laid his hands on him, and healed him.

9 So when this was done, others also, which had diseases in the island, came, and were healed:

10 Who also honoured us with many [g] honours; and when we departed, they laded us with such things as were necessary.

11 And after three months we departed in a ship of Alexandria, which had wintered in the isle, whose sign was Castor and Pollux.

12 And landing at Syracuse, we tarried there three days.

13 And from thence we fetched a compass, and came to Rhegium: and after one day the south wind blew, and we came the next day to Puteoli:

14 Where we found brethren, and were desired to tarry with them seven days: and so we went toward Rome.

15 And from thence, when the brethren heard of us, they came to meet us as far as Appii forum, and The three taverns: whom when Paul saw, he thanked God, and took courage.

16 And when we came to Rome, the centurion delivered the prisoners to the captain of the guard: but [h] Paul was suffered to dwell by himself with a soldier that kept him.

17 And it came to pass, that after three days Paul called the chief of the Jews together: and when they were come together, he said unto them, Men and brethren, [i] though I have committed nothing against the people, or customs of our fathers, yet [k] was I delivered prisoner from Jerusalem into the hands of the Romans.

18 Who, [l] when they had examined me, would have let me go, because there was no cause of death in me.

19 But when the Jews spake against it, [m] I was constrained to appeal unto Cæsar; not that I had ought to accuse my nation of.

20 For this cause therefore have I called for you, to see you, and to speak with you: because that [n] for the hope of Israel I am bound with [o] this chain.

21 And they said unto him, We neither received letters out of Judæa concerning thee, neither any of the brethren that came shewed or spake any harm of thee.

22 But we desire to hear of thee what thou thinkest: for as concerning this sect, we know that every where [p] it is spoken against.

23 And when they had appointed him a day, there came many to him into his lodging; [q] to whom he expounded and testified the kingdom of God, persuading them concerning Jesus, [r] both out of the law of Moses, and out of the prophets, from morning till evening.

24 And [s] some believed the things which were spoken, and some believed not.

25 And when they agreed not among themselves, they departed, after that Paul had spoken one word, Well spake the Holy Ghost by Esaias the prophet unto our fathers,

26 Saying, [t] Go unto this people, and say, Hearing ye shall hear, and shall not understand: and seeing ye shall see, and not perceive:

27 For the heart of this people is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes have they closed; lest they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and understand with their heart, and should be converted, and I should heal them.

28 Be it known therefore unto you, that the salvation of God is sent [u] unto the Gentiles, and that they will hear it.

29 And when he had said these words, the Jews departed, and had great reasoning among themselves.

30 And Paul dwelt two whole years in his own hired house, and received all that came in unto him, 31 [x] Preaching the kingdom of God, and teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ, with all confidence, no man forbidding him.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE ROMANS.

CHAPTER I.

The gospel of Paul, what it is, and the righteousness which it sheweth.

PAUL, a servant of Jesus Christ, [a] called to be an apostle, [b] separated unto the gospel of God,
2 ([c] Which he had promised afore [d] by his prophets in the holy scriptures,)
3 Concerning his Son Jesus Christ our Lord, [e] which was [f] made of the seed of David according to the flesh;
4 And [2] [g] declared to be the Son of God with power, according [h] to the spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead:
5 By whom [i] we have received grace and apostleship, [3] for [k] obedience to the faith among all nations, [l] for his name:
6 Among whom are ye also the called of Jesus Christ:
7 To all that be in Rome, beloved of God, [m] called to be saints: [n] Grace to you and peace from God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ.
8 First, [o] I thank my God through Jesus Christ for you all, that [p] your faith is spoken of throughout the whole world.
9 For [q] God is my witness, [r] whom I serve [4] with my spirit in the gospel of his Son, that [s] without ceasing I make mention of you always in my prayers;
10 [t] Making request, if by any means now at length I might have a prosperous journey [u] by the will of God to come unto you.
11 For I long to see you, that [x] I may impart unto you some spiritual gift, to the end ye may be established;
12 That is, that I may be comforted together [5] with you by [y] the mutual faith both of you and me.
13 Now I would not have you ignorant, brethren, that [z] oftentimes I purposed to come unto you, (but [a] was let hitherto,) that I might have some [b] fruit [6] among you also, even as among other Gentiles.
14 [c] I am debtor both to the Greeks, and to the Barbarians; both to the wise, and to the unwise.
15 So, as much as in me is, I am ready to preach the gospel to you that are at Rome also.
16 For [d] I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for [e] it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; [f] to the Jew first, and also to the Greek.
17 For [g] therein is the righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith: as it is written, [h] The just shall live by faith.
18 [i] For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men, who hold the truth in unrighteousness;
19 Because [k] that which may be known of God is manifest [2] in them; for [l] God hath shewed it unto them.
20 For [m] the invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead; [3] so that they are without excuse:
21 Because that, when they knew God, they glorified him not as God, neither were thankful; but [n] became vain in their imaginations, and their foolish heart was darkened.
22 [o] Professing themselves to be wise, they became fools,
23 And changed the glory of the uncorruptible [p] God into an image made like to corruptible man, and to birds, and fourfooted beasts, and creeping things.
24 [q] Wherefore God also gave them up to uncleanness through the lusts of their own hearts, [r] to dishonour their own bodies [s] between themselves:
25 Who changed [t] the truth of God [u] into a lie, and worshipped and served the creature [4] more than the Creator, who is blessed for ever. Amen.
26 For this cause God gave them up unto [x] vile affections: for even their women did change the natural use into that which is against nature:
27 And likewise also the men, leaving the natural use of the woman, burned in their lust one toward another; men with men working that which is unseemly, and receiving in themselves that recompence of their error which was meet.

28 And even as they did not like [5] to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to [6] a reprobate mind, to do those things [y] which are not convenient;

29 Being filled with all unrighteousness, fornication, wickedness, covetousness, maliciousness; full of envy, murder, debate, deceit, malignity; whisperers,

30 Backbiters, haters of God, despiteful, proud, boasters, inventors of evil things, disobedient to parents,

31 Without understanding, covenant-breakers, [2] without natural affection, implacable, unmerciful:

32 Who [z] knowing the judgment of God, that they which commit such things [a] are worthy of death, not only do the same, but [3] [b] have pleasure in them that do them.

CHAPTER II.

They that sin cannot excuse themselves, much less escape the judgment of God.

THEREFORE thou art [a] inexcusable, O man, whosoever thou art that judgest: [b] for wherein thou judgest another, thou condemnest thyself; for thou that judgest doest the same things.

2 But we are sure that the judgment of God is according to truth against them which commit such things.

3 And thinkest thou this, O man, that judgest them which do such things, and doest the same, that thou shalt escape the judgment of God?

4 Or despisest thou [c] the riches of his goodness and [d] forbearance and [e] long-suffering; [f] not knowing that the goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance?

5 But after thy hardness and impenitent heart [g] treasurest up unto thyself wrath against the day of wrath and revelation of the righteous judgment of God;

6 [h] Who will render to every man according to his deeds:

7 To them who by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory and honour and immortality, eternal life:

8 But unto them that are contentious, and [i] do not obey the truth, but obey unrighteousness, indignation and wrath,

9 Tribulation and anguish, upon every soul of man that doeth evil, of the Jew [k] first, and also of the [4] Gentile;

10 [l] But glory, honour, and peace, to every man that worketh good, to the Jew first, and also to the [5] Gentile:

11 For [m] there is no respect of persons with God.

12 For as many as have sinned without law shall also perish without law: and as many as have sinned in the law shall be judged by the law;

13 (For [n] not the hearers of the law are just before God, but the doers of the law shall be justified.

14 For when the Gentiles, which have not the law, do by nature the things contained in the law, these, having not the law, are a law unto themselves:

15 Which shew the work of the law written in their hearts, [2] their conscience also bearing witness, and their thoughts [3] the mean while accusing or else excusing one another;)

16 [o] In the day when God shall judge the secrets of men [p] by Jesus Christ [q] according to my gospel.

17 Behold, [r] thou art called a Jew, and [s] restest in the law, [t] and makest thy boast of God,

18 And [u] knowest his will, and [4] [x] approvest the things that are more excellent, being instructed out of the law;

19 And [y] art confident that thou thyself art a guide of the blind, a light of them which are in darkness,

20 An instructor of the foolish, a teacher of babes, [z] which hast the form of knowledge and of the truth in the law.

21 [a] Thou therefore which teachest another, teachest thou not thyself? thou that preachest a man should not steal, dost thou steal?

22 Thou that sayest a man should not commit adultery, dost thou commit adultery? thou that abhorrest idols, [b] dost thou commit sacrilege?

23 Thou that [c] makest thy boast of the law, through breaking the law dishonourest thou God?

24 For the name of God is blasphemed among the Gentiles through you, as it is [d] written.

25 [e] For circumcision verily profiteth, if thou keep the law: but if thou be a breaker of the law, thy circumcision is made uncircumcision.

26 Therefore [f] if the uncircumcision keep the righteousness of the law, shall not his uncircumcision be counted for circumcision?

27 And shall not uncircumcision which is by nature, if it fulfil the law, [g] judge thee, who by the letter and circumcision dost transgress the law?

28 For [h] he is not a Jew, which is one outwardly; neither is that circumcision, which is outward in the flesh:

29 But he is a Jew, [i] which is one inwardly; and [k] circumcision is that of the heart, [l] in the spirit, and not in the letter; [m] whose praise is not of men, but of God.

CHAPTER III.

No flesh is justified by the law, but all, without difference, by faith only, yet the law is not abolished.

WHAT advantage then hath the Jew? or what profit is there of circumcision?

2 Much every way: chiefly, because that [a] unto them were committed the oracles of God.

3 For what if [b] some did not believe? [c] shall their unbelief make the faith of God without effect?

4 [d] God forbid: yea, let [e] God be true, but [f] every man a liar; as it is written, [g] That thou mightest be justified in thy sayings, and mightest overcome when thou art judged.

5 But if our unrighteousness commend the righteousness of God, what shall we say? Is God unrighteous who taketh vengeance? ([h] I speak as a man)

6 God forbid: for then [i] how shall God judge the world?

7 For if the truth of God hath more abounded through my lie unto his glory; why yet am I also judged as a sinner?

8 And not rather, (as we be slanderously reported, and as some affirm that we say,) [k] Let us do evil, that good may come? whose damnation is just.

9 What then? are we better than they? No, in no wise: for we have before [2] proved both Jews and Gentiles, that [l] they are all under sin;

10 As it is written, [m] There is none righteous, no, not one:

11 There is none that understandeth, there is none that seeketh after God.

12 They are all gone out of the way, they are together become unprofitable; there is none that doeth good, no, not one.

13 [n] Their throat is an open sepulchre; with their tongues they have used deceit; [o] the poison of asps is under their lips:

14 [p] Whose mouth is full of cursing and bitterness:

15 [q] Their feet are swift to shed blood:

16 Destruction and misery are in their ways:

17 And the way of peace have they not known:

18 [r] There is no fear of God before their eyes.

19 Now we know that what things soever [s] the law saith, it saith to them who are under the law: that [t] every mouth may be stopped, and [u] all the world may become [3] guilty before God.

20 Therefore [x] by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight: for [y] by the law is the knowledge of sin.

21 But now [z] the righteousness of God without the law is manifested, [a] being witnessed by the law [b] and the prophets;

22 Even the righteousness of God which is [c] by faith of Jesus Christ unto all and upon all them that believe: for [d] there is no difference:

23 For [e] all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God;

24 Being justified freely [f] by his grace [g] through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus:

25 Whom God hath [2] set forth [h] to be a propitiation through faith [i] in his blood, to declare his righteousness [k] for the [3] remission of [l] sins that are past, through the forbearance of God;

26 To declare, I say, at this time his righteousness: that he might be just, and the justifier of him which believeth in Jesus.

27 [m] Where is boasting then? It is excluded. By what law? of works? Nay: but by the law of faith.

28 Therefore we conclude [n] that a man is justified by faith without the deeds of the law.

29 Is he the God of the Jews only? is he not also of the Gentiles? Yes, of the Gentiles also:

30 Seeing [o] it is one God, which shall justify the circumcision by faith, and uncircumcision through faith.

31 Do we then make void the law through faith? God forbid: yea, we establish the law.

CHAPTER IV.

Abraham's faith was imputed to him for righteousness, so also shall our faith be.

WHAT shall we say then that [a] Abraham our father, as pertaining to the flesh, hath found?

2 For if Abraham were [b] justified by works, he hath whereof to glory; but not before God.

3 For what saith the scripture? [c] Abraham believed God, and it was counted unto him for righteousness.

4 Now [d] to him that worketh is the reward not reckoned of grace, but of debt.

5 But to him that worketh not, but believeth on him that justifieth [e] the ungodly, his faith is counted for righteousness.

6 Even as David also describeth the blessedness of the man, unto whom God imputeth righteousness without works,

7 Saying, [f] Blessed are they whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sins are covered.

8 Blessed is the man to whom the Lord will not impute sin.

9 Cometh this blessedness then upon the circumcision only, or upon the uncircumcision also? for we say that faith was reckoned to Abraham for righteousness.

10 How was it then reckoned? when he was in circumcision, or in uncircumcision? Not in circumcision, but in uncircumcision.

11 And [g] he received the sign of circumcision, a seal of the righteousness of the faith which he had yet being uncircumcised: that [h] he might be the father of all them that believe, though they be not circumcised; that righteousness might be imputed unto them also:

12 And the father of circumcision to them who are not of the circumcision only, but who also walk in the steps of that faith of our father Abraham, which he had being yet uncircumcised.

13 For the promise, that he should be the [i] heir of the world, was not to Abraham, or to his seed, through the law, but through the righteousness of faith.

14 For [k] if they which are of the law be heirs, faith is made void, and the promise made of none effect:

15 Because [l] the law worketh wrath: for where no law is, there is no transgression.

16 Therefore it is of faith, that it might be [m] by grace; [n] to the end the promise might be sure to all the seed; not to that only which is of the law, but to that also which is of the faith of Abraham; [o] who is the father of us all,

17 (As it is written, [p] I have made thee a father of many nations,) [2] before him whom he believed, even God, [q] who quickeneth the dead, and calleth those [r] things which be not as though they were.

18 Who against hope believed in hope, that he might become the father of many nations, according to that which was spoken, [s] So shall thy seed be.

19 And being not weak in faith, [t] he considered not his own body now dead, when he was about an hundred years old, neither yet the deadness of Sarah's womb:

20 He staggered not at the promise of God through unbelief; but was strong in faith, giving glory to God;

21 And being fully persuaded that, what he had promised, [u] he was able also to perform.

22 And therefore it was imputed to him for righteousness.

23 Now [x] it was not written for his sake alone, that it was imputed to him;

24 But for us also, to whom it shall be imputed, if we believe [y] on him that raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead;

25 [z] Who was delivered for our offences, and [a] was raised again for our justification.

CHAPTER V.

Since we were reconciled by Christ's blood, much more shall we be saved.

THEREFORE [a] being justified by faith, we have [b] peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ:

2 [c] By whom also we have access by faith into this grace [d] wherein we stand, and [e] rejoice in hope of the glory of God.

3 And not only so, but [f] we glory in tribulations also: [g] knowing that tribulation worketh patience;

4 [h] And patience, experience; and experience, hope:

5 [i] And hope maketh not ashamed; [k] because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us.

6 For when we were yet without strength, [2] in due time [l] Christ died for the ungodly.

7 For scarcely for a righteous man will one die: yet peradventure for a good man some would even dare to die.

8 But [m] God commendeth his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us.

9 Much more then, being now justified [n] by his blood, we shall be saved [o] from wrath through him.

10 For [p] if, when we were enemies, [q] we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son, much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved [r] by his life.

11 And not only so, but we also [s] joy in God through our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom we have now received the [3] atonement.

12 Wherefore, as [t] by one man sin entered into the world, and [u] death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, [4] for that all have sinned:

13 (For until the law sin was in the world: but [x] sin is not imputed when there is no law.

14 Nevertheless death reigned from Adam to Moses, even over them that had not sinned after the similitude of Adam's transgression, [y] who is the figure of him that was to come.

15 But not as the offence, so also is the free gift. For if through the offence of one many be dead, much more the grace of God, and the gift by grace, which is by one man, Jesus Christ, hath abounded [z] unto many.

16 And not as it was by one that sinned, so is the gift: for the judgment was by one to condemnation, but the free gift is of many offences unto justification.

17 For if [5] by one man's offence death reigned by one; much more they which receive abundance of grace and of the gift of righteousness shall reign in life by one, Jesus Christ.)

18 Therefore as [6] by the offence of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation; even so [7] by the righteousness of one the free gift came [a] upon all men unto justification of life.

19 For as by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous.

20 Moreover [b] the law entered, that the offence might abound. But where sin abounded, grace did much [c] more abound:

21 That as sin hath reigned unto death, even so might grace reign through righteousness unto eternal life by Jesus Christ our Lord.

CHAPTER VI.

Let not sin reign any more, for that death is the wages of sin.

WHAT shall we say then? [a] Shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound?

2 God forbid. How shall we, that are [b] dead to sin, live any longer therein?

3 Know ye not, that [c] so many of us as [2] were baptized into Jesus Christ [d] were baptized into his death?

4 Therefore we are [e] buried with him by baptism into death: that [f] like as Christ was raised up from the dead by [g] the glory of the Father, [h] even so we also should walk in newness of life.

5 [i] For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection:

6 Knowing this, that [k] our old man is crucified with him, that [l] the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin.

7 For [m] he that is dead is [3] freed from sin.

8 Now [n] if we be dead with Christ, we believe that we shall also live with him:

9 Knowing that [o] Christ being raised from the dead dieth no more; death hath no more dominion over him.

10 For in that he died, [p] he died unto sin once: but in that he liveth, [q] he liveth unto God.

11 Likewise reckon ye also yourselves to be [r] dead indeed unto sin, but [s] alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord.

12 [t] Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof.

13 Neither yield ye your [u] members as [4] instruments of unrighteousness unto sin: but [x] yield yourselves unto God, as those that are alive from the dead, and your members as instruments of righteousness unto God.

14 For [y] sin shall not have dominion over you: for ye are not under the law, but under grace.

15 What then? shall we sin, [z] because we are not under the law, but under grace? God forbid.

16 Know ye not, that [a] to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey; whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness?

17 But God be thanked, that ye were the servants of sin, but ye have obeyed from the heart [b] that form of doctrine [2] which was delivered you.

18 Being then [c] made free from sin, ye became the servants of righteousness.

19 I speak after the manner of men because of the infirmity of your flesh: for as ye have yielded your members servants to uncleanness and to iniquity unto iniquity; even so now yield your members servants to righteousness unto holiness.

20 For when ye were [d] the servants of sin, ye were free [3] from righteousness.
21 [e] What fruit had ye then in those things whereof ye are now ashamed? for [f] the end of those things is death.
22 But now [g] being made free from sin, and become servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life.
23 For [h] the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.

CHAPTER VII.

No law hath power over a man longer than he liveth, yet is the law holy, just, and good.

KNOW ye not, brethren, (for I speak to them that know the law,) how that the law hath dominion over a man as long as he liveth?
2 For [a] the woman which hath an husband is bound by the law to her husband so long as he liveth; but if the husband be dead, she is loosed from the law of her husband.
3 So then [b] if, while her husband liveth, she be married to another man, she shall be called an adulteress: but if her husband be dead, she is free from that law; so that she is no adulteress, though she be married to another man.
4 Wherefore, my brethren, ye also are become [c] dead to the law by the body of Christ; that ye should be married to another, even to him who is raised from the dead, that we should [d] bring forth fruit unto God.
5 For when we were in the flesh, the [4] motions of sins, which were by the law, [e] did work in our members [f] to bring forth fruit unto death.
6 But now we are delivered from the law, [5] that being dead wherein we were held; that we should serve [g] in newness of spirit, and not in the oldness of the letter.
7 What shall we say then? Is the law sin? God forbid. Nay, [h] I had not known sin, but by the law: for I had not known [6] lust, except the law had said, [i] Thou shalt not covet.
8 But [k] sin, taking occasion by the commandment, wrought in me all manner of concupiscence. For [l] without the law sin was dead.
9 For I was alive without the law once: but when the commandment came, sin revived, and I died.
10 And the commandment, [m] which was ordained to life, I found to be unto death.
11 For sin, taking occasion by the commandment, deceived me, and by it slew me.
12 Wherefore [n] the law is holy, and the commandment holy, and just, and good.
13 Was then that which is good made death unto me? God forbid. But sin, that it might appear sin, working death in me by that which is good; that sin by the commandment might become exceeding sinful.
14 For we know that the law is spiritual: but I am carnal, [o] sold under sin.
15 For that which I do I [2] allow not: for [p] what I would, that do I not; but what I hate, that do I.
16 If then I do that which I would not, I consent unto the law that it is good.
17 Now then it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me.
18 For I know that [q] in me (that is, in my flesh,) dwelleth no good thing: for to will is present with me; but how to perform that which is good I find not.
19 For the good that I would I do not: but the evil which I would not, that I do.
20 Now if I do that I would not, it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me.
21 I find then a law, that, when I would do good, evil is present with me.
22 For I [r] delight in the law of God after [s] the inward man:
23 But [t] I see another law in [u] my members, warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members.
24 O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from [3] the body of this death?
25 [x] I thank God through Jesus Christ our Lord. So then with the mind I myself serve the law of God; but with the flesh the law of sin.

CHAPTER VIII.

What harm cometh of the flesh, and what good of the Spirit, and what of being God's child.

THERE is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who [a] walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit.
2 For [b] the law of [c] the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from [d] the law of sin and death.
3 For [e] what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, [f] God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and [4] for sin, condemned sin in the flesh:
4 That the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, g who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit.

5 For h they that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh; but they that are after the Spirit i the things of the Spirit.

6 For k [2]to be carnally minded is death; but [3]to be spiritually minded is life and peace.

7 Because [4]l the carnal mind is enmity against God: for it is not subject to the law of God, m neither indeed can be.

8 So then they that are in the flesh cannot please God.

9 But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be that n the Spirit of God dwell in you. Now if any man have not o the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his.

10 And if Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin; but the Spirit is life because of righteousness.

11 But if the Spirit of p him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, q he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies [5]by his Spirit that dwelleth in you.

12 r Therefore, brethren, we are debtors, not to the flesh, to live after the flesh.

13 For s if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die: but if ye through the Spirit do t mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live.

14 For u as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God.

15 For x ye have not received the spirit of bondage again y to fear; but ye have received the z Spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, a Abba, Father.

16 b The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God:

17 And if children, then heirs; c heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ; d if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together.

18 For I reckon that e the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us.

19 For f the earnest expectation of the creature waiteth for the g manifestation of the sons of God.

20 For h the creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of him who hath subjected the same in hope,

21 Because the creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God.

22 For we know that i the whole creation j groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now.

23 And not only they, but ourselves also, which have k the firstfruits of the Spirit, l even we ourselves groan within ourselves, m waiting for the adoption, to wit, the n redemption of our body.

24 For we are saved by hope: but o hope that is seen is not hope: for what a man seeth, why doth he yet hope for?

25 But if we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it.

26 Likewise the Spirit also helpeth our infirmities: for p we know not what we should pray for as we ought: but q the Spirit itself maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered.

27 And r he that searcheth the hearts knoweth what is the mind of the Spirit, [2]because he maketh intercession for the saints [3]according to the will of God.

28 And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them t who are the called according to his purpose.

29 For whom u he did foreknow, x he also did predestinate y to be conformed to the image of his Son, z that he might be the firstborn among many brethren.

30 Moreover whom he did predestinate, them he also a called: and whom he called, them he also b justified: and whom he justified, them he also c glorified.

31 What shall we then say to these things? d If God be for us, who can be against us?

32 e He that spared not his own Son, but f delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things?

33 Who shall lay any thing to the charge of God's elect? g It is God that justifieth.

34 h Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, yea rather, that is risen again, i who is even at the right hand of God, k who also maketh intercession for us.

35 Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword?

36 As it is written, l For thy sake we are killed all the day long; we are accounted as sheep for the slaughter.

37 m Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us.

38 For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor [n] principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, 39 Nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord.

CHAPTER IX.

Paul is sorry for the Jews: God hath mercy upon whom he will.

I [a] SAY the truth in Christ, I lie not, my conscience also bearing me witness in the Holy Ghost,
2 [b] That I have great heaviness and continual sorrow in my heart.
3 For [c] I could wish that myself were [2] accursed from Christ for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh:
4 [d] Who are Israelites; [e] to whom pertaineth the adoption, and [f] the glory, and [g] the [3] covenants, and [h] the giving of the law, and [i] the service of God, and [k] the promises:
5 [l] Whose are the fathers, and [m] of whom as concerning the flesh Christ came, [n] who is over all, God blessed for ever. Amen.
6 [o] Not as though the word of God hath taken none effect. For [p] they are not all Israel, which are of Israel:
7 [q] Neither, because they are the seed of Abraham, are they all children: but, In [r] Isaac shall thy seed be called.
8 That is, They which are the children of the flesh, these are not the children of God: but [s] the children of the promise are counted for the seed.
9 For this is the word of promise, [t] At this time will I come, and Sarah shall have a son.
10 And not only this; but when [u] Rebecca also had conceived by one, even by our father Isaac:
11 (For the children being not yet born, neither having done any good or evil, that the purpose of God according to election might stand, not of works, but of [x] him that calleth;)
12 It was said unto her, [y] The [4] elder shall serve the [5] younger.
13 As it is written, [z] Jacob have I loved, but Esau have I hated.
14 What shall we say then? [a] Is there unrighteousness with God? God forbid.
15 For he saith to Moses, [b] I will have mercy on whom I will have mercy, and I will have compassion on whom I will have compassion.
16 So then it is not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth, but of God that sheweth mercy.
17 For [c] the scripture saith unto Pharaoh, [d] Even for this same purpose have I raised thee up, that I might shew my power in thee, and that my name might be declared throughout all the earth.
18 Therefore hath he mercy on whom he will have mercy, and whom he will he hardeneth.
19 Thou wilt say then unto me, Why doth he yet find fault? For [e] who hath resisted his will?
20 Nay but, O man, who art thou that [6] repliest against God? [f] Shall the thing formed say to him that formed it, Why hast thou made me thus?
21 Hath not the [g] potter power over the clay, of the same lump to make [h] one vessel unto honour, and another unto dishonour?
22 What if God, willing to shew his wrath, and to make his power known, endured with much longsuffering [i] the vessels of wrath [2] [k] fitted to destruction:
23 And that he might make known [l] the riches of his glory on the vessels of mercy, which he had [m] afore prepared unto glory,
24 Even us, whom he hath called, [n] not of the Jews only, but also of the Gentiles?
25 As he saith also in Osee, [o] I will call them my people, which were not my people; and her beloved, which was not beloved.
26 [p] And it shall come to pass, that in the place where it was said unto them, Ye are not my people; there shall they be called the children of the living God.
27 Esaias also crieth concerning Israel, [q] Though the number of the children of Israel be as the sand of the sea, [r] a remnant shall be saved:
28 For he will finish [3] the work, and cut it short in righteousness: [s] because a short work will the Lord make upon the earth.
29 And as Esaias said before, [t] Except the Lord of Sabaoth had left us a seed, [u] we had been as Sodoma, and been made like unto Gomorrha.
30 What shall we say then? [x] That the Gentiles, which followed not after righteousness, have attained to righteousness, [y] even the righteousness which is of faith.
31 But Israel, [z] which followed after the law of righteousness, [a] hath not attained to the law of righteousness.

32 Wherefore? Because they sought it not by faith, but as it were by the works of the law. For [b] they stumbled at that stumblingstone;

33 As it is written, [c] Behold, I lay in Sion a stumblingstone and rock of offence: and [d] whosoever believeth on him shall not be [4] ashamed.

CHAPTER X.

The scripture sheweth the difference between the righteousness of the law, and this of faith.

BRETHREN, my heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is, that they might be saved.

2 For I bear them record [a] that they have a zeal of God, but not according to knowledge.

3 For they being ignorant of [b] God's righteousness, and going about to establish their own [c] righteousness, have not submitted themselves unto the righteousness of God.

4 For [d] Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth.

5 For Moses describeth the righteousness which is of the law, [e] That the man which doeth those things shall live by them.

6 But the righteousness which is of faith speaketh on this wise, [f] Say not in thine heart, Who shall ascend into heaven? (that is, to bring Christ down from above:)

7 Or, Who shall descend into the deep? (that is, to bring up Christ again from the dead.)

8 But what saith it? [g] The word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy heart: that is, the word of faith, which we preach;

9 That [h] if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved.

10 For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation.

11 For the scripture saith, [i] Whosoever believeth on him shall not be ashamed.

12 For [k] there is no difference between the Jew and the Greek: for [l] the same Lord over all [m] is rich unto all that call upon him.

13 [n] For whosoever shall call [o] upon the name of the Lord shall be saved.

14 How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear [p] without a preacher?

15 And how shall they preach, except they be sent? as it is written, [q] How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things!

16 But [r] they have not all obeyed the gospel. For Esaias saith, [3] Lord, who hath believed [2] our [3] report?

17 So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God.

18 But I say, Have they not heard? Yes verily, [t] their sound went into all the earth, [u] and their words unto the ends of the world.

19 But I say, Did not Israel know? First Moses saith, [x] I will provoke you to jealousy by them that are no people, and by a [y] foolish nation I will anger you.

20 But Esaias is very bold, and saith, [z] I was found of them that sought me not; I was made manifest unto them that asked not after me.

21 But to Israel he saith, [a] All day long I have stretched forth my hands unto a disobedient and gainsaying people.

CHAPTER XI.

God hath not cast off all Israel: the Gentiles may not insult upon them.

I SAY then, [a] Hath God cast away his people? God forbid. For [b] I also am an Israelite, of the seed of Abraham, of the tribe of Benjamin.

2 God hath not cast away his people which [c] he foreknew. Wot ye not what the scripture saith [2] of Elias? how he maketh intercession to God against Israel, saying,

3 [d] Lord, they have killed thy prophets, and digged down thine altars; and I am left alone, and they seek my life.

4 But what saith the answer of God unto him? [e] I have reserved to myself seven thousand men, who have not bowed the knee to the image of Baal.

5 [f] Even so then at this present time also there is a remnant according to the election of grace.

6 And [g] if by grace, then is it no more of works: otherwise grace is no more grace. But if it be of works, then is it no more grace: otherwise work is no more work.

7 What then? [h] Israel hath not obtained that which he seeketh for; but the election hath obtained it, and the rest were [3] blinded

8 (According as it is written, [t] God hath given them the spirit of [u] slumber, [k] eyes that they should not see, and ears that they should not hear;) unto this day.

9 And David saith, [l] Let their table be made a snare, and a trap, and a stumblingblock, and a recompence unto them:

10 [m] Let their eyes be darkened, that they may not see, and bow down their back alway.

11 I say then, Have they stumbled that they should fall? God forbid: but rather [n] through their fall salvation is come unto the Gentiles, for to provoke them to jealousy.

12 Now if the fall of them be the riches of the world, and the [5] diminishing of them the riches of the Gentiles; how much more their fulness?

13 For I speak to you Gentiles, inasmuch as [o] I am the apostle of the Gentiles, I magnify mine office:

14 If by any means I may provoke to emulation them which are my flesh, and [p] might save some of them.

15 For if the casting away of them be the reconciling of the world, what shall the receiving of them be, but life from the dead?

16 For if [q] the firstfruit be holy, the lump is also holy: and if the root be holy, so are the branches.

17 And if [r] some of the branches be broken off, [s] and thou, being a wild olive tree, wert graffed in [6] among them, and with them partakest of the root and fatness of the olive tree;

18 [t] Boast not against the branches. But if thou boast, thou bearest not the root, but the root thee.

19 Thou wilt say then, The branches were broken off, that I might be graffed in.

20 Well; because of unbelief they were broken off, and thou standest by faith. [u] Be not highminded, but [x] fear:

21 For if God spared not the natural branches, take heed lest he also spare not thee.

22 Behold therefore the goodness and severity of God: on them which fell, severity; but toward thee, goodness, [y] if thou continue in his goodness: otherwise [z] thou also shalt be cut off.

23 And they also, [a] if they abide not still in unbelief, shall be graffed in: for God is able to graff them in again.

24 For if thou wert cut out of the olive tree which is wild by nature, and wert graffed contrary to nature into a good olive tree: how much more shall these, which be the natural branches, be graffed into their own olive tree?

25 For I would not, brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, lest ye should be [b] wise in your own conceits: that [c] [2] blindness in part is happened to Israel, [d] until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in.

26 And so all Israel shall be saved: as it is written, [e] There shall come out of Sion the Deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob:

27 [f] For this is my covenant unto them, when I shall take away their sins.

28 As concerning the gospel, they are enemies for your sakes: but as touching the election, they are [g] beloved for the fathers' sakes.

29 For the gifts and calling of God are [h] without repentance.

30 For as ye [i] in times past have not [3] believed God, yet have now obtained mercy through their unbelief:

31 Even so have these also now not [4] believed, that through your mercy they also may obtain mercy.

32 For [k] God hath [5] concluded them all in unbelief, that he might have mercy upon all.

33 O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! [l] how unsearchable are his judgments, and [m] his ways past finding out!

34 [n] For who hath known the mind of the Lord? or [o] who hath been his counsellor?

35 Or [p] who hath first given to him, and it shall be recompensed unto him again?

36 For [q] of him, and through him, and to him, are all things: [r] to [6] whom be glory for ever. Amen.

CHAPTER XII.

God's mercies must move us to please God: love and many other duties are required of us.

I [a] BESEECH you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, [b] that ye [c] present your bodies [d] a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service.

2 And [e] be not conformed to this world: but [f] be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may [g] prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God.

3 For I say, [h] through the grace given unto me, to every man that is among you, [i] not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think; but to think [2] soberly, according as God hath dealt [k] to every man the measure of faith.

4 For [l] as we have many members in one body, and all members have not the same office:

5 So [m] we, being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another.

6 [n] Having then gifts differing [o] according to the grace that is given to us, whether [p] prophecy, let us prophesy according to the proportion of faith;

7 Or ministry, let us wait on our ministering: or [q] he that teacheth, on teaching;

8 Or [r] he that exhorteth, on exhortation: [s] he that [3] giveth, let him do it [4] with simplicity; [t] he that ruleth, with diligence; he that sheweth mercy, [u] with cheerfulness.

9 [x] Let love be without dissimulation. [y] Abhor that which is evil; cleave to that which is good.

10 [z] Be kindly affectioned one to another [5] with brotherly love; [a] in honour preferring one another;

11 Not slothful in business; fervent in spirit; serving the Lord;

12 [b] Rejoicing in hope; [c] patient in tribulation; [d] continuing instant in prayer;

13 [e] Distributing to the necessity of saints; [f] given to hospitality.

14 [g] Bless them which persecute you: bless, and curse not.

15 [h] Rejoice with them that do rejoice, and weep with them that weep.

16 [i] Be of the same mind one toward another. [k] Mind not high things, but [2] condescend to men of low estate. [l] Be not wise in your own conceits.

17 [m] Recompense to no man evil for evil. [n] Provide things honest in the sight of all men.

18 If it be possible, as much as lieth in you, [o] live peaceably with all men.

19 Dearly beloved, [p] avenge not yourselves, but rather give place unto wrath: for it is written, [q] Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord.

20 [r] Therefore if thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink: for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head.

21 Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good.

CHAPTER XIII.

Love is the fulfilling of the law.

LET every soul [a] be subject unto the higher powers. For [b] there is no power but of God: the powers that be are [3] ordained of God.

2 Whosoever therefore resisteth [c] the power, resisteth the ordinance of God: and they that resist shall receive to themselves damnation.

3 For rulers are not a terror to good works, but to the evil. Wilt thou then not be afraid of the power? [d] do that which is good, and thou shalt have praise of the same:

4 For he is the minister of God to thee for good. But if thou do that which is evil, be afraid; for he beareth not the sword in vain: for he is the minister of God, a revenger to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil.

5 Wherefore [e] ye must needs be subject, not only for wrath, [f] but also for conscience sake.

6 For for this cause pay ye tribute also: for they are God's ministers, attending continually upon this very thing.

7 [g] Render therefore to all their dues: tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom custom; fear to whom fear; honour to whom honour.

8 Owe no man any thing, but to love one another: for [h] he that loveth another hath fulfilled the law.

9 For this, [i] Thou shalt not commit adultery, Thou shalt not kill, Thou shalt not steal, Thou shalt not bear false witness, Thou shalt not covet; and if there be any other commandment, it is briefly comprehended in this saying, namely, [k] Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.

10 Love worketh no ill to his neighbour: therefore [l] love is the fulfilling of the law.

11 And that, knowing the time, that now it is high time [m] to awake out of sleep: for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed.

12 The night is far spent, the day is at hand: [n] let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and [o] let us put on the armour of light.

13 [p] Let us walk [2] honestly, as in the day; [q] not in rioting and drunkenness, [r] not in chambering and wantonness, [s] not in strife and envying.

14 But [t] put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ, and [u] make not provision for the flesh, to fulfil the lusts thereof.

CHAPTER XIV.

Men may not condemn one the other, but take heed that they give no offence in them.

HIM that [a] is weak in the faith receive ye, but [3] not to doubtful disputations.

2 For one believeth that he [b] may eat all things: another, who is weak, eateth herbs.

3 Let not him that eateth despise him that eateth not; and [c] let not him which eateth not judge him that eateth: for God hath received him.

4 [d] Who art thou that judgest another man's servant? to his own master he standeth or falleth. Yea, he shall be holden up: for God is able to make him stand.

5 [e] One man esteemeth one day above another: another esteemeth every day alike. Let every man be [4] fully persuaded in his own mind.

6 He that [f] [5] regardeth the day, regardeth it unto the Lord; and he that regardeth not the day, to the Lord he doth not regard it. He that eateth, eateth to the Lord, for [g] he giveth God thanks; and he that eateth not, to the Lord he eateth not, and giveth God thanks.

7 For [h] none of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself.

8 For whether we live, we live unto the Lord: and whether we die, we die unto the Lord: whether we live therefore, or die, we are the Lord's.

9 For [i] to this end Christ both died, and rose, and revived, that he might be [k] Lord both of the dead and living.

10 But why dost thou judge thy brother? or why dost thou set at nought thy brother? for [l] we shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ.

11 For it is written, [m] As I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God.

12 So then [n] every one of us shall give account of himself to God.

13 Let us not therefore judge one another any more: but judge this rather, that [o] no man put a stumblingblock or an occasion to fall in his brother's way.

14 I know, and am persuaded by the Lord Jesus, [p] that there is nothing [2] unclean of itself: but [q] to him that esteemeth any thing to be [3] unclean, to him it is unclean.

15 But if thy brother be grieved with thy meat, now walkest thou not [4] charitably. [r] Destroy not him with thy meat, for whom Christ died.

16 [s] Let not then your good be evil spoken of:

17 [t] For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost.

18 For he that in these things serveth Christ [u] is acceptable to God, and approved of men.

19 [x] Let us therefore follow after the things which make for peace, and things wherewith [y] one may edify another.

20 [z] For meat destroy not the work of God. [a] All things indeed are pure: [b] but it is evil for that man who eateth with offence.

21 It is good neither to eat [c] flesh, nor to drink wine, nor any thing whereby thy brother stumbleth, or is offended, or is made weak.

22 Hast thou faith? have it to thyself before God. [d] Happy is he that condemneth not himself in that thing which he alloweth.

23 And he that [5] doubteth is damned if he eat, because he eateth not of faith: for [e] whatsoever is not of faith is sin.

CHAPTER XV.

The strong must bear with the weak, and we may not please ourselves, but receive one the other.

WE [a] then that are strong ought to bear the [b] infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves.

2 [c] Let every one of us please his neighbour for his good [d] to edification.

3 [e] For even Christ pleased not himself; but, as it is written, [f] The reproaches of them that reproached thee fell on me.

4 For [g] whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the scriptures might have hope.

5 [h] Now the God of patience and consolation grant you to be likeminded one toward another [6] according to Christ Jesus:

6 That ye may [i] with one mind and one mouth glorify God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ.

7 Wherefore [k] receive ye one another, [l] as Christ also received us to the glory of God.

8 Now I say that [m] Jesus Christ was a minister of the circumcision for the truth of God, [n] to confirm the promises made unto the fathers:

9 And [o] that the Gentiles might glorify God for his mercy; as it is written, [p] For this cause I will confess to thee among the Gentiles, and sing unto thy name.

10 And again he saith, [q] Rejoice, ye Gentiles, with his people.

11 And again, [r] Praise the Lord, all ye Gentiles; and laud him, all ye people.

12 And again, Esaias saith, [s] There shall be a root of Jesse, and he that shall rise to reign over the Gentiles; in him shall the Gentiles trust.

13 Now the God of hope fill you with all [t] joy and peace in believing, that ye may abound in hope, through the power of the Holy Ghost.

14 And [u] I myself also am persuaded of you, my brethren, that ye also are full of goodness, [x] filled with all knowledge, able also to admonish one another.

15 Nevertheless, brethren, I have written the more boldly unto you in some sort, as putting you in mind, [y] because of the grace that is given to me of God,

16 That [z] I should be the minister of Jesus Christ to the Gentiles, ministering the gospel of God, that the [2] [a] offering up of the Gentiles might be acceptable, being sanctified by the Holy Ghost.

17 I have therefore whereof I may glory through Jesus Christ [b] in those things which pertain to God.

18 For I will not dare to speak of any of those things [c] which Christ hath not wrought by me, [d] to make the Gentiles obedient, by word and deed,

19 [e] Through mighty signs and wonders, by the power of the Spirit of God; so that from Jerusalem, and round about unto Illyricum, I have fully preached the gospel of Christ.

20 Yea, so have I strived to preach the gospel, not where Christ was named, [f] lest I should build upon another man's foundation:

21 But as it is written, [g] To whom he was not spoken of, they shall see: and they that have not heard shall understand.

22 For which cause also [h] I have been [3] much hindered from coming to you.

23 But now having no more place in these parts, and [i] having a great desire these many years to come unto you;

24 Whensoever I take my journey into Spain, I will come to you: for I trust to see you in my journey, [k] and to be brought on my way thitherward by you, if first I be somewhat filled [4] with your company.

25 But now [l] I go unto Jerusalem to minister unto the saints.

26 For [m] it hath pleased them of Macedonia and Achaia to make a certain contribution for the poor saints which are at Jerusalem.

27 It hath pleased them verily; and their debtors they are. For [n] if the Gentiles have been made partakers of their spiritual things, [o] their duty is also to minister unto them in carnal things.

28 When therefore I have performed this, and have sealed to them [p] this fruit, I will come by you into Spain.

29 [q] And I am sure that, when I come unto you, I shall come in the fulness of the blessing of the gospel of Christ.

30 Now I beseech you, brethren, for the Lord Jesus Christ's sake, and [r] for the love of the Spirit, [s] that ye strive together with me in your prayers to God for me;

31 [t] That I may be delivered from them that [2] do not believe in Judæa; and that [u] my service which I have for Jerusalem may be accepted of the saints;

32 [x] That I may come unto you with joy [y] by the will of God, and may with you be [z] refreshed.

33 Now [a] the God of peace be with you all. Amen.

CHAPTER XVI.

Paul adviseth the brethren to take heed of those which cause dissensions and offences.

I COMMEND unto you Phebe our sister, which is a servant of the church which is at [a] Cenchrea:

2 [b] That ye receive her in the Lord, as becometh saints, and that ye assist her in whatsoever business she hath need of you: for she hath been a succourer of many, and of myself also.

3 Greet [c] Priscilla and Aquila my helpers in Christ Jesus:

4 Who have for my life laid down their own necks: unto whom not only I give thanks, but also all the churches of the Gentiles.

5 Likewise greet [d] the church that is in their house. Salute my wellbeloved Epænetus, who is [e] the firstfruits of Achaia unto Christ.

6 Greet Mary, who bestowed much labour on us.

7 Salute Andronicus and Junia, my kinsmen, and my fellowprisoners, who are of note among the apostles, who also [f] were in Christ before me.

8 Greet Amplias my beloved in the Lord.

9 Salute Urbane, our helper in Christ, and Stachys my beloved.

10 Salute Apelles approved in Christ. Salute them which are of Aristobulus' [3] household.

11 Salute Herodion my kinsman. Greet them that be of the [4] household of Narcissus, which are in the Lord.

12 Salute Tryphena and Tryphosa, who labour in the Lord. Salute the beloved Persis, which laboured much in the Lord, 13 Salute Rufus [g] chosen in the Lord, and his mother and mine.

14 Salute Asyncritus, Phlegon, Hermas, Patrobas, Hermes, and the brethren which are with them.

15 Salute Philologus, and Julia, Nereus, and his sister, and Olympas, and all the saints which are with them.

16 [h] Salute one another with an holy kiss. The churches of Christ salute you.

17 Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them [i] which cause divisions and offences contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned; and [k] avoid them.

18 For they that are such serve not our Lord Jesus Christ, but [l] their own belly; and [m] by good words and fair speeches deceive the hearts of the simple.

19 For [n] your obedience is come abroad unto all men. I am glad therefore on your behalf: but yet I would have you [o] wise unto that which is good, and [2] simple concerning evil.

20 And [p] the God of peace [q] shall [3] bruise Satan under your feet shortly. [r] The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you. Amen.

21 [s] Timotheus my workfellow, and [t] Lucius, and [u] Jason, and [x] Sosipater, my kinsmen, salute you.

22 I Tertius, who wrote this epistle, salute you in the Lord.

23 [y] Gaius mine host, and of the whole church, saluteth you. [z] Erastus the chamberlain of the city saluteth you, and Quartus a brother.

24 [a] The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.

25 Now [b] to him that is of power to stabish you [c] according to my gospel, and the preaching of Jesus Christ, [d] according to the revelation of the mystery, [e] which was kept secret since the world began,

26 But [f] now is made manifest, and by the scriptures of the prophets, according to the commandment of the everlasting God, made known to all nations for [g] the obedience of faith:

27 To [h] God only wise, be glory through Jesus Christ for ever. Amen.

¶ Written to the Romans from Corinthus, and sent by Phebe servant of the church at Cenchrea.

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS.

CHAPTER I.

Paul exhorteth the brethren to unity, and reproveth their dissensions.

PAUL, [a] called to be an apostle of Jesus Christ [b] through the will of God, and [c] Sosthenes our brother,

2 Unto the church of God which is at Corinth, [d] to them that [e] are sanctified in Christ Jesus, [f] called to be saints, with all that in every place [g] call upon the name of Jesus Christ [h] our Lord, [i] both their's and our's:

3 [k] Grace be unto you, and peace, from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

4 [l] I thank my God always on your behalf, for the grace of God which is given you by Jesus Christ;

5 That in every thing ye are enriched by him, [m] in all utterance, and in all knowledge;

6 Even as [n] the testimony of Christ was confirmed in you:

7 So that ye come behind in no gift; [o] waiting for the [4] coming of our Lord Jesus Christ:

8 [p] Who shall also confirm you unto the end, [q] that ye may be blameless in the day of our Lord Jesus Christ.

9 [r] God is faithful, by whom ye were called unto [s] the fellowship of his Son Jesus Christ our Lord.

10 Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, [t] that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no [2] divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment.

11 For it hath been declared unto me of you, my brethren, by them which are of the house of Chloe, that there are contentions among you.

12 Now this I say, [u] that every one of you saith, I am of Paul; and I of [x] Apollos; and I of [y] Cephas; and I of Christ.

13 [z] Is Christ divided? was Paul crucified for you? or were ye baptized in the name of Paul?

14 I thank God that I baptized none of you, but [a] Crispus and [b] Gaius;

15 Lest any should say that I had baptized in mine own name.

16 And I baptized also the household of [c] Stephanas: besides, I know not whether I baptized any other.

17 For Christ sent me not to baptize, but to preach the gospel: [d] not with wisdom of [3] words, lest the cross of Christ should be made of none effect.

18 For the preaching of the cross is to [e] them that perish [f] foolishness; but unto us [g] which are saved it is the [h] power of God.

19 For it is written, [i] I will destroy the wisdom of the wise, and will bring to nothing the understanding of the prudent.

20 [k] Where is the wise? where is the scribe? where is the disputer of this world? [l] hath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world?

21 [m] For after that in the wisdom of God the world by wisdom knew not God, it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe.

22 For the [n] Jews require a sign, and the Greeks seek after wisdom:

23 But we preach Christ crucified, [o] unto the Jews a stumblingblock, and unto the Greeks [p] foolishness;

24 But unto them which are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ [q] the power of God, and [r] the wisdom of God.

25 Because the foolishness of God is wiser than men; and the weakness of God is stronger than men.

26 For ye see your calling, brethren, how that [s] not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called:

27 But [t] God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty;

28 And base things of the world, and things which are despised, hath God chosen, yea, and [u] things which are not, [x] to bring to nought things that are:

29 [y] That no flesh should glory in his presence.

30 But of him are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us [z] wisdom, and [a] righteousness, and [b] sanctification, and [c] redemption:

31 That, according as it is written, [d] He that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord.

CHAPTER II.

Paul declareth that his preaching consisteth in the power of God.

AND I, brethren, when I came to you, [a] came not with excellency of speech or of wisdom, declaring unto you [b] the testimony of God.

2 For I determined not to know any thing among you, [c] save Jesus Christ, and him crucified.

3 And [d] I was with you [e] in weakness, and in fear, and in much trembling.

4 And my speech and my preaching was not with [2] enticing words of man's wisdom, [g] but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power:

5 That your faith should not [3] stand in the wisdom of men, but [h] in the power of God.

6 Howbeit we speak wisdom among them [i] that are perfect: yet not [k] the wisdom of this world, nor of the princes of this world, [l] that come to nought:

7 But we speak the wisdom of God in a mystery, even the hidden wisdom, [m] which God ordained before the world unto our glory:

8 [n] Which none of the princes of this world knew: for [o] had they known it, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory.

9 But as it is written, [p] Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him.

10 But [q] God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit: for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God.

11 For what man knoweth the things of a man, [r] save the spirit of man which is in him? [s] even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God.

12 Now we have received, not the spirit of the world, but [t] the spirit which is of God; that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God.

13 [u] Which things also we speak, not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth; comparing spiritual things with spiritual.

14 [x] But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: [y] for they are foolishness unto him: [z] neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned.

15 [a] But he that is spiritual [2] judgeth all things, yet he himself is [3] judged of no man.

16 [b] For who hath known the mind of the Lord, that he [4] may instruct him? [c] But we have the mind of Christ.

CHAPTER III.

Strife and division, arguments of a fleshly mind: Christ the only foundation.

AND I, brethren, could not speak unto you as unto [a] spiritual, but as unto [b] carnal, even as unto [c] babes in Christ.

2 I have fed you with [d] milk, and not with meat: [e] for hitherto ye were not able to bear it, neither yet now are ye able.

3 For ye are yet carnal: for [f] whereas there is among you envying, and strife, and [5] divisions, are ye not carnal, and walk [6] as men?

4 For while one saith, [g] I am of Paul; and another, I am of Apollos; are ye not carnal?

5 Who then is Paul, and who is Apollos, but [h] ministers by whom ye believed, [i] even as the Lord gave to every man?

6 [k] I have planted, [l] Apollos watered; [m] but God gave the increase.

7 So then [n] neither is he that planteth any thing, neither he that watereth; but God that giveth the increase.

8 Now he that planteth and he that watereth are one: [o] and every man shall receive his own reward according to his own labour.

9 For [p] we are labourers together with God: ye are God's [2] husbandry, ye are [q] God's building.

10 [r] According to the grace of God which is given unto me, as a wise masterbuilder, I have laid [s] the foundation, and another buildeth thereon. But [t] let every man take heed how he buildeth thereupon.

11 For other foundation can no man lay than [u] that is laid, [x] which is Jesus Christ.

12 Now if any man build upon this foundation gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, stubble;

13 [y] Every man's work shall be made manifest: for the day [z] shall declare it, because [a] it [3] shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is.

14 If any man's work abide which he hath built thereupon, [b] he shall receive a reward.

15 If any man's work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss: but he himself shall be saved; [c] yet so as by fire.

16 [d] Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?

17 If any man [4] defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are.

18 [e] Let no man deceive himself. If any man among you seemeth to be wise in this world, let him become a fool, that he may be wise.

19 For [f] the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God. For it is written, [g] He taketh the wise in their own craftiness.

20 And again, [h] The Lord knoweth the thoughts of the wise, that they are vain.

21 Therefore [i] let no man glory in men. For [k] all things are your's;

22 Whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, or things present, or things to come; all are your's;

23 And [l] ye are Christ's; and Christ is God's.

CHAPTER IV.

In what account the ministers ought to be had. We have nothing which we have not received.

LET a man so account of us, as of [a] the ministers of Christ, [b] and stewards of the mysteries of God.

2 Moreover it is required in stewards, that a man be found faithful.

3 But with me it is a very small thing that I should be judged of you, or of man's [2] judgment: yea, I judge not mine own self.

4 For I know nothing by myself; [c] yet am I not hereby justified: but he that judgeth me is the Lord.

5 [d] Therefore judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come, [e] who both will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will make manifest the counsels of the hearts: and [f] then shall every man have praise of God.

6 And these things, brethren, [g] I have in a figure transferred to myself and to Apollos for your sakes; [h] that ye might learn in us not to think of men above that which is written, that no one of you [i] be puffed up for one against another.

7 For who [3] maketh thee to differ from another? and [k] what hast thou that thou didst not receive? now if thou didst receive it, why dost thou glory, as if thou hadst not received it?

8 Now ye are full, [l] now ye are rich, ye have reigned as kings without us: and I would to God ye did reign, that we also might reign with you.

9 For I think that God hath set forth [4] us the apostles last, [m] as it were appointed to death: for [n] we are made a [5] spectacle unto the world, and to angels, and to men.

10 [o] We are [p] fools for Christ's sake, but ye are wise in Christ; [q] we are weak, but ye are strong; ye are honourable, but we are despised.

11 [r] Even unto this present hour we both hunger, and thirst, and [s] are naked, and [t] are buffeted, and have no certain dwellingplace;

12 [u] And labour, working with our own hands: [x] being reviled, we bless; being persecuted, we suffer it:

13 Being defamed, we intreat: [y] we are made as the filth of the world, and are the offscouring of all things unto this day.

14 I write not these things to shame you, but [z] as my beloved sons I warn you.

15 For though ye have ten thousand instructers in Christ, yet have ye not many fathers: for [a] in Christ Jesus I have begotten you through the gospel.

16 Wherefore I beseech you, [b] be ye followers of me.

17 For this cause have I sent unto you [c] Timotheus, [d] who is my beloved son, and faithful in the Lord, who shall bring you [e] into remembrance of my ways which be in Christ, as I [f] teach every where [g] in every church.

18 [h] Now some are puffed up, as though I would not come to you.

19 [i] But I will come to you shortly, [k] if the Lord will, and will know, not the speech of them which are puffed up, but the power.

20 For [l] the kingdom of God is not in word, but in power.

21 What will ye? [m] shall I come unto you with a rod, or in love, and in the spirit of meekness?

CHAPTER V.

The incestuous person is a cause of shame: the old leaven is to be purged out.

IT is reported commonly that there is fornication among you, and such fornication as is not so much as [a] named among the Gentiles, [b] that one should have his [c] father's wife.

2 [d] And ye are puffed up, and have not rather [e] mourned, that he that hath done this deed might be taken away from among you.

3 [f] For I verily, as absent in body, but present in spirit, have [2] judged already, as though I were present, concerning him that hath so done this deed,

4 In the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, when ye are gathered together, and my spirit, [g] with the power of our Lord Jesus Christ,

5 [h] To deliver such an one unto [i] Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus.

6 [k] Your glorying is not good. Know ye not that [l] a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump?

7 Purge out therefore the old leaven, that ye may be a new lump, as ye are unleavened. For even [m] Christ our [n] passover [3] is sacrificed for us:

8 Therefore [o] let us keep [4] the feast, [p] not with old leaven, neither [q] with the leaven of malice and wickedness; but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth.

9 I wrote unto you in an epistle [r] not to company with fornicators:

10 [s] Yet not altogether with the fornicators [t] of this world, or with the covetous, or extortioners, or with idolaters; for then must ye needs go [u] out of the world.

11 But now I have written unto you not to keep company, [x] if any man that is called a brother be a fornicator, or covetous, or an idolater, or a railer, or a drunkard, or an extortioner; with such an one [y] no not to eat.

12 For what have I to do to judge [z] them also that are without? do not ye judge [a] them that are within?

13 But them that are without God judgeth. Therefore [b] put away from among yourselves that wicked person.

CHAPTER VI.

Our bodies are the temples of the Holy Ghost, and must not, therefore, be defiled.

DARE any of you, having a matter against another, go to law before the unjust, and not before the saints?

2 Do ye not know that [a] the saints shall judge the world? and if the world shall be judged by you, are ye unworthy to judge the smallest matters?

3 Know ye not that we shall [b] judge angels? how much more things that pertain to this life?

4 [c] If then ye have judgments of things pertaining to this life, set them to judge who are least esteemed in the church.

5 I speak to your shame. Is it so, that there is not a wise man among you? no, not one that shall be able to judge between his brethren?

6 But brother goeth to law with brother, and that before the unbelievers.

7 Now therefore there is utterly a fault among you, because ye go to law one with another. [d] Why do ye not rather take wrong? why do ye not rather suffer yourselves to be defrauded?

8 Nay, ye do wrong, and defraud, [e] and that your brethren.

9 Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God? Be not deceived: [f] neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind,

10 Nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God.

11 And such were [g] some of you: [h] but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God.

12 [i] All things are lawful unto me, but all things are not [2] expedient: all things are lawful for me, but I will not be brought under the power of any.

13 [k] Meats for the belly, and the belly for meats: but God shall destroy both it and them. Now the body is not for fornication, but [l] for the Lord; [m] and the Lord for the body.

14 And [n] God hath both raised up the Lord, and will also raise up us [o] by his own power.

15 Know ye not that [p] your bodies are the members of Christ? shall I then take the members of Christ, and make them the members of an harlot? God forbid.

16 What? know ye not that he which is joined to an harlot is one body? for [q] two, saith he, shall be one flesh.

17 [r] But he that is joined unto the Lord is one spirit.

18 [s] Flee fornication. Every sin that a man doeth is without the body; but he that committeth fornication sinneth [t] against his own body.

19 What? [u] know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, [x] and ye are not your own?

20 For [y] ye are bought with a price: therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's.

CHAPTER VII.

Paul treateth of marriage. Every man must be content with his vocation.

NOW concerning the things whereof ye wrote unto me: [a] It is good for a man not to touch a woman.

2 Nevertheless, to avoid fornication, let every man have his own wife, and let every woman have her own husband.

3 [b] Let the husband render unto the wife due benevolence: and likewise also the wife unto the husband.

4 The wife hath not power of her own body, but the husband: and likewise also the husband hath not power of his own body, but the wife.

5 [c] Defraud ye not one the other, except it be with consent for a time, that ye may give yourselves to fasting and prayer; and come together again, that [d] Satan tempt you not for your incontinency.

6 But I speak this by permission, [e] and not of commandment.

7 For [f] I would that all men were [g] even as I myself. But [h] every man hath his proper gift of God, one after this manner, and another after that.

8 I say therefore to the unmarried and widows, [i] It is good for them if they abide even as I.

9 But [k] if they cannot contain, let them marry: for it is better to marry than to burn.

10 And unto the married I command, [l] yet not I, but the Lord, [m] Let not the wife depart from her husband:

11 But and if she depart, let her remain unmarried, or be reconciled to her husband: and let not the husband put away his wife.

12 But to the rest speak I, [n] not the Lord: If any brother hath a wife that believeth not, and she be pleased to dwell with him, let him not put her away.

13 And the woman which hath an husband that believeth not, and if he be pleased to dwell with her, let her not leave him.

14 For the unbelieving husband is sanctified by the wife, and the unbelieving wife is sanctified by the husband: else [o] were your children unclean; but now are they holy.

15 But if the unbelieving depart, let him depart. A brother or a sister is not under bondage in such cases: but God hath called us [p] [2] to peace.

16 For what knowest thou, O wife whether thou shalt [q] save thy husband? or [3] how knowest thou, O man, whether thou shalt save thy wife?

17 But as God hath distributed to every man, as the Lord hath called every one, so let him walk. And [r] so ordain I in all churches.

18 Is any man called being circumcised? let him not become uncircumcised. Is any called in uncircumcision? [s] let him not be circumcised.

19 [t] Circumcision is nothing, and uncircumcision is nothing, but [u] the keeping of the commandments of God.

20 Let every man abide in the same calling wherein he was called.

21 Art thou called being a servant? care not for it: but if thou mayest be made free, use it rather.

22 For he that is called in the Lord, being a servant, is [x] the Lord's [4] freeman: likewise also he that is called, being free, is [y] Christ's servant.

23 [z] Ye are bought with a price; be not ye the servants of men.

24 Brethren, [a] let every man, wherein he is called, therein abide with God.

25 Now concerning virgins [b] I have no commandment of the Lord: yet I give my judgment, as one [c] that hath obtained mercy of the Lord [d] to be faithful.

26 I suppose therefore that this is good for the present [5] distress, I say, [e] that it is good for a man so to be.

27 Art thou bound unto a wife? seek not to be loosed. Art thou loosed from a wife? seek not a wife.

28 But and if thou marry, thou hast not sinned; and if a virgin marry, she hath not sinned. Nevertheless such shall have trouble in the flesh: but I spare you.

29 But [f] this I say, brethren, the time is short: it remaineth, that both they that have wives be as though they had none;

30 And they that weep, as though they wept not; and they that rejoice, as though they rejoiced not; and they that buy, as though they possessed not;

31 And they that use this world, as not [g] abusing it: for [h] the fashion of this world passeth away.

32 But I would have you without carefulness. [i] He that is unmarried careth for the things [6] that belong to the Lord, how he may please the Lord:

33 But he that is married careth for the things that are of the world, how he may please his wife.

34 There is difference also between a wife and a virgin. The unmarried woman [k] careth for the things of the Lord, that she may be holy both in body and in spirit: but she that is married careth for the things of the world, how she may please her husband.

35 And this I speak for your own profit; not that I may cast a snare upon you, but for that which is comely, and that ye may attend upon the Lord without distraction.

36 But if any man think that he behaveth himself uncomely toward his virgin, if she pass the flower of her age, and need so require, let him do what he will, he sinneth not: let them marry.

37 Nevertheless he that standeth stedfast in his heart, having no necessity, but hath power over his own will, and hath so decreed in his heart that he will keep his virgin, doeth well.

38 [l] So then he that giveth her in marriage doeth well; but he that giveth her not in marriage doeth better.

39 [m] The wife is bound by the law as long as her husband liveth; but if her husband be dead, she is at liberty to be married to whom she will; [n] only in the Lord.

40 But she is happier if she so abide, [o] after my judgment: and [p] I think also that I have the Spirit of God.

CHAPTER VIII.

We must not abuse our Christian liberty, to the offence of our brethren.

NOW [a] as touching things offered unto idols, we know that we all have [b] knowledge. [c] Knowledge puffeth up, but charity edifieth.

2 And [d] if any man think that he knoweth any thing, he knoweth nothing yet as he ought to know.

3 But if any man love God, [e] the same is known of him.

4 As concerning therefore the eating of those things that are offered in sacrifice unto idols, we know that [f] an idol is nothing in the world, [g] and that there is none other God but one.

5 For though there be that are [h] called gods, whether in heaven or in earth, (as there be gods many, and lords many,)

6 But [i] to us there is but one God, the Father, [k] of whom are all things, and we [2] in him; and [l] one Lord Jesus Christ, [m] by whom are all things, and we by him.

7 Howbeit there is not in every man that knowledge: for some [n] with conscience of the idol unto this hour eat it as a thing offered unto an idol; and their conscience being weak is [o] defiled.

8 But [p] meat commendeth us not to God: for neither, if we eat, [3] are we the better; neither, if we eat not, [4] are we the worse.

9 But [q] take heed lest by any means this [5] liberty of your's become [r] a stumblingblock to them that are weak.

10 For if any man see thee which hast knowledge sit at meat in the idol's temple, shall not [s] the conscience of him which is weak be [2] emboldened to eat those things which are offered to idols;

11 And [t] through thy knowledge shall the weak brother perish, for whom Christ died?

12 But [u] when ye sin so against the brethren, and wound their weak conscience, ye sin against Christ.

13 Wherefore, [x] if meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend.

CHAPTER IX.

Paul's selfdenial for the gospel. Our life is like unto a race.

[a] AM I not an apostle? am I not free? [b] have I not seen Jesus Christ our Lord? [c] are not ye my work in the Lord?

2 If I be not an apostle unto others, yet doubtless I am to you: for [d] the seal of mine apostleship are ye in the Lord.

3 Mine answer to them that do examine me is this,

4 [e] Have we not power to eat and to drink?

5 Have we not power to lead about a sister, a [3] wife, as well as other apostles, and as [f] the brethren of the Lord, and [g] Cephas?

6 Or I only and Barnabas, [h] have not we power to forbear working?

7 Who [i] goeth a warfare any time at his own charges? who [k] planteth a vineyard, and eateth not of the fruit thereof? or who [l] feedeth a flock, and eateth not of the milk of the flock?

8 Say I these things as a man? or saith not the law the same also?

9 For it is written in the law of Moses, [m] Thou shalt not muzzle the mouth of the ox that treadeth out the corn. Doth God take care for oxen?

10 Or saith he it altogether for our sakes? For our sakes, no doubt, this is written: that [n] he that ploweth should plow in hope; and that he that thresheth in hope should be partaker of his hope.

11 [o] If we have sown unto you spiritual things, is it a great thing if we shall reap your carnal things?

12 If others be partakers of this power over you, are not we rather? [p] Nevertheless we have not used this power; but suffer all things, [q] lest we should hinder the gospel of Christ.

13 [r] Do ye not know that they which minister about holy things [4] live of the things of the temple? and they which wait at the altar are partakers with the altar?

14 Even so [s] hath the Lord ordained [t] that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel.

15 But [u] I have used none of these things: neither have I written these things, that it should be so done unto me: for [x] it were better for me to die, than that any man should make my glorying void.

16 For though I preach the gospel, I have nothing to glory of: for [y] necessity is laid upon me; yea, woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel!

17 For if I do this thing willingly, [z] I have a reward: but if against my will, [a] a dispensation of the gospel is committed unto me.

18 What is my reward then? Verily that, [b] when I preach the gospel, I may make the gospel of Christ without charge, that I [c] abuse not my power in the gospel.

19 For though I be [d] free from all men, yet have [e] I made myself servant unto all, [f] that I might gain the more.

20 And [g] unto the Jews I became as a Jew, that I might gain the Jews; to them that are under the law, as under the law, that I might gain them that are under the law;

21 [h] To [i] them that are without law, as without law, ([k] being not without law to God, but under the law to Christ,) that I might gain them that are without law.

22 [l] To the weak became I as weak, that I might gain the weak: [m] I am made all things to all men, [n] that I might by all means save some.

23 And this I do for the gospel's sake, that I might be partaker thereof with you.

24 Know ye not that they which run in a race run all, but one receiveth the prize? [o] So run, that ye may obtain.

25 And every man that [p] striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things. Now they do it to obtain a corruptible crown; but we [q] an incorruptible.

26 I therefore so run, [r] not as uncertainly; so fight I, not as one that beateth the air:

27 [s] But I keep under my body, and [t] bring it into subjection: lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be [u] a castaway.

CHAPTER X.

We must fly from idolatry, and in things indifferent we must have regard of our brethren.

MOREOVER, brethren, I would not that ye should be ignorant, how that all our fathers were under [a] the cloud, and all passed through [b] the sea;

2 And were all baptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea;
3 And did all eat the same [c] spiritual meat;
4 And did all drink the same [d] spiritual drink: for they drank of that spiritual Rock that [2] followed them: and that Rock was Christ.
5 But with many of them God was not well pleased: for they [e] were overthrown in the wilderness.
6 Now these things were [2] our examples, to the intent we should not lust after evil things, as [f] they also lusted.
7 [g] Neither be ye idolaters, as were some of them; as it is written, [h] The people sat down to eat and drink, and rose up to play.
8 [i] Neither let us commit fornication, as some of them committed, and [k] fell in one day three and twenty thousand.
9 Neither let us tempt Christ, as [l] some of them also tempted, and [m] were destroyed of serpents.
10 Neither murmur ye, as [n] some of them also murmured, and [o] were destroyed of [p] the destroyer.
11 Now all these things happened unto them for [3] ensamples: and [q] they are written for our admonition, [r] upon whom the ends of the world are come.
12 Wherefore [s] let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall.
13 There hath no temptation taken you but such as is [4] common to man: but [t] God is faithful, [u] who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also [x] make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it.
14 Wherefore, my dearly beloved, [y] flee from idolatry.
15 I speak as to [z] wise men; judge ye what I say.
16 [a] The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? [b] The bread which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Christ?
17 For [c] we being many are one bread, and one body: for we are all partakers of that one bread.
18 Behold [d] Israel [e] after the flesh: [f] are not they which eat of the sacrifices partakers of the altar?
19 What say I then? [g] that the idol is any thing, or that which is offered in sacrifice to idols is any thing?
20 But I say, that the things which the Gentiles [h] sacrifice, they sacrifice to devils, and not to God: and I would not that ye should have fellowship with devils.
21 [i] Ye cannot drink the cup of the Lord, and [k] the cup of devils: ye cannot be partakers of the Lord's table, and of the table of devils.
22 Do we [l] provoke the Lord to jealousy? [m] are we stronger than he?
23 [n] All things are lawful for me, but all things are not expedient: all things are lawful for me, but all things edify not.
24 [o] Let no man seek his own, but every man another's wealth.
25 [p] Whatsoever is sold in the shambles, that eat, asking no question for conscience sake:
26 For [q] the earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof.
27 If any of them that believe not bid you to a feast, and ye be disposed to go; [r] whatsoever is set before you, eat, asking no question for conscience sake.
28 But if any man say unto you, This is offered in sacrifice unto idols, eat not [s] for his sake that shewed it, and for conscience sake: for [t] the earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof:
29 Conscience, I say, not thine own, but of the other: for [u] why is my liberty judged of another man's conscience?
30 For if I by [2] grace be a partaker, why am I evil spoken of for that [x] for which I give thanks?
31 [y] Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God.
32 [z] Give none offence, neither to the Jews, nor to the [3] Gentiles, nor to [a] the church of God:
33 Even as [b] I please all men in all things, [c] not seeking mine own profit, but the profit of many, that they may be saved.

CHAPTER XI.

Rules for divine worship. Institution of the Lord's supper.

BE [a] ye followers of me, even as I also am of Christ.
2 Now I praise you, brethren, [b] that ye remember me in all things, and [c] keep the [4] ordinances, as I delivered them to you.
3 But I would have you know, that [d] the head of every man is Christ; and [e] the head of the woman is the man; and [f] the head of Christ is God.
4 Every man praying or [g] prophesying, having his head covered, dishonoureth his head.
5 But [h] every woman that prayeth or prophesieth with her head uncovered dishonoureth her head: for that is even all one as if she were [i] shaven.

6 For if the woman be not covered, let her also be shorn: but if it be [k] a shame for a woman to be shorn or shaven, let her be covered.

7 For a man indeed ought not to cover his head, forasmuch as [l] he is the image and glory of God: but the woman is the glory of the man.

8 For [m] the man is not of the woman; but the woman of the man.

9 [n] Neither was the man created for the woman; but the woman for the man.

10 For this cause ought the woman [o] to have [5] power on her head [p] because of the angels.

11 Nevertheless [q] neither is the man without the woman, neither the woman without the man, in the Lord.

12 For as the woman is of the man, even so is the man also by the woman; [r] but all things of God.

13 Judge in yourselves: is it comely that a woman pray unto God uncovered?

14 Doth not even nature itself teach you, that, if a man have long hair, it is a shame unto him?

15 But if a woman have long hair, it is a glory to her: for her hair is given her for a [2] covering.

16 But [s] if any man seem to be contentious, we have no such custom, [t] neither the churches of God.

17 Now in this that I declare unto you I praise you not, that ye come together not for the better, but for the worse.

18 For first of all, when ye come together in the church, [u] I hear that there be [3] divisions among you; and I partly believe it.

19 For [x] there must be also [4] heresies among you, [y] that they which are approved may be made manifest among you.

20 When ye come together therefore into one place, [5] this is not to eat the Lord's supper.

21 For in eating every one taketh before other his own supper: and one is hungry, and [z] another is drunken.

22 What? have ye not houses to eat and to drink in? or despise ye [a] the church of God, and [b] shame [6] them that have not? What shall I say to you? shall I praise you in this? I praise you not.

23 For [c] I have received of the Lord that which also I delivered unto you, [d] That the Lord Jesus the same night in which he was betrayed took bread:

24 And when he had given thanks, he brake it, and said, Take, eat: this is my body, which is broken for you: this do [7] in remembrance of me.

25 After the same manner also he took the cup, when he had supped, saying, This cup is the new testament in my blood: this do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me.

26 For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, [8] ye do shew the Lord's death [e] till he come.

27 [f] Wherefore whosoever shall eat this bread, and drink this cup of the Lord, unworthily, shall be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord.

28 But [g] let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that bread, and drink of that cup.

29 For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh [9] damnation to himself, not discerning the Lord's body.

30 For this cause many are weak and sickly among you, and many sleep.

31 For [h] if we would judge ourselves, we should not be judged.

32 But when we are judged, [i] we are chastened of the Lord, that we should not be condemned with the world.

33 Wherefore, my brethren, when ye come together to eat, tarry one for another.

34 And if any man [k] hunger, let him eat at [l] home; that ye come not together unto [2] condemnation. And the rest [m] will I set in order when [n] I come.

CHAPTER XII.

Diversity of spiritual gifts, after which manner we should make up the mystical body of Christ.

NOW [a] concerning spiritual gifts, brethren, I would not have you ignorant.

2 Ye know [b] that ye were Gentiles, carried away unto these [c] dumb idols, even as ye were led.

3 Wherefore I give you to understand, [d] that no man speaking by the Spirit of God calleth Jesus [3] accursed: and [e] that no man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost.

4 Now [f] there are diversities of gifts, but [g] the same Spirit.

5 [h] And there are differences of [4] administrations, but the same Lord.

6 And there are diversities of operations, but it is the same God [i] which worketh all in all.

7 [k] But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal.

8 For to one is given by the Spirit [l] the word of wisdom; to another [m] the word of knowledge by the same Spirit;

9 [n] To another faith by the same Spirit; to another [o] the gifts of healing by the same Spirit;

10 [p] To another the working of miracles; to another [q] prophecy; [r] to another discerning of spirits; to another [s] divers kinds of tongues; to another the interpretation of tongues:

11 But all these worketh that one and the selfsame Spirit, [t] dividing to every man severally [u] as he will.

12 For [x] as the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body: [y] so also is Christ.

13 For [z] by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, [a] whether we be Jews or [5] Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and [b] have been all made to drink into one Spirit.

14 For the body is not one member, but many.

15 If the foot shall say, Because I am not the hand, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body?

16 And if the ear shall say, Because I am not the eye, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body?

17 If the whole body were an eye, where were the hearing? If the whole were hearing, where were the smelling?

18 But now hath [c] God set the members every one of them in the body, [d] as it hath pleased him.

19 And if they were all one member, where were the body?

20 But now are they many members, yet but one body.

21 And the eye cannot say unto the hand, I have no need of thee: nor again the head to the feet, I have no need of you.

22 Nay, much more those members of the body, which seem to be more feeble, are necessary:

23 And those members of the body, which we think to be less honourable, upon these we [2] bestow more abundant honour; and our uncomely parts have more abundant comeliness.

24 For our comely parts have no need: but God hath tempered the body together, having given more abundant honour to that part which lacked:

25 That there should be no [3] schism in the body; but that the members should have the same care one for another.

26 And whether one member suffer, all the members suffer with it; or one member be honoured, all the members rejoice with it.

27 Now [e] ye are the body of Christ, and [f] members in particular.

28 And [g] God hath set some in the church, first [h] apostles, secondarily [i] prophets, thirdly teachers, after that [k] miracles, then [l] gifts of healings, [m] helps, [n] governments, [4] diversities of tongues.

29 Are all apostles? are all prophets? are all teachers? are all [5] workers of miracles?

30 Have all the gifts of healing? do all speak with tongues? do all interpret?

31 But [o] covet earnestly the best gifts: and yet shew I unto you a more excellent way.

CHAPTER XIII.

All gifts are nothing worth without charity, which is preferred before hope and faith.

THOUGH I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal.

2 And though I have the gift of [a] prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, [b] so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing.

3 And [c] though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing.

4 [d] Charity suffereth long, and is kind; charity envieth not; charity [2] vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up,

5 Doth not behave itself unseemly, [e] seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil;

6 [f] Rejoiceth not in iniquity, but [g] rejoiceth [3] in the truth;

7 [h] Beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things.

8 Charity never faileth: but whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge, it shall vanish away.

9 [i] For we know in part, and we prophesy in part.

10 But when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away.

11 When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I [4]thought as a child: but when I became a man, I put away childish things.

12 For [k] now we see through a glass, [5] darkly; but then [l] face to face: now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known.

13 And now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity.

CHAPTER XIV.

The true use of prophecy and speaking with tongues taught, and the abuse taxed.

FOLLOW after charity, and [a] desire spiritual gifts, [b] but rather that ye may prophesy.

2 For he that [c] speaketh in an unknown tongue speaketh not unto men, but unto God: for no man [6] understandeth him; howbeit in the spirit he speaketh mysteries.

3 But he that prophesieth speaketh unto men to edification, and exhortation, and comfort.

4 He that speaketh in an unknown tongue edifieth himself; but he that prophesieth edifieth the church.

5 I would that ye all spake with tongues, but rather that ye prophesied: for greater is he that prophesieth than he that speaketh with tongues, except he interpret, that the church may receive edifying.

6 Now, brethren, if I come unto you speaking with tongues, what shall I profit you, except I shall speak to you either by [d] revelation, or by knowledge, or by prophesying, or by doctrine?

7 And even things without life giving sound, whether pipe or harp, except they give a distinction in the [7] sounds, how shall it be known what is piped or harped?

8 For if the trumpet give an uncertain sound, who shall prepare himself to the battle?

9 So likewise ye, except ye utter by the tongue words [2] easy to be understood, how shall it be known what is spoken? for ye shall speak into the air.

10 There are, it may be, so many kinds of voices in the world, and none of them is without signification.

11 Therefore if I know not the meaning of the voice, I shall be unto him that speaketh a barbarian, and he that speaketh shall be a barbarian unto me.

12 Even so ye, forasmuch as ye are zealous [3] of spiritual gifts, seek that ye may excel to the edifying of the church.

13 Wherefore let him that speaketh in an unknown tongue pray that he may interpret.

14 For if I pray in an unknown tongue, my spirit prayeth, but my understanding is unfruitful.

15 What is it then? I will pray with the spirit, and I will pray with the understanding also: [e] I will sing with the spirit, and I will sing [f] with the understanding also.

16 Else when thou shalt bless with the spirit, how shall he that occupieth the room of the unlearned say Amen [g] at thy giving of thanks, seeing he understandeth not what thou sayest?

17 For thou verily givest thanks well, but the other is not edified.

18 I thank my God, I speak with tongues more than ye all:

19 Yet in the church I had rather speak five words with my understanding, that by my voice I might teach others also, than ten thousand words in an unknown tongue.

20 Brethren, [h] be not children in understanding: howbeit in malice [i] be ye children, but in understanding be [4] men.

21 [k] In the law it is [l] written, With men of other tongues and other lips will I speak unto this people; and yet for all that will they not hear me, saith the Lord.

22 Wherefore tongues are for a sign, not to them that believe, but to them that believe not: but prophesying serveth not for them that believe not, but for them which believe.

23 If therefore the whole church be come together into one place, and all speak with tongues, and there come in those that are unlearned, or unbelievers, [m] will they not say that ye are mad?

24 But if all prophesy, and there come in one that believeth not, or one unlearned, he is convinced of all, he is judged of all:

25 And thus are the secrets of his heart made manifest; and so falling down on his face he will worship God, and report [n] that God is in you of a truth.

26 How is it then, brethren? when ye come together, every one of you hath a psalm, [o] hath a doctrine, hath a tongue, hath a revelation, hath an interpretation. [p] Let all things be done unto edifying.

27 If any man speak in an unknown tongue, let it be by two, or at the most by three, and that by course; and let one interpret.

28 But if there be no interpreter, let him keep silence in the church; and let him speak to himself, and to God.

29 Let the prophets speak two or three, and [q] let the other judge.

30 If any thing be revealed to another that sitteth by, [r] let the first hold his peace.

31 For ye may all prophesy one by one, that all may learn, and all may be comforted.

32 And [s] the spirits of the prophets are subject to the prophets.

33 For God is not the author of [2] confusion, but of peace, [t] as in all churches of the saints.

34 [u] Let your women keep silence in the churches: for it is not permitted unto them to speak; but [x] they are commanded to be under obedience, as also saith the [y] law.

35 And if they will learn any thing, let them ask their husbands at home: for it is a shame for women to speak in the church.

36 What? came the word of God out from you? or came it unto you only?

37 [z] If any man think himself to be a prophet, or spiritual, let him acknowledge that the things that I write unto you are the commandments of the Lord.

38 But if any man be ignorant, let him be ignorant.

39 Wherefore, brethren, [a] covet to prophesy, and forbid not to speak with tongues.

40 [b] Let all things be done decently and in order.

CHAPTER XV.

Proof, by Christ's resurrection, of the necessity of our resurrection: the manner thereof.

MOREOVER, brethren, I declare unto you the gospel [a] which I preached unto you, which also ye have received, and [b] wherein ye stand;

2 [c] By which also ye are saved, if ye [3] keep in memory [4] what I preached unto you, unless [d] ye have believed in vain.

3 For [e] I delivered unto you first of all that [f] which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins [g] according to the scriptures;

4 And that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day [h] according to the scriptures:

5 [i] And that he was seen of Cephas, then [k] of the twelve:

6 After that, he was seen of above five hundred brethren at once; of whom the greater part remain unto this present, but some are fallen asleep.

7 After that, he was seen of James; then [l] of all the apostles.

8 [m] And last of all he was seen of me also, as of [2] one born out of due time.

9 For I am [n] the least of the apostles, that am not meet to be called an apostle, because [o] I persecuted the church of God.

10 But [p] by the grace of God I am what I am: and his grace which was bestowed upon me was not in vain; but [q] I laboured more abundantly than they all: [r] yet not I, but the grace of God which was with me.

11 Therefore whether it were I or they, so we preach, and so ye believed.

12 Now if Christ be preached that he rose from the dead, how say some among you that there is no resurrection of the dead?

13 But if there be no resurrection of the dead, [s] then is Christ not risen:

14 And if Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain.

15 Yea, and we are found false witnesses of God; because [t] we have testified of God that he raised up Christ: whom he raised not up, if so be that the dead rise not.

16 For if the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised:

17 And if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; [u] ye are yet in your sins.

18 Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished.

19 [x] If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable.

20 But now [y] is Christ risen from the dead, and become [z] the firstfruits of them that slept.

21 For [a] since by man came death, [b] by man came also the resurrection of the dead.

22 For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive.

23 But [c] every man in his own order: Christ the firstfruits; afterward they that are Christ's at his coming.

24 Then cometh the end, when he shall have delivered up [d] the kingdom to God, even the Father; when he shall have put down all rule and all authority and power.

25 For he must reign, [e] till he hath put all enemies under his feet.

26 [f] The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death.

27 For he [g] hath put all things under his feet. But when he saith all things are put under him, it is manifest that he is excepted, which did put all things under him.

28 [h] And when all things shall be subdued unto him, then [i] shall the Son also himself be subject unto him that put all things under him, that God may be all in all.

29 Else what shall they do which are baptized for the dead, if the dead rise not at all? why are they then baptized for the dead?

30 And [k] why stand we in jeopardy every hour?

31 I protest by [2 l] your rejoicing which I have in Christ Jesus our Lord, [m] I die daily.

32 If [3] after the manner of men [n] I have fought with beasts at Ephesus, what advantageth it me, if the dead rise not? [o] let us eat and drink; for to morrow we die.

33 Be not deceived: [p] evil communications corrupt good manners.

34 [q] Awake to righteousness, and sin not; [r] for some have not the knowledge of God: [s] I speak this to your shame.

35 But some man will say, [t] How are the dead raised up? and with what body do they come?

36 Thou fool, [u] that which thou sowest is not quickened, except it die:

37 And that which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body that shall be, but bare grain, it may chance of wheat, or of some other grain:

38 But God giveth it a body as it hath pleased him, and to every seed his own body.

39 All flesh is not the same flesh: but there is one kind of flesh of men, another flesh of beasts, another of fishes, [d] and another of birds.

40 There are also celestial bodies, and bodies terrestrial: but the glory of the celestial is one, and the glory of the terrestrial is another.

41 There is one glory of the sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars: for one star differeth from another star in glory.

42 [x] So also is the resurrection of the dead. It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption:

43 [y] It is sown in dishonour; it is raised in glory: it is sown in weakness; it is raised in power:

44 It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body. There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body.

45 And so it is written, The first man Adam [z] was made a living soul; [a] the last Adam was made [b] a quickening spirit.

46 Howbeit that was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural; and afterward that which is spiritual.

47 [c] The first man is of the earth, [d] earthy: the second man is the Lord [e] from heaven.

48 As is the earthy, such are they also that are earthy: [f] and as is the heavenly, such are they also that are heavenly.

49 And [g] as we have borne the image of the earthy, [h] we shall also bear the image of the heavenly.

50 Now this I say, brethren, that [i] flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption.

51 Behold, I shew you a mystery; [k] We shall not all sleep, [l] but we shall all be changed, 52 In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: [m] for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed.

53 For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and [n] this mortal must put on immortality.

54 So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, [o] Death is swallowed up in victory.

55 [p] O death, where is thy sting? O [2] grave, where is thy victory?

56 The sting of death is sin; and [q] the strength of sin is the law.

57 [r] But thanks be to God, which giveth us [s] the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.

58 [t] Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye stedfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know [u] that your labour is not in vain in the Lord.

CHAPTER XVI.

Paul commendeth Timothy, and shutteth up his epistle with friendly admonitions.

NOW concerning [a] the collection for the saints, as I have given order to the churches of Galatia, even so do ye.

2 [b] Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come.

3 And when I come, [c] whomsoever ye shall approve by your letters, them will I send to bring your [3] liberality unto Jerusalem.

4 [d] And if it be meet that I go also, they shall go with me.

5 Now I will come unto you, [e] when I shall pass through Macedonia: for I do pass through Macedonia.

6 And it may be that I will abide, yea, and winter with you, that ye may [f] bring me on my journey whithersoever I go.

7 For I will not see you now by the way; but I trust to tarry a while with you, [g] if the Lord permit.

8 But I will tarry at Ephesus until Pentecost.

9 For [h] a great door and effectual is opened unto me, and [i] there are many adversaries.

10 Now [k] if Timotheus come, see that he may be with you without fear: for [l] he worketh the work of the Lord, as I also do.

11 [m] Let no man therefore despise him: but conduct him forth [n] in peace, that he may come unto me: for I look for him with the brethren.

12 As touching our brother [o] Apollos, I greatly desired him to come unto you with the brethren: but his will was not at all to come at this time; but he will come when he shall have convenient time.

13 [p] Watch ye, [q] stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, [r] be strong.

14 [s] Let all your things be done with charity.

15 I beseech you, brethren, (ye know [t] the house of Stephanas, that it is [u] the firstfruits of Achaia, and that they have addicted themselves to [x] the ministry of the saints,)

16 [y] That ye submit yourselves unto such, and to every one that helpeth with us, and [z] laboureth.

17 I am glad of the coming of Stephanas and Fortunatus and Achaicus: [a] for that which was lacking on your part they have supplied.

18 [b] For they have refreshed my spirit and your's: therefore [c] acknowledge ye them that are such.

19 The churches of Asia salute you. Aquila and Priscilla salute you much in the Lord, [d] with the church that is in their house.

20 All the brethren greet you. [e] Greet ye one another with an holy kiss.

21 [f] The salutation of me Paul with mine own hand.

22 If any man [g] love not the Lord Jesus Christ, [h] let him be Anathema [i] Maran-atha.

23 [k] The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you.

24 My love be with you all in Christ Jesus. Amen.

¶ The first epistle to the Corinthians was written from Philippi by Stephanas, and Fortunatus, and Achaicus, and Timotheus.

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS.

CHAPTER I.

Paul encourageth them against troubles, and testifieth of his sincerity in preaching the truth of the gospel.

PAUL, [a] an apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God, and Timothy our brother, unto the church of God which is at Corinth, [b] with all the saints which are in all Achaia:

2 [c] Grace be to you and peace from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

3 [d] Blessed be God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies, and the God of all comfort;

4 Who comforteth us in all our tribulation, that we may be able to comfort them which are in any trouble, by the comfort wherewith we ourselves are comforted of God.

5 For as [e] the sufferings of Christ abound in us, so our consolation also aboundeth by Christ.

6 And whether we be afflicted, [f] it is for your consolation and salvation, which [2] is effectual in the enduring of the same sufferings which we also suffer: or whether we be comforted, it is for your consolation and salvation.

7 And our hope of you is stedfast, knowing, that [g] as ye are partakers of the sufferings, so shall ye be also of the consolation.

8 For we would not, brethren, have you ignorant of [h] our trouble which came to us in Asia, that we were pressed out of measure, above strength, insomuch that we despaired even of life:

9 But we had the [2] sentence of death in ourselves, that we should [e] not trust in ourselves, but in God which raiseth the dead:

10 [k] Who delivered us from so great a death, and doth deliver: in whom we trust that he will yet deliver us;

11 Ye also [l] helping together by prayer for us, that [m] for the gift bestowed upon us by the means of many persons thanks may be given by many on our behalf.

12 For our rejoicing is this, the testimony of our conscience, that in simplicity and [n] godly sincerity, [o] not with fleshly wisdom, but by the grace of God, we have had our conversation in the world, and more abundantly to you-ward.

13 For we write none other things unto you, than what ye read or acknowledge; and I trust ye shall acknowledge even to the end;

14 As also ye have acknowledged us in part, [p] that we are your rejoicing, even as [q] ye also are our's in the day of the Lord Jesus.

15 And in this confidence [r] I was minded to come unto you before, that ye might have [s] a second [2] benefit;

16 And to pass by you into Macedonia, and [t] to come again out of Macedonia unto you, and of you to be brought on my way toward Judæa.

17 When I therefore was thus minded, did I use lightness? or the things that I purpose, do I purpose [u] according to the flesh, that with me there should be yea yea, and nay nay?

18 But as God is true, our [3] word toward you was not yea and nay.

19 For [x] the Son of God, Jesus Christ, who was preached among you by us, even by me and Silvanus and Timotheus, was not yea and nay, [y] but in him was yea.

20 [z] For all the promises of God in him are yea, and in him Amen, unto the glory of God by us.

21 Now he which stablisheth us with you in Christ, and [a] hath anointed us, is God;

22 Who [b] hath also sealed us, and [c] given the earnest of the Spirit in our hearts.

23 Moreover [d] I call God for a record upon my soul, [e] that to spare you I came not as yet unto Corinth.

24 Not for [f] that we have dominion over your faith, but are helpers of your joy: for [g] by faith ye stand.

CHAPTER II.

He declareth why he departed from Troas, and the success God gave to his preaching.

BUT I determined this with myself, [a] that I would not come again to you in heaviness.

2 For if I make you sorry, who is he then that maketh me glad, but the same which is made sorry by me?

3 And I wrote this same unto you, lest, when I came, [b] I should have sorrow from them of whom I ought to rejoice; [c] having confidence in you all, that my joy is the joy of you all.

4 For out of much affliction and anguish of heart I wrote unto you with many tears; [d] not that ye should be grieved, but that ye might know the love which I have more abundantly unto you.

5 But [e] if any have caused grief, he hath not [f] grieved me, but in part: that I may not overcharge you all.

6 Sufficient to such a man is this [2] punishment, which was inflicted [g] of many.

7 [h] So that contrariwise ye ought rather to forgive him, and comfort him, lest perhaps such a one should be swallowed up with overmuch sorrow.

8 Wherefore I beseech you that ye would confirm your love toward him.

9 For to this end also did I write, that I might know the proof of you, whether ye be [i] obedient in all things.

10 To whom ye forgive any thing, I forgive also: for if I forgave any thing, to whom I forgave it, for your sakes forgave I it [3] in the person of Christ;

11 Lest Satan should get an advantage of us: for we are not ignorant of his devices.

12 Furthermore, [k] when I came to Troas to preach Christ's gospel, and [l] a door was opened unto me of the Lord,

13 [m] I had no rest in my spirit, because I found not Titus my brother: but taking my leave of them, I went from thence into Macedonia.

14 Now thanks be unto God, which always causeth us to triumph in Christ, and maketh manifest [n] the savour of his knowledge by us in every place.

15 For we are unto God a sweet savour of Christ, [o] in them that are saved, and [p] in them that perish:

16 [q] To the one we are the savour of death unto death; and to the other the savour of life unto life. And [r] who is sufficient for these things?

17 For we are not as many, which

[4] [s] corrupt the word of God: but as [t] of sincerity, but as of God, in the sight of God speak we [5] in Christ.

CHAPTER III.

He sheweth the faith and graces of the Corinthians to be a sufficient commendation of his ministry.

DO [a] we begin again to commend ourselves? or need we, as some others, [b] epistles of commendation to you, or letters of commendation from you?

2 [c] Ye are our epistle written in our hearts, known and read of all men:

3 Forasmuch as ye are manifestly declared to be the epistle of Christ [d] ministered by us, written not with ink, but with the Spirit of the living God; not [e] in tables of stone, but [f] in fleshy tables of the heart.

4 And such trust have we through Christ to God-ward:

5 [g] Not that we are sufficient of ourselves to think any thing as of ourselves; but [h] our sufficiency is of God;

6 Who also hath made us able [i] ministers of [k] the new testament; not [l] of the letter, but of the spirit: for [m] the letter killeth, [n] but the spirit [2] giveth life.

7 But if [o] the ministration of death, [p] written and engraven in stones, was glorious, [q] so that the children of Israel could not stedfastly behold the face of Moses for the glory of his countenance; which glory was to be done away:

8 How shall not [r] the ministration of the spirit be rather glorious?

9 For if the ministration of condemnation be glory, much more doth the ministration [s] of righteousness exceed in glory.

10 For even that which was made glorious had no glory in this respect, by reason of the glory that excelleth.

11 For if that which is done away was glorious, much more that which remaineth is glorious.

12 Seeing then that we have such hope, we use great [3] plainness of speech:

13 And not as Moses, [u] which put a vail over his face, that the children of Israel could not stedfastly look to [x] the end of that which is abolished:

14 But [y] their minds were blinded: for until this day remaineth the same vail untaken away in the reading of the old testament; which vail is done away in Christ.

15 But even unto this day, when Moses is read, the vail is upon their heart.

16 Nevertheless [z] when it shall turn to the Lord, [a] the vail shall be taken away.

17 Now [b] the Lord is that Spirit: and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty.

18 But we all, with open face beholding [c] as in a glass [d] the glory of the Lord, [e] are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as [4] by the Spirit of the Lord.

CHAPTER IV.

He declareth the persecutions he endured to be for the benefit of the church.

THEREFORE seeing we have [a] this ministry, [b] as we have received mercy, we faint not;

2 But have renounced the hidden things of [5] dishonesty, not walking in craftiness, [c] nor handling the word of God deceitfully; but [d] by manifestation of the truth [e] commending ourselves to every man's conscience in the sight of God.

3 But if our gospel be hid, [f] it is hid to them that are lost:

4 In whom [g] the god of this world [h] hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest [i] the light of the glorious gospel of Christ, [k] who is the image of God, should shine unto them.

5 [l] For we preach not ourselves, but Christ Jesus the Lord; and [m] ourselves your servants for Jesus' sake.

6 For God, [n] who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, [2] hath [o] shined in our hearts, to give [p] the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ.

7 But we have this treasure in [q] earthen vessels, [r] that the excellency of the power may be of God, and not of us.

8 We are [s] troubled on every side, yet not distressed; we are perplexed, but [3] not in despair;

9 Persecuted, but not forsaken; [t] cast down, but not destroyed;

10 [u] Always bearing about in the body the dying of the Lord Jesus, [x] that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our body.

11 For we which live [y] are alway delivered unto death for Jesus' sake, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our mortal flesh.

12 So then [z] death worketh in us, but life in you.

13 We having [a] the same spirit of faith, according as it is written, [b] I believed, and therefore have I spoken; we also believe, and therefore speak;

14 Knowing that [c] he which raised up the Lord Jesus shall raise up us also by Jesus, and shall present us with you.

15 For [d] all things are for your sakes, that [e] the abundant grace might through the thanksgiving of many redound to the glory of God.

16 For which cause we faint not; but though our outward man perish, yet [f] the inward man is renewed day by day.

17 For [g] our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory;

18 [h] While we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen: for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal.

CHAPTER V.

He declareth that he endeavoureth by his ministry to reconcile others also in Christ to God.

FOR we know that if [a] our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.

2 For in this [b] we groan, earnestly desiring to be clothed upon with our house which is from heaven:

3 If so be that [c] being clothed we shall not be found naked.

4 For we that are in this tabernacle do groan, being burdened: not for that we would be unclothed, but [d] clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life.

5 Now [e] he that hath wrought us for the selfsame thing is God, who also [f] hath given unto us the earnest of the Spirit.

6 Therefore we are always confident, knowing that, whilst we are at home in the body, we are absent from the Lord:

7 (For [g] we walk by faith, not by sight:)

8 We are confident, I say, and [h] willing rather to be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord.

9 Wherefore we [2] labour, that, whether present or absent, we may be accepted of him.

10 [i] For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ; [k] that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad.

11 Knowing therefore [l] the terror of the Lord, we persuade men; but [m] we are made manifest unto God; and I trust also are made manifest in your consciences.

12 For [n] we commend not ourselves again unto you, but give you occasion [o] to glory on our behalf, that ye may have somewhat to answer them which glory [3] in appearance, and not in heart.

13 For [p] whether we be beside ourselves, it is to God: or whether we be sober, it is for your cause.

14 For the love of Christ constraineth us; because we thus judge, that [q] if one died for all, then were all dead:

15 And that he died for all, [r] that they which live should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto him which died for them, and rose again.

16 [s] Wherefore henceforth know we no man after the flesh: yea, though we have known Christ after the flesh, [t] yet now henceforth know we him no more.

17 Therefore if any man [u] be in Christ, [4] he is [x] a new creature: [y] old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new.

18 And all things are of God, [z] who hath reconciled us to himself by Jesus Christ, and hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation;

19 To wit, that [a] God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them; and hath [5] committed unto us the word of reconciliation.

20 Now then we are [b] ambassadors for Christ, as [c] though God did beseech you by us: we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God.

21 For [d] he hath made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made [e] the righteousness of God in him.

CHAPTER VI.

The faithful ministry of Paul approved by his integrity of life, and patient endurance of affliction.

WE then, as [a] workers together with him, [b] beseech you also [c] that ye receive not the grace of God in vain.

2 (For he saith, [d] I have heard thee in a time accepted, and in the day of salvation have I succoured thee: behold, now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation.)

3 [e] Giving no offence in any thing, that the ministry be not blamed:

4 But in all things [2] approving ourselves [f] as the ministers of God, in much patience, in afflictions, in necessities, in distresses,

5 [g] In stripes, in imprisonments, [3] in tumults, in labours, in watchings, in fastings;

6 By pureness, by knowledge, by long-suffering, by kindness, by the Holy Ghost, by love unfeigned,

7 [h] By the word of truth, by [i] the power of God, by [k] the armour of righteousness on the right hand and on the left,

8 By honour and dishonour, by evil report and good report: as deceivers, and yet true;

9 As unknown, and [l] yet well known; [m] as dying, and, behold, we live; [n] as chastened, and not killed;

10 As sorrowful, yet alway rejoicing; as poor, yet making many rich; as having nothing, and yet possessing all things.

11 O ye Corinthians, our mouth is open unto you, [o] our heart is enlarged.

12 Ye are not straitened in us, but [p] ye are straitened in your own bowels.

13 Now for a recompence in the same, (I speak as unto my children,) be ye also enlarged.

14 [r] Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: for [s] what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness?

15 And what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel?

16 And what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for [t] ye are the temple of the living God; as God hath said, [u] I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people.

17 [x] Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, 18 [y] And will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty.

CHAPTER VII.

He exhorteth them to purity of life, and declareth the comfort he took from Titus' report.

HAVING [a] therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God.

2 Receive us; we have wronged no man, we have corrupted no man, [b] we have defrauded no man.

3 I speak not this to condemn you: for [c] I have said before, that ye are in our hearts to die and live with you.

4 [d] Great is my boldness of speech toward you, [e] great is my glorying of you: [f] I am filled with comfort, I am exceeding joyful in all our tribulation.

5 For, [g] when we were come into Macedonia, our flesh had no rest, but [h] we were troubled on every side; [i] without were fightings, within were fears.

6 Nevertheless [k] God, that comforteth those that are cast down, comforted us by [l] the coming of Titus;

7 And not by his coming only, but by the consolation wherewith he was comforted in you, when he told us your earnest desire, your mourning, your fervent mind toward me; so that I rejoiced the more.

8 For though I made you sorry with a letter, I do not repent, [m] though I did repent: for I perceive that the same epistle hath made you sorry, though it were but for a season.

9 Now I rejoice, not that ye were made sorry, but that ye sorrowed to repentance: for ye were made sorry [2] after a godly manner, that ye might receive damage by us in nothing.

10 For [n] godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation not to be repented of: [o] but the sorrow of the world worketh death.

11 For behold this selfsame thing, that ye sorrowed after a godly sort, what carefulness it wrought in you, yea, what clearing of yourselves, yea, what indignation, yea, what fear, yea, what vehement desire, yea, what zeal, yea, what revenge! In all things ye have approved yourselves to be clear in this matter.

12 Wherefore, though I wrote unto you, I did it not for his cause that had done the wrong, nor for his cause that suffered wrong, [p] but that our care for you in the sight of God might appear unto you.

13 Therefore we were comforted in your comfort: yea, and exceedingly the more joyed we for the joy of Titus, because his spirit [q] was refreshed by you all.

14 For if I have boasted any thing to him of you, I am not ashamed; but as we spake all things to you in truth, even so our boasting, which I made before Titus, is found a truth.

15 And his [2] inward affection is more abundant toward you, whilst he remembereth [r] the obedience of you all, how with fear and trembling ye received him.

16 I rejoice therefore that [s] I have confidence in you in all things.

CHAPTER VIII.

He stirreth them up to a liberal contribution for the poor saints at Jerusalem.

MOREOVER, brethren, we do you to wit of the grace of God bestowed on the churches of Macedonia;
2 How that in a great trial of affliction the abundance of their joy and [a] their deep poverty abounded unto the riches of their [3] liberality.
3 For to their power, I bear record, yea, and beyond their power they were willing of themselves;
4 Praying us with much intreaty that we would receive the gift, and take upon us [b] the fellowship of the ministering to the saints.
5 And this they did, not as we hoped, but first gave their own selves to the Lord, and unto us by the will of God.
6 Insomuch that [c] we desired Titus, that as he had begun, so he would also finish in you the same [4] grace also.
7 Therefore, as [d] ye abound in every thing, in faith, and utterance, and knowledge, and in all diligence, and in your love to us, see [e] that ye abound in this grace also.
8 [f] I speak not by commandment, but by occasion of the forwardness of others, and to prove the sincerity of your love.
9 For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, [g] that, though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich.
10 And herein [h] I give my advice: for [i] this is expedient for you, who have begun before, not only to do, but also to be [5] [k] forward a year ago.
11 Now therefore perform the doing of it; that as there was a readiness to will, so there may be a performance also out of that which ye have.
12 For [l] if there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not.
13 For I mean not that other men be eased, and ye burdened:
14 But by an equality, that now at this time your abundance may be a supply for their want, that their abundance also may be a supply for your want: that there may be equality:
15 As it is written, [m] He that had gathered much had nothing over; and he that had gathered little had no lack.
16 But thanks be to God, which put the same earnest care into the heart of Titus for you.
17 For indeed he accepted [n] the exhortation; but being more forward, of his own accord he went unto you.
18 And we have sent with him [o] the brother, whose praise is in the gospel throughout all the churches;
19 And not that only, but who was also [p] chosen of the churches to travel with us with this [2] grace, which is administered by us [q] to the glory of the same Lord, and declaration of your ready mind:
20 Avoiding this, that no man should blame us in this abundance which is administered by us:
21 [r] Providing for honest things, not only in the sight of the Lord, but also in the sight of men.
22 And we have sent with them our brother, whom we have oftentimes proved diligent in many things, but now much more diligent, upon the great confidence which [3] I have in you.
23 Whether any do enquire of Titus, he is my partner and fellowhelper concerning you: or our brethren be enquired of, they are [s] the messengers of the churches, and the glory of Christ.
24 Wherefore shew ye to them, and before the churches, the proof of your love, and of our [t] boasting on your behalf.

CHAPTER IX.

A bountiful alms is a kind of sowing of seed which shall return a great increase.

FOR as touching [a] the ministering to the saints, it is superfluous for me to write to you:
2 For I know [b] the forwardness of your mind, [c] for which I boast of you to them of Macedonia, that [d] Achaia was ready a year ago; and your zeal hath provoked very many.
3 [e] Yet have I sent the brethren, lest our boasting of you should be in vain in this behalf; that, as I said, ye may be ready:
4 Lest haply if they of Macedonia come with me, and find you unprepared, we (that we say not, ye) should be ashamed in this same confident boasting.
5 Therefore I thought it necessary to exhort the brethren, that they would go before unto you, and make up beforehand your [4] bounty, [5] whereof ye had notice before, that the same might be ready, as a matter of bounty, and not as of covetousness.
6 [f] But this I say, He which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully.
7 Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; [g] not grudgingly, or of necessity: for [h] God loveth a cheerful giver.

8 [i] And God is able to make all grace abound toward you; that ye, always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work:

9 (As it is written, [k] He hath dispersed abroad; he hath given to the poor: his righteousness remaineth for ever.

10 Now he that [l] ministereth seed to the sower both minister bread for your food, and multiply your seed sown, and increase the fruits of your [m] righteousness;)

11 Being enriched in every thing to all [2 3] bountifulness, [n] which causeth through us thanksgiving to God.

12 For the administration of this service not only [o] supplieth the want of the saints, but is abundant also by many thanksgivings unto God;

13 Whiles by the experiment of this ministration they [p] glorify God for your professed subjection unto the gospel of Christ, and for your liberal [q] distribution unto them, and unto all men;

14 And by their prayer for you, which long after you for the exceeding [r] grace of God in you.

15 Thanks be unto God [s] for his unspeakable gift.

CHAPTER X.

Against the false apostles he setteth out the spiritual authority with which he is armed.

NOW [a] I Paul myself beseech you by the meekness and gentleness of Christ, [b] who [4] in presence am base among you, but being absent am bold toward you:

2 But I beseech you, [c] that I may not be bold when I am present with that confidence, wherewith I think to be bold against some, which [5] think of us as if we walked according to the flesh.

3 For though we walk in the flesh, we do not war after the flesh:

4 (For the weapons [e] of our warfare are not carnal, but [f] mighty [6] through God [g] to the pulling down of strong holds:)

5 [h] Casting down [7] imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ;

6 [i] And having in a readiness to revenge all disobedience, when [k] your obedience is fulfilled.

7 [l] Do ye look on things after the outward appearance? [m] If any man trust to himself that he is Christ's, let him of himself think this again, that, as he is Christ's, even so are [n] we Christ's.

8 For though I should boast somewhat more [o] of our authority, which the Lord hath given us for edification, and not for your destruction, [p] I should not be ashamed:

9 That I may not seem as if I would terrify you by letters.

10 For his letters, [2] say they, are weighty and powerful; but [q] his bodily presence is weak, and his [r] speech contemptible.

11 Let such an one think this, that, such as we are in word by letters when we are absent, such will we be also in deed when we are present.

12 [s] For we dare not make ourselves of the number, or compare ourselves with some that commend themselves: but they measuring themselves by themselves, and comparing themselves among themselves, [3] are not wise.

13 [t] But we will not boast of things without our measure, but according to the measure of the [4] rule which God hath distributed to us, a measure to reach even unto you.

14 For we stretch not ourselves beyond our measure, as though we reached not unto you: [u] for we are come as far as to you also in preaching the gospel of Christ:

15 Not boasting of things without our measure, that is, [x] of other men's labours; but having hope, when your faith is increased, that we shall be [5] enlarged by you according to our rule abundantly,

16 To preach the gospel in the regions beyond you, and not to boast in another man's [6] line of things made ready to our hand.

17 [y] But he that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord.

18 For [z] not he that commendeth himself is approved, but [a] whom the Lord commendeth.

CHAPTER XI.

He entereth into a forced commendation of himself, and of his equality with the chief apostles.

WOULD to God ye could bear with me a little in [a] my folly: and indeed [7] bear with me.

2 For I am [b] jealous over you with godly jealousy: for [c] I have espoused you to one husband, [d] that I may present you [e] as a chaste virgin to Christ.

3 But I fear, lest by any means, as [f] the serpent beguiled Eve through his subtilty, so your minds [g] should be corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ.

4 For if he that cometh preacheth another Jesus, whom we have not preached, or if ye receive another spirit, which ye have not received, or [h] another gospel, which ye have not accepted, ye might well bear [2] with him.

5 For I suppose [i] I was not a whit behind the very chiefest apostles.

6 But though [k] I be rude in speech, yet not [l] in knowledge; but [m] we have been throughly made manifest among you in all things.

7 Have I committed an offence [n] in abasing myself that ye might be exalted, because I have preached to you the gospel of God freely?

8 I robbed other churches, taking wages of them, to do you service.

9 And when I was present with you, and wanted, [o] I was chargeable to no man: for that which was lacking to me [p] the brethren which came from Macedonia supplied: and in all things I have kept myself [q] from being burdensome unto you, and so will I keep myself.

10 [r] As the truth of Christ is in me, [3] [s] no man shall stop me of this boasting in the regions of Achaia.

11 Wherefore? [t] because I love you not? God knoweth.

12 But what I do, that I will do, [u] that I may cut off occasion from them which desire occasion; that wherein they glory, they may be found even as we.

13 For such [x] are false apostles, [y] deceitful workers, transforming themselves into the apostles of Christ.

14 And no marvel; for Satan himself is transformed into [z] an angel of light.

15 Therefore it is no great thing if his ministers also be transformed as the [a] ministers of righteousness; [b] whose end shall be according to their works.

16 [c] I say again, Let no man think me a fool; if otherwise, yet as a fool [4] receive me, that I may boast myself a little.

17 That which I speak, [d] I speak it not after the Lord, but as it were foolishly, [e] in this confidence of boasting.

18 [f] Seeing that many glory after the flesh, I will glory also.

19 For ye suffer fools gladly, [g] seeing ye yourselves are wise.

20 For ye suffer, [h] if a man bring you into bondage, if a man devour you, if a man take of you, if a man exalt himself, if a man smite you on the face.

21 I speak as concerning reproach, [i] as though we had been weak. Howbeit [k] whereinsoever any is bold, (I speak foolishly,) I am bold also.

22 Are they Hebrews? [l] so am I. Are they Israelites? so am I. Are they the seed of Abraham? so am I.

23 Are they ministers of Christ? (I speak as a fool) I am more; [m] in labours more abundant, [n] in stripes above measure, in prisons more frequent, [o] in deaths oft.

24 Of the Jews five times received I [p] forty stripes save one.

25 Thrice was I [q] beaten with rods, [r] once was I stoned, thrice I [s] suffered shipwreck, a night and a day I have been in the deep;

26 In journeyings often, in perils of waters, in perils of robbers, [t] in perils by mine own countrymen, [u] in perils by the heathen, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren;

27 In weariness and painfulness, [x] in watchings often, [y] in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness.

28 Beside those things that are without, that which cometh upon me daily, [z] the care of all the churches.

29 [a] Who is weak, and I am not weak? who is offended, and I burn not?

30 If I must needs glory, [b] I will glory of the things which concern mine infirmities.

31 [c] The God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, [d] which is blessed for evermore, knoweth that I lie not.

32 [e] In Damascus the governor under Aretas the king kept the city of the Damascenes with a garrison, desirous to apprehend me:

33 And through a window in a basket was I let down by the wall, and escaped his hands.

CHAPTER XII.

He chooseth rather to glory of his infirmities, blaming the Corinthians for forcing him to vain boasting.

IT is not expedient for me doubtless to glory. [2] I will come to visions and revelations of the Lord.

2 I knew a man [a] in Christ above fourteen years ago, (whether in the body, I cannot tell; or whether out of the body, I cannot tell: God knoweth;) such an one [b] caught up to the third heaven.

3 And I knew such a man, (whether in the body, or out of the body, I cannot tell: God knoweth;)

4 How that he was caught up into [c] paradise, and heard unspeakable words, which it is not [3] lawful for a man to utter.

5 Of such an one will I glory: [d] yet of myself I will not glory, but in mine infirmities.

6 For [e] though I would desire to glory, I shall not be a fool; for I will say the truth: but now I forbear, lest any man should think of me above that which he seeth me to be, or that he heareth of me.

7 And lest I should be exalted above measure through the abundance of the revelations, there was given to me a [f] thorn in the flesh, [g] the messenger of Satan to buffet me, lest I should be exalted above measure.

8 [h] For this thing I besought the Lord thrice, that it might depart from me.

9 And he said unto me, My grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness. Most gladly therefore [i] will I rather glory in my infirmities, [k] that the power of Christ may rest upon me.

10 Therefore [l] I take pleasure in infirmities, in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in distresses for Christ's sake: [m] for when I am weak, then am I strong.

11 I am become [n] a fool in glorying; ye have compelled me: for I ought to have been commended of you: for [o] in nothing am I behind the very chiefest apostles, though [p] I be nothing.

12 [q] Truly the signs of an apostle were wrought among you in all patience, in signs, and wonders, and mighty deeds.

13 [r] For what is it wherein ye were inferior to other churches, except it be that [s] I myself was not burdensome to you? forgive me [t] this wrong.

14 [u] Behold, the third time I am ready to come to you; and I will not be burdensome to you: for [x] I seek not your's, but you: [y] for the children ought not to lay up for the parents, but the parents for the children.

15 And [z] I will very gladly spend and be spent [a] for [2] you; though [b] the more abundantly I love you, the less I be loved.

16 But be it so, [c] I did not burden you: nevertheless, being crafty, I caught you with guile.

17 [d] Did I make a gain of you by any of them whom I sent unto you?

18 [e] I desired Titus, and with him I sent a [f] brother. Did Titus make a gain of you? walked we not in the same spirit? walked we not in the same steps?

19 [g] Again, think ye that we excuse ourselves unto you? [h] we speak before God in Christ: [i] but we do all things, dearly beloved, for your edifying.

20 For I fear, lest, when I come, I shall not find you such as I would, and that [k] I shall be found unto you such as ye would not: lest there be debates, envyings, wraths, strifes, backbitings, whisperings, swellings, tumults:

21 And lest, when I come again, my God [l] will humble me among you, and that I shall bewail many [m] which have sinned already, and have not repented of the uncleanness and [n] fornication and lasciviousness which they have committed.

CHAPTER XIII.

He threateneth severity against obstinate sinners, and adviseth them to a trial of their faith.

THIS is [a] the third time I am coming to you. [b] In the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established.

2 [c] I told you before, and foretell you, as if I were present, the second time; and being absent now I write to them [d] which heretofore have sinned, and to all other, that, if I come again, [e] I will not spare:

3 Since ye seek a proof of Christ [f] speaking in me, which to you-ward is not weak, but is mighty [g] in you.

4 [h] For though he was crucified through weakness, yet [i] he liveth by the power of God. For [k] we also are weak [2] in him, but we shall live with him by the power of God toward you.

5 [l] Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves. Know ye not your own selves, [m] how that Jesus Christ is in you, except ye be [n] reprobates?

6 But I trust that ye shall know that we are not reprobates.

7 Now I pray to God that ye do no evil; not that we should appear approved, but that ye should do that which is honest, though [o] we be as reprobates.

8 For we can do nothing against the truth, but for the truth.

9 For we are glad, [p] when we are weak, and ye are strong: and this also we wish, even your perfection.

10 [r] Therefore I write these things being absent, lest being present [s] I should use sharpness, [t] according to the power which the Lord hath given me to edification, and not to destruction.

11 Finally, brethren, farewell. Be perfect, be of good comfort, [u] be of one mind, live in peace; and the God of love [x] and peace shall be with you.

12 [y] Greet one another with an holy kiss.

13 All the saints salute you.

14 [z] The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and [a] the communion of the Holy Ghost, be with you all. Amen.

¶ The second epistle to the Corinthians was written from Philippi, a city of Macedonia, by Titus and Lucas.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE GALATIANS.

CHAPTER I.

Paul learned the gospel not of men, but of God, and sheweth what he was before his calling.

PAUL, an apostle, ([a] not of men, neither by man, but [b] by Jesus Christ, and God the Father, [c] who raised him from the dead;)

2 And all the brethren [d] which are with me, [e] unto the churches of Galatia:

3 [f] Grace be to you and peace from God the Father, and from our Lord Jesus Christ,

4 [g] Who gave himself for our sins, that he might deliver us [h] from this present evil world, according to the will of God and our Father:

5 To whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.

6 I marvel that ye are so soon removed [i] from him that called you into the grace of Christ unto another gospel:

7 [k] Which is not another; but there be some [l] that trouble you, and would pervert the gospel of Christ.

8 But though [m] we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.

9 As we said before, so say I now again, If any man preach any other gospel unto you [n] than that ye have received, let him be accursed.

10 For [o] do I now [p] persuade men, or God? or [q] do I seek to please men? for if I yet pleased men, I should not be the servant of Christ.

11 [r] But I certify you, brethren, that the gospel which was preached of me is not after man.

12 For [s] I neither received it of man, neither was I taught it, but [t] by the revelation of Jesus Christ.

13 For ye have heard of my conversation in time past in the Jews' religion, how that [u] beyond measure I persecuted the church of God, and [x] wasted it:

14 And profited in the Jews' religion above many my [2] equals in mine own nation, [y] being more exceedingly zealous [z] of the traditions of my fathers.

15 But when it pleased God, [a] who separated me from my mother's womb, and called me by his grace,

16 [b] To reveal his Son in me, that [c] I might preach him among the heathen; immediately I conferred not with [d] flesh and blood:

17 Neither went I up to Jerusalem to them which were apostles before me; but I went into Arabia, and returned again unto Damascus.

18 Then after three years [e] I [2] went up to Jerusalem to see Peter, and abode with him fifteen days.

19 But [f] other of the apostles saw I none, save [g] James the Lord's brother.

20 Now the things which I write unto you, [h] behold, before God, I lie not.

21 [i] Afterwards I came into the regions of Syria and Cilicia;

22 And was unknown by face [k] unto the churches of Judæa which [l] were in Christ:

23 But they had heard only, That he which persecuted us in times past now preacheth the faith which once he destroyed.

24 And they glorified God in me.

CHAPTER II.

He sheweth for what purpose he went to Jerusalem, and that he resisted Peter.

THEN fourteen years after [a] I went up again to Jerusalem with Barnabas, and took Titus with me also.

2 And I went up by revelation, [b] and communicated unto them that gospel which I preach among the Gentiles, but [3] privately to them which were of reputation, lest by any means [c] I should run, or had run, in vain.

3 But neither Titus, who was with me, being a Greek, was compelled to be circumcised:

4 And that because of [d] false brethren unawares brought in, who came in privily to spy out our [e] liberty which we have in Christ Jesus, [f] that they might bring us into bondage:

5 To whom we gave place by subjection, no, not for an hour; that [g] the truth of the gospel might continue with you.

6 But of these [h] who seemed to be somewhat, (whatsoever they were, it maketh no matter to me: [i] God accepteth no man's person:) for they who seemed to be somewhat [k] in conference added nothing to me:

7 But contrariwise, [l] when they saw that the gospel of the uncircumcision [m] was committed unto me, as the gospel of the circumcision was unto Peter;

8 (For he that wrought effectually in Peter to the apostleship of the circumcision, [n] the same was [o] mighty in me toward the Gentiles:)

9 And when James, Cephas, and John, who seemed to be [p] pillars, perceived [q] the grace that was given unto me, they gave to me and Barnabas the right hands of fellowship; that we should go unto the heathen, and they unto the circumcision.

10 Only they would that we should remember the poor; [r] the same which I also was forward to do.

11 [s] But when Peter was come to Antioch, I withstood him to the face, because he was to be blamed.

12 For before that certain came from James, [t] he did eat with the Gentiles: but when they were come, he withdrew and separated himself, fearing them which were of the circumcision.

13 And the other Jews dissembled likewise with him; insomuch that Barnabas also was carried away with their dissimulation.

14 But when I saw that they walked not uprightly according to [u] the truth of the gospel, I said unto Peter [x] before them all, [y] If thou, being a Jew, livest after the manner of Gentiles, and not as do the Jews, why compellest thou the Gentiles to live as do the Jews?

15 [z] We who are Jews by nature, and not [a] sinners of the Gentiles,

16 [b] Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but [c] by the faith of Jesus Christ, even we have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law: for [d] by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified.

17 But if, while we seek to be justified by Christ, we ourselves also are found [e] sinners, is therefore Christ the minister of sin? God forbid.

18 For if I build again the things which I destroyed, I make myself a transgressor.

19 For I [f] through the law [g] am dead to the law, that I might [h] live unto God.

20 I am [i] crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh [k] I live by the faith of the Son of God, [l] who loved me, and gave himself for me.

21 I do not frustrate the grace of God: for [m] if righteousness come by the law, then Christ is dead in vain.

CHAPTER III.

He sheweth that they that believe are justified and blessed.

O FOOLISH Galatians, [a] who hath bewitched you, that ye should not obey [b] the truth, before whose eyes Jesus Christ hath been evidently set forth, crucified among you?

2 This only would I learn of you, Received ye [c] the Spirit by the works of the law, [d] or by the hearing of faith?

3 Are ye so foolish? [e] having begun in the Spirit, are ye now made perfect by [f] the flesh?

4 [g] Have ye suffered [2] so many things in vain? if it be yet in vain.

5 He therefore [h] that ministereth to you the Spirit, and worketh miracles among you, doeth he it by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith?

6 Even as [i] Abraham believed God, and it was [3] accounted to him for righteousness.

7 Know ye therefore that [k] they which are of faith, the same are the children of Abraham.

8 And [l] the scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, [m] In thee shall all nations be blessed.

9 So then they which be of faith are blessed with faithful Abraham.

10 For as many as are of the works of the law are under the curse: for it is written, [n] Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them.

11 But [o] that no man is justified by the law in the sight of God, it is evident: for, [p] The just shall live by faith.

12 And [q] the law is not of faith: but, [r] The man that doeth them shall live in them.

13 [s] Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us: for it is written, [t] Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree:

14 [u] That the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ; that we might receive [x] the promise of the Spirit through faith.

15 Brethren, I speak after the manner of men; [y] Though it be but a man's [4] covenant, yet if it be confirmed, no man disannulleth, or addeth thereto.

16 Now [z] to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is [a] Christ.

17 And this I say, that the covenant, that was confirmed before of God in Christ, the law, [b] which was four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannul, [c] that it should make the promise of none effect.

18 For if [d] the inheritance be of the law, [e] it is no more of promise: but God gave it to Abraham by promise.

19 Wherefore then serveth the law? [f] It was added because of transgressions, till [g] the seed should come to whom the promise was made; and it was [h] ordained by angels in the hand [i] of a mediator.

20 Now a mediator is not a mediator of one, [k] but God is one.

21 Is the law then against the promises of God? God forbid: [l] for if there had been a law given which could have given life, verily righteousness should have been by the law.

22 But [m] the scripture hath concluded [n] all under sin, [o] that the promise by faith of Jesus Christ might be given to them that believe.

23 But before faith came, we were kept under the law, shut up unto the faith which should afterwards be revealed.

24 Wherefore [p] the law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, [q] that we might be justified by faith.

25 But after that faith is come, we are no longer under a schoolmaster.

26 For ye [r] are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus.

27 For [s] as many of you as have been baptized into Christ [t] have put on Christ.

28 [u] There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female: for ye are all [x] one in Christ Jesus.

29 And [y] if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and [z] heirs according to the promise.

CHAPTER IV.

We were under the law till Christ came, but Christ freed us from the law.

NOW I say, That the heir, as long as he is a child, differeth nothing from a servant, though he be lord of all;

2 But is under tutors and governors until the time appointed of the father.

3 Even so we, when we were children, [a] were in bondage under the [2] elements of the world:

4 But [b] when the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son, [c] made [d] of a woman, [e] made under the law,

5 [f] To redeem them that were under the law, [g] that we might receive the adoption of sons.

6 And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth [h] the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father.

7 Wherefore thou art no more a servant, but a son; [i] and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ.

8 Howbeit then, [k] when ye knew not God, [l] ye did service unto them which by nature are no gods.

9 But now, [m] after that ye have known God, or rather are known of God, [n] how turn ye [3] again to [o] the weak and beggarly [4] elements, whereunto ye desire again to be in bondage?

10 [p] Ye observe days, and months, and times, and years.

11 I am afraid of you, [q] lest I have bestowed upon you labour in vain.

12 Brethren, I beseech you, be as I am; for I am as ye are: [r] ye have not injured me at all.

13 Ye know how [s] through infirmity of the flesh I preached the gospel unto you [t] at the first.

14 And my temptation which was in my flesh ye despised not, nor rejected; but received me [u] as an angel of God, [x] even as Christ Jesus.

15 [2] Where is then the blessedness ye spake of? for I bear you record, that, if it had been possible, ye would have plucked out your own eyes, and have given them to me.

16 Am I therefore become your enemy, [y] because I tell you the truth?
17 They [z] zealously affect you, but not well; yea, they would exclude [3] you, that ye might affect them.
18 But it is good to be zealously affected always in a good thing, and not only when I am present with you.
19 [a] My little children, of whom I travail in birth again until Christ be formed in you,
20 I desire to be present with you now, and to change my voice; for [4] I stand in doubt of you.
21 Tell me, ye that desire to be under the law, do ye not hear the law?
22 For it is written, that Abraham had two sons, [b] the one by a bondmaid, [c] the other by a freewoman.
23 But he who was of the bondwoman [d] was born after the flesh; [e] but he of the freewoman was by promise.
24 Which things are an allegory: for these are the two [5] covenants; the one from the mount [6] f Sinai, which gendereth to bondage, which is Agar.
25 For this Agar is mount Sinai in Arabia, and [7] answereth to Jerusalem which now is, and is in bondage with her children.
26 But [g] Jerusalem which is above is free, which is the mother of us all.
27 For it is written, [h] Rejoice, thou barren that bearest not; break forth and cry, thou that travailest not: for the desolate hath many more children than she which hath an husband.
28 Now we, brethren, as Isaac was, are [i] the children of promise.
29 But as then [k] he that was born after the flesh persecuted him that was born after the Spirit, [l] even so it is now.
30 Nevertheless what saith [m] the scripture? [n] Cast out the bondwoman and her son: for [o] the son of the bondwoman shall not be heir with the son of the freewoman.
31 So then, brethren, we are not children of the bondwoman, [p] but of the free.

CHAPTER V.

He reckoneth up the works of the flesh and the fruits of the Spirit.

STAND fast therefore in [a] the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again [b] with the yoke of bondage.
2 Behold, I Paul say unto you, that [c] if ye be circumcised, Christ shall profit you nothing.
3 For I testify again to every man that is circumcised, [d] that he is a debtor to do the whole law.
4 [e] Christ is become of no effect unto you, whosoever of you are justified by the law; [f] ye are fallen from grace.
5 For we through the Spirit [g] wait for the hope of righteousness by faith.
6 For [h] in Jesus Christ neither circumcision availeth any thing, nor uncircumcision; but [i] faith which worketh by love.
7 Ye [k] did run well; [l] [2] who did hinder you that ye should not obey the truth?
8 This persuasion cometh not of him [m] that calleth you.
9 [n] A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump.
10 [o] I have confidence in you through the Lord, that ye will be none otherwise minded: but [p] he that troubleth you [q] shall bear his judgment, whosoever he be.
11 [r] And I, brethren, if I yet preach circumcision, [s] why do I yet suffer persecution? then is [t] the offence of the cross ceased.
12 [u] I would they were even cut off [x] which trouble you.
13 For, brethren, ye have been called unto liberty; only [y] use not liberty for an occasion to the flesh, but [z] by love serve one another.
14 For [a] all the law is fulfilled in one word, even in this; [b] Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.
15 But if ye bite and devour one another, take heed that ye be not consumed one of another.
16 This I say then, [c] Walk in the Spirit, and [3] ye shall not fulfil the lust of the flesh.
17 For [d] the flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh: and these are contrary the one to the other: [e] so that ye cannot do the things that ye would.
18 But [f] if ye be led of the Spirit, ye are not under the law.
19 Now [g] the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these; Adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness,
20 Idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies,
21 Envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like: of the which I tell you before, as I have also told you in time past, that [h] they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God.

22 But [t] the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, [k] gentleness, [l] goodness, [m] faith,
23 Meekness, temperance: [n] against such there is no law.
24 And they that are Christ's [o] have crucified the flesh with the [2] affections and lusts.
25 [p] If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit.
26 [q] Let us not be desirous of vain glory, provoking one another, envying one another.

CHAPTER VI.

He moveth them to bear one another's burden, and not weary of well doing.

BRETHREN, [a] [3] if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye [b] which are spiritual, restore such an one [c] in the spirit of meekness; considering thyself, [d] lest thou also be tempted.
2 [e] Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil [f] the law of Christ.
3 For [g] if a man think himself to be something, when [h] he is nothing, he deceiveth himself.
4 But [i] let every man prove his own work, and then shall he have rejoicing in himself alone, and [k] not in another.
5 For [l] every man shall bear his own burden.
6 [m] Let him that is taught in the word communicate unto him that teacheth in all good things.
7 [n] Be not deceived; [o] God is not mocked: for [p] whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap.
8 [q] For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting.
9 And [r] let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, [s] if we faint not.
10 [t] As we have therefore opportunity, [u] let us do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of [x] the household of faith.
11 Ye see how large a letter I have written unto you with mine own hand.
12 As many as desire to make a fair shew in the flesh, [y] they constrain you to be circumcised; [z] only lest they should [a] suffer persecution for the cross of Christ.
13 For neither they themselves who are circumcised keep the law; but desire to have you circumcised, that they may glory in your flesh.
14 [b] But God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, [2] by whom the world is [c] crucified unto me, and I unto the world.
15 For [d] in Christ Jesus neither circumcision availeth any thing, nor uncircumcision, but [e] a new creature.
16 [f] And as many as walk [g] according to this rule, peace be on them, and mercy, and upon [h] the Israel of God.
17 From henceforth let no man trouble me: for [i] I bear in my body the marks of the Lord Jesus.
18 Brethren, [k] the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit. Amen.

¶ Unto the Galatians written from Rome.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE EPHESIANS.

CHAPTER I.

Election and adoption by grace the true and proper fountain of man's salvation.

PAUL, an apostle of Jesus Christ [a] by the will of God, [b] to the saints which are at Ephesus, [c] and to the faithful in Christ Jesus:
2 [d] Grace be to you, and peace, from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.
3 [e] Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly [2] places in Christ:
4 According as [f] he hath chosen us in him [g] before the foundation of the world, that we should [h] be holy and without blame before him in love:
5 [i] Having predestinated us unto [k] the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to himself, [l] according to the good pleasure of his will,
6 To the praise of the glory of his grace, [m] wherein he hath made us accepted in [n] the beloved.
7 [o] In whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to [p] the riches of his grace;
8 Wherein he hath abounded toward us in all wisdom and prudence;
9 [q] Having made known unto us the mystery of his will, according to his good pleasure [r] which he hath purposed in himself:

10 That in the dispensation of [s] the fulness of times [t] he might gather together in one [u] all things in Christ, both which are in [2] heaven, and which are on earth; even in him:

11 [x] In whom also we have obtained an inheritance, [y] being predestinated according to [z] the purpose of him who worketh all things after the counsel of his own will:

12 [a] That we should be to the praise of his glory, [b] who first [3] trusted in Christ.

13 In whom ye also trusted, after that ye heard [c] the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation: in whom also after that ye believed, [d] ye were sealed with that holy Spirit of promise,

14 [e] Which is the earnest of our inheritance [f] until the redemption of [g] the purchased possession, [h] unto the praise of his glory.

15 Wherefore I also, [i] after I heard of your faith in the Lord Jesus, and love unto all the saints,

16 [k] Cease not to give thanks for you, making mention of you in my prayers;

17 That [l] the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory, [m] may give unto you the spirit of wisdom and revelation [4] in the knowledge of him:

18 [n] The eyes of your understanding being enlightened; that ye may know what is [o] the hope of his calling, and what the riches of the glory of his [p] inheritance in the saints,

19 And what is the exceeding greatness of his power to us-ward who believe, [q] according to the working [5] of his mighty power,

20 Which he wrought in Christ, when [r] he raised him from the dead, and [s] set him at his own right hand in the heavenly places,

21 [t] Far above all [u] principality, and power, and might, and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come:

22 And [x] hath put all things under his feet, and gave him [y] to be the head over all things to the church,

23 [z] Which is his body, [a] the fulness of him [b] that filleth all in all.

CHAPTER II.

We are made for good works, and should live as the family of God.

AND [a] you hath he quickened, [b] who were dead in trespasses and sins;

2 [c] Wherein in time past ye walked according to the course of this world, according to [d] the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in [e] the children of disobedience:

3 [f] Among whom also we all had our conversation in times past in [g] the lusts of our flesh, fulfilling [2] the desires of the flesh and of the mind; and [h] were by nature the children of wrath, even as others.

4 But God, [i] who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us,

5 [k] Even when we were dead in sins, hath [l] quickened us together with Christ, ([3] by grace ye are saved;)

6 And hath raised us up together, and made us sit together [m] in heavenly places in Christ Jesus:

7 That in the ages to come he might shew the exceeding riches of his grace in [n] his kindness toward us through Christ Jesus.

8 [o] For by grace are ye saved [p] through faith; and that not of yourselves: [q] it is the gift of God:

9 [r] Not of works, lest any man should boast.

10 For we are [s] his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, [t] which God hath before [4] ordained that we should walk in them.

11 Wherefore [u] remember, that ye being in time past Gentiles in the flesh, who are called Uncircumcision by that which is called [x] the Circumcision in the flesh made by hands;

12 [y] That at that time ye were without Christ, [z] being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from [a] the covenants of promise, [b] having no hope, [c] and without God in the world:

13 [d] But now in Christ Jesus ye who sometimes were [e] far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ.

14 For [f] he is our peace, [g] who hath made both one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us;

15 [h] Having abolished [i] in his flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments contained in ordinances; for to make in himself of twain one [k] new man, so making peace;

16 And that he might [l] reconcile both unto God in one body by the cross, [m] having slain the enmity [5] thereby:

17 And came [n] and preached peace to you which were afar off, and to [o] them that were nigh.

18 For [p] through him we both have access [q] by one Spirit unto the Father.

19 Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but [r] fellow-citizens with the saints, and of [s] the household of God;

20 And are [t] built [u] upon the foundation of the [x] apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being [y] the chief corner stone;

21 [z] In whom all the building fitly framed together groweth unto [a] an holy temple in the Lord:

22 [b] In whom ye also are builded together for an habitation of God through the Spirit.

CHAPTER III.

To Paul was grace given that he should preach the saving of the Gentiles.

FOR this cause I Paul, [a] the prisoner of Jesus Christ [b] for you Gentiles,

2 If ye have heard of [c] the dispensation of the grace of God [d] which is given me to you-ward:

3 [e] How that [f] by revelation [g] he made known unto me the mystery; ([h] as I wrote [2] afore in few words,

4 Whereby, when ye read, ye may understand my knowledge [i] in the mystery of Christ)

5 [k] Which in other ages was not made known unto the sons of men, [l] as it is now revealed unto his holy apostles and prophets by the Spirit;

6 That the Gentiles [m] should be fellowheirs, and [n] of the same body, and [o] partakers of his promise in Christ by the gospel:

7 [p] Whereof I was made a minister, [q] according to the gift of the grace of God given unto me by [r] the effectual working of his power.

8 Unto me, [s] who am less than the least of all saints, is this grace given, that [t] I should preach among the Gentiles [u] the unsearchable riches of Christ;

9 And to make all men see what is the fellowship of [x] the mystery, [y] which from the beginning of the world hath been hid in God, [z] who created all things by Jesus Christ:

10 [a] To the intent that now [b] unto the principalities and powers in heavenly places [c] might be known by the church the manifold wisdom of God,

11 [d] According to the eternal purpose which he purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord:

12 In whom we have boldness and [e] access [f] with confidence by the faith of him.

13 [g] Wherefore I desire that ye faint not at my tribulations [h] for you, [i] which is your glory.

14 For this cause I bow my knees unto the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ,

15 Of whom [k] the whole family in heaven and earth is named,

16 That he would grant you, [l] according to the riches of his glory, [m] to be strengthened with might by his Spirit in [n] the inner man;

17 [o] That Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye, [p] being rooted and grounded in love,

18 [q] May be able to comprehend with all saints [r] what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height;

19 And to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that ye might be filled [s] with all the fulness of God.

20 Now [t] unto him that is able to do exceeding abundantly [u] above all that we ask or think, [x] according to the power that worketh in us,

21 [y] Unto him be glory in the church by Christ Jesus throughout all ages, world without end. Amen.

CHAPTER IV.

God giveth divers gifts unto men, that his church may be edified.

I THEREFORE, [a] the prisoner [2] of the Lord, beseech you that ye [b] walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called,

2 [c] With all lowliness and meekness, with longsuffering, forbearing one another in love;

3 Endeavouring to keep the unity of the Spirit [d] in the bond of peace.

4 [e] There is one body, and [f] one Spirit, even as ye are called in one [g] hope of your calling;

5 [h] One Lord, [i] one faith, [k] one baptism,

6 [l] One God and Father of all, who is above all, and [m] through all, and in you all.

7 But [n] unto every one of us is given grace according to the measure of the gift of Christ.

8 Wherefore he saith, [o] When he ascended up on high, [p] he led [3] captivity captive, and gave gifts unto men.

9 [q] (Now that he ascended, what is it but that he also descended first into the lower parts of the earth?

10 He that descended is the same also [r] that ascended up far above all heavens, [s]that he might [4]fill all things.)

11 [t]And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, [u]evangelists; and some, [x]pastors and [y]teachers;

12 [z]For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, [a]for the edifying of [b]the body of Christ:

13 Till we all come [2]in the unity of the faith, [c]and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto [d]a perfect man, unto the measure of the [3]stature of the fulness of Christ:

14 That we henceforth be no more [e]children, [f]tossed to and fro, and carried about with every [g]wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, [h]whereby they lie in wait to deceive;

15 But [i 4]speaking the truth in love, [k]may grow up into him in all things, [l]which is the head, even Christ:

16 [m]From whom the whole body fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love.

17 This I say therefore, and testify in the Lord, that [n]ye henceforth walk not as other Gentiles walk, [o]in the vanity of their mind,

18 [p]Having the understanding darkened, [q]being alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them, because of the [r 5]blindness of their heart:

19 [s]Who being past feeling [t]have given themselves over unto lasciviousness, to work all uncleanness with greediness.

20 But ye have not so learned Christ;

21 [u]If so be that ye have heard him, and have been taught by him, as the truth is in Jesus:

22 That ye [x]put off concerning [y]the former conversation [z]the old man, which is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts;

23 And [a]be renewed in the spirit of your mind;

24 And that ye [b]put on the new man, which after God [c]is created in righteousness and [6]true holiness.

25 Wherefore putting away lying, [d]speak every man truth with his neighbour: for [e]we are members one of another.

26 [f]Be ye angry, and sin not: let not the sun go down upon your wrath:

27 [g]Neither give place to the devil.

28 Let him that stole steal no more: but rather [h]let him labour, working with his hands the thing which is good, that he may have [7]to give [i]to him that needeth.

29 [k]Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth, but [l]that which is good [2]to the use of edifying, [m]that it may minister grace unto the hearers.

30 And [n]grieve not the holy Spirit of God, [o]whereby ye are sealed unto the day of [p]redemption.

31 [q]Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamour, and [r]evil speaking, be put away from you, [s]with all malice:

32 And [t]be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, [u]forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you.

CHAPTER V.

General exhortation to love, and to walk warily and be filled with the Spirit.

BE [a]ye therefore followers of God, as dear children;

2 And [b]walk in love, [c]as Christ also hath loved us, and hath given himself for us an offering and a sacrifice to God [d]for a sweetsmelling savour.

3 But [e]fornication, and all uncleanness, or covetousness, [f]let it not be once named among you, as becometh saints;

4 [g]Neither filthiness, nor foolish talking, nor jesting, [h]which are not convenient: but rather giving of thanks.

5 For this ye know, that [i]no whoremonger, nor unclean person, nor covetous man, [k]who is an idolater, [l]hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ and of God.

6 [m]Let no man deceive you with vain words: for because of these things [n]cometh the wrath of God [o]upon the children of [3]disobedience.

7 Be not ye therefore partakers with them.

8 [p]For ye were sometimes darkness, but now [q]are ye light in the Lord: walk as [r]children of light:

9 (For [s]the fruit of the Spirit is in all goodness and righteousness and truth;)

10 [t]Proving what is acceptable unto the Lord.

11 And [u]have no fellowship with [x]the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather [y]reprove them.

12 [z]For it is a shame even to speak of those things which are done of them in secret.

13 But [a] all things that are [4] reproved are made manifest by the light: for whatsoever doth make manifest is light.

14 Wherefore [5] he saith, [b] Awake thou that sleepest, and [c] arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light.

15 [d] See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise,

16 [e] Redeeming the time, [f] because the days are evil.

17 [g] Wherefore be ye not unwise, but [h] understanding [i] what the will of the Lord is.

18 And [k] be not drunk with wine, wherein is excess; but be filled with the Spirit;

19 Speaking to yourselves [l] in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody in your heart to the Lord;

20 [m] Giving thanks always for all things unto God and the Father [n] in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ;

21 [o] Submitting yourselves one to another in the fear of God.

22 [p] Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, [q] as unto the Lord.

23 For [r] the husband is the head of the wife, even as [s] Christ is the head of the church: and he is the saviour of [t] the body.

24 Therefore as the church is subject unto Christ, so let the wives be to their own husbands [u] in every thing.

25 [x] Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and [y] gave himself for it;

26 That he might sanctify and cleanse it [z] with the washing of water [a] by the word,

27 [b] That he might present it to himself a glorious church, [c] not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; [d] but that it should be holy and without blemish.

28 So ought men to love their wives as their own bodies. He that loveth his wife loveth himself.

29 For no man ever yet hated his own flesh; but nourisheth and cherisheth it, even as the Lord the church:

30 For [e] we are members of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones.

31 [f] For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and shall be joined unto his wife, and they [g] two shall be one flesh.

32 This is a great mystery: but I speak concerning Christ and the church.

33 Nevertheless [h] let every one of you in particular so love his wife even as himself; and the wife see that she [i] reverence her husband.

CHAPTER VI.

The duty of children towards their parents, and of servants towards their masters.

CHILDREN, [a] obey your parents in the Lord: for this is right.

2 [b] Honour thy father and mother; which is the first commandment with promise;

3 That it may be well with thee, and thou mayest live long on the earth.

4 And, [c] ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath: but [d] bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord.

5 [e] Servants, be obedient to them that are your masters according to the flesh, [f] with fear and trembling, [g] in singleness of your heart, as unto Christ;

6 [h] Not with eyeservice, as menpleasers; but as the servants of Christ, doing the will of God from the heart;

7 With good will doing service, as to the Lord, and not to men:

8 [i] Knowing that whatsoever good thing any man doeth, the same shall he receive of the Lord, [k] whether he be bond or free.

9 And, ye [l] masters, do the same things unto them, [2] [m] forbearing threatening: knowing that [3] [n] your Master also is in heaven; [o] neither is there respect of persons with him.

10 Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord, and [p] in the power of his might.

11 [q] Put on the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil.

12 For we wrestle not against [4] [r] flesh and blood, but against [s] principalities, against powers, against [t] the rulers of the darkness of this world, against [5] spiritual wickedness in [6] high places.

13 [u] Wherefore take unto you the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to withstand [z] in the evil day, and [7] having done all, to stand.

14 Stand therefore, [y] having your loins girt about with truth, and [z] having on the breastplate of righteousness;

15 [a] And your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace;

16 Above all, taking [b] the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked.

17 And [c] take the helmet of salvation, and [d] the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God:
18 [e] Praying always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, and [f] watching thereunto with all perseverance and [g] supplication for all saints;
19 [h] And for me, that utterance may be given unto me, that I may open my mouth [i] boldly, to make known the mystery of the gospel,
20 For which [k] I am an ambassador [l 2] in bonds: that [3] therein [m] I may speak boldly, as I ought to speak.
21 But [n] that ye also may know my affairs, and how I do, [o] Tychicus, a beloved brother and faithful minister in the Lord, shall make known to you all things:
22 [p] Whom I have sent unto you for the same purpose, that ye might know our affairs, and that he might comfort your hearts.
23 [q] Peace be to the brethren, and love with faith, from God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.
24 Grace be with all them that love our Lord Jesus Christ [r 2] in sincerity. Amen.

¶ Written from Rome unto the Ephesians by Tychicus.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE PHILIPPIANS.

CHAPTER I.

Paul testifieth his thankfulness to God, and that he is ready to glorify Christ either by his life or death.

PAUL and Timotheus, the servants of Jesus Christ, to all the saints [a] in Christ Jesus which are at Philippi, with the bishops and deacons:
2 [b] Grace be unto you, and peace, from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.
3 [c] I thank my God upon every [2] remembrance of you,
4 Always in every prayer of mine for you all making request with joy,
5 [d] For your fellowship in the gospel from the first day until now;
6 Being confident of this very thing, that he which hath begun [e] a good work in you [3] will perform it [f] until the day of Jesus Christ:
7 Even as it is meet for me to think this of you all, because [4] I have you [g] in my heart; inasmuch as both in [h] my bonds, and in [i] the defence and confirmation of the gospel, [k] ye all are [5] partakers of my grace.
8 For [l] God is my record, [m] how greatly I long after you all in the bowels of Jesus Christ.
9 And this I pray, [n] that your love may abound yet more and more in knowledge and in all [6] judgment;
10 That [o] ye may [7] approve things that [8] are excellent; [p] that ye may be sincere and without offence [q] till the day of Christ;
11 Being filled with the fruits of righteousness, [r] which are by Jesus Christ, [s] unto the glory and praise of God.
12 But I would ye should understand, brethren, that the things which happened unto me have fallen out rather unto the furtherance of the gospel;
13 So that my bonds [9] in Christ are manifest [t] in all [2] the palace, and [3] in all other places;
14 And many of the brethren in the Lord, waxing confident by my bonds, are much more bold to speak the word without fear.
15 Some indeed preach Christ even of envy and [u] strife; and some also of good will:
16 The one preach Christ of contention, not sincerely, supposing to add affliction to my bonds:
17 But the other of love, knowing that I am set for [x] the defence of the gospel.
18 What then? notwithstanding, every way, whether in pretence, or in truth, Christ is preached; and I therein do rejoice, yea, and will rejoice.
19 For I know that this shall turn to my salvation [y] through your prayer, and the supply of [z] the Spirit of Jesus Christ,
20 According to my [a] earnest expectation and my hope, that [b] in nothing I shall be ashamed, but that [c] with all boldness, as always, so now also Christ shall be magnified in my body, whether it be by life, or by death.
21 For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain.
22 But if I live in the flesh, this is the fruit of my labour: yet what I shall choose I wot not.

23 For [d] I am in a strait betwixt two, having a desire to [e] depart, and to be with Christ; which is far better:
24 Nevertheless to abide in the flesh is more needful for you.
25 And [f] having this confidence, I know that I shall abide and continue with you all for your furtherance and joy of faith;
26 That [g] your rejoicing may be more abundant in Jesus Christ for me by my coming to you again.
27 Only [h] let your conversation be as it becometh the gospel of Christ: that whether I come and see you, or else be absent, I may hear of your affairs, [i] that ye stand fast in one spirit, [k] with one mind [l] striving together for the faith of the gospel;
28 And in nothing terrified by your adversaries: [m] which is to them an evident token of perdition, [n] but to you of salvation, and that of God.
29 For unto you [o] it is given in the behalf of Christ, [p] not only to believe on him, but also to suffer for his sake;
30 [q] Having the same conflict [r] which ye saw in me, and now hear to be in me.

CHAPTER II.

He exhorteth to unity and to all humbleness of mind by the example of Christ's humility.

IF there be therefore any consolation in Christ, if any comfort of love, [a] if any fellowship of the Spirit, if any [b] bowels and mercies,
2 [c] Fulfil ye my joy, [d] that ye be likeminded, having the same love, being of one accord, of one mind.
3 [e] Let nothing be done through strife or vainglory; but [f] in lowliness of mind let each esteem other better than themselves.
4 [g] Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others.
5 [h] Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus:
6 Who, [i] being in the form of God, [k] thought it not robbery to be equal with God:
7 [l] But made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form [m] of a servant, and [n] was made in the [2] likeness of men:
8 And being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and [o] became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross.
9 Wherefore God also [p] hath highly exalted him, and [q] given him a name which is above every name:
10 [r] That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth;
11 And [s] that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father.
12 Wherefore, my beloved, [t] as ye have always obeyed, not as in my presence only, but now much more in my absence, work out your own salvation with [u] fear and trembling.
13 For [x] it is God which worketh in you both to will and to do of his good pleasure.
14 Do all things [y] without murmurings and [z] disputings:
15 That ye may be blameless and [2] harmless, [a] the sons of God, without rebuke, [b] in the midst of [c] a crooked and perverse nation, among whom [3] [d] ye shine as lights in the world;
16 Holding forth the word of life; that [e] I may rejoice in the day of Christ, that [f] I have not run in vain, neither laboured in vain.
17 Yea, and if [g] I be [4] offered upon the sacrifice [h] and service of your faith, [i] I joy, and rejoice with you all.
18 For the same cause also do ye joy, and rejoice with me.
19 [5] But I trust in the Lord Jesus to send [k] Timotheus shortly unto you, that I also may be of good comfort, when I know your state.
20 For I have no man [l] [6] likeminded, who will naturally care for your state.
21 For all [m] seek their own, not the things which are Jesus Christ's.
22 But ye know the proof of him, [n] that, as a son with the father, he hath served with me in the gospel.
23 Him therefore I hope to send presently, so soon as I shall see how it will go with me.
24 But [o] I trust in the Lord that I also myself shall come shortly.
25 Yet I supposed it necessary to send to you [p] Epaphroditus, my brother, and companion in labour, and [q] fellowsoldier, [r] but your messenger, and [s] he that ministered to my wants.
26 [t] For he longed after you all, and was full of heaviness, because that ye had heard that he had been sick.
27 For indeed he was sick nigh unto death: but God had mercy on him; and not on him only, but on me also, lest I should have sorrow upon sorrow.
28 I sent him therefore the more carefully, that, when ye see him again, ye may rejoice, and that I may be the less sorrowful.

29 Receive him therefore in the Lord with all gladness; and [y] [u] hold such in reputation:

30 Because for the work of Christ he was nigh unto death, not regarding his life, [z] to supply your lack of service toward me.

CHAPTER III.

He warneth against false teachers, and acknowledgeth his own imperfection.

FINALLY, my brethren, [a] rejoice in the Lord. To write the same things to you, to me indeed is not grievous, but for you it is safe.

2 [b] Beware of dogs, beware of [c] evil workers, [d] beware of the concision.

3 For we are [e] the circumcision, [f] which worship God in the spirit, and [g] rejoice in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in the flesh.

4 Though [h] I might also have confidence in the flesh. If any other man thinketh that he hath whereof he might trust in the flesh, I more:

5 [i] Circumcised the eighth day, [k] of the stock of Israel, [l] of the tribe of Benjamin, [m] an Hebrew of the Hebrews; as touching the law, [n] a Pharisee;

6 [o] Concerning zeal, [p] persecuting the church; [q] touching the righteousness which is in the law, [r] blameless.

7 But [s] what things were gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ.

8 Yea doubtless, and I count all things but loss [t] for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ,

9 And be found in him, not having [u] mine own righteousness, which is of the law, but [x] that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith:

10 That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and [y] the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death;

11 If by any means I might [z] attain unto the resurrection of the dead.

12 Not as though I had already [a] attained, either were already [b] perfect: but I follow after, if that I may apprehend that for which also I am apprehended of Christ Jesus.

13 Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, [c] forgetting those things which are behind, and [d] reaching forth unto those things which are before,

14 [e] I press toward the mark for the prize of [f] the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

15 Let us therefore, as many as be [g] perfect, [h] be thus minded: and if in any thing ye be otherwise minded, God shall reveal even this unto you.

16 Nevertheless, whereto we have already attained, [i] let us walk [k] by the same rule, [l] let us mind the same thing.

17 Brethren, [m] be followers together of me, and mark them which walk so as [n] ye have us for an ensample.

18 (For many walk, of whom I have told you often, and now tell you even weeping, that they are [o] the enemies of the cross of Christ:

19 [p] Whose end is destruction, [q] whose God is their belly, and [r] whose glory is in their shame, [s] who mind earthly things.)

20 For [t] our conversation is in heaven; [u] from whence also we [x] look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ:

21 [y] Who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, [z] according to the working whereby he is able [a] even to subdue all things unto himself.

CHAPTER IV.

He rejoiceth at the liberality of the Philippians toward him, as shewing the grace of God in them.

THEREFORE, my brethren dearly beloved and [a] longed for, [b] my joy and crown, so [c] stand fast in the Lord, my dearly beloved.

2 I beseech Euodias, and beseech Syntyche, [d] that they be of the same mind in the Lord.

3 And I intreat thee also, true yokefellow, help those women which [e] laboured with me in the gospel, with Clement also, and with other my fellowlabourers, whose names are in [f] the book of life.

4 [g] Rejoice in the Lord alway: and again I say, Rejoice.

5 Let your moderation be known unto all men. [h] The Lord is at hand.

6 [i] Be careful for nothing; but in every thing by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God.

7 And [k] the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus.

8 Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are [2] honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, [l] whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things.

9 [m] Those things, which ye have both learned, and received, and heard, and seen in me, do: and [n] the God of peace shall be with you.

10 But I rejoiced in the Lord greatly, that now at the last [o] your care of me [3] hath flourished again; wherein ye were also careful, but ye lacked opportunity.

11 Not that I speak in respect of want: for I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, [p] therewith to be content.

12 [q] I know both how to be abased, and I know how to abound: every where and in all things I am instructed both to be full and to be hungry, both to abound and to suffer need.

13 I can do all things [r] through Christ which strengtheneth me.

14 Notwithstanding ye have well done, that [s] ye did communicate with my affliction.

15 Now ye Philippians know also, that in the beginning of the gospel, when I departed from Macedonia, [t] no church communicated with me as concerning giving and receiving, but ye only.

16 For even in Thessalonica ye sent once and again unto my necessity.

17 Not because I desire a gift: but I desire [u] fruit that may abound to your account.

18 But [2] I have all, and abound: I am full, having received [x] of Epaphroditus the things which were sent from you, [y] an odour of a sweet smell, [z] a sacrifice acceptable, wellpleasing to God.

19 But my God [a] shall supply all your need [b] according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus.

20 [c] Now unto God and our Father be glory for ever and ever. Amen.

21 Salute every saint in Christ Jesus. The brethren [d] which are with me greet you.

22 All the saints salute you, [e] chiefly they that are of Cæsar's household.

23 [f] The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.

¶ It was written to the Philippians from Rome by Epaphroditus.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE COLOSSIANS.

CHAPTER I.

Paul confirmeth the doctrine of Epaphras, and describeth the true Christ.

PAUL, [a] an apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God, and Timotheus our brother,

2 To the saints [b] and faithful brethren in Christ which are at Colosse: [c] Grace be unto you, and peace, from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

3 [d] We give thanks to God and the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, praying always for you,

4 [e] Since we heard of your faith in Christ Jesus, and of [f] the love which ye have to all the saints,

5 For the hope [g] which is laid up for you in heaven, whereof ye heard before in the word of the truth of the gospel;

6 Which is come unto you, [h] as it is in all the world; and [i] bringeth forth fruit, as it doth also in you, since the day ye heard of it, and knew [k] the grace of God in truth:

7 As ye also learned of [l] Epaphras our dear fellowservant, who is for you [m] a faithful minister of Christ;

8 Who also declared unto us your [n] love in the Spirit.

9 [o] For this cause we also, since the day we heard it, do not cease to pray for you, and to desire [p] that ye might be filled with [q] the knowledge of his will [r] in all wisdom and spiritual understanding;

10 [s] That ye might walk worthy of the Lord [t] unto all pleasing, [u] being fruitful in every good work, and increasing in the knowledge of God;

11 [x] Strengthened with all might, according to his glorious power, [y] unto all patience and longsuffering [z] with joyfulness;

12 [a] Giving thanks unto the Father, which hath made us meet to be partakers of [b] the inheritance of the saints in light:

13 Who hath delivered us from [c] the power of darkness, [d] and hath translated us into the kingdom of [2] his dear Son:

14 [e] In whom we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins:

15 Who is [f] the image of the invisible God, [g] the firstborn of every creature:

16 For [h] by him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or [i] dominions, or principalities, or powers: all things were created [k] by him, and for him:

17 [l] And he is before all things, and by him all things consist.

18 And [m] he is the head of the body, the church: who is the beginning, [n] the firstborn from the dead; that [3] in all things he might have the preeminence.

19 For it pleased the Father that [o] in him should all fulness dwell;

20 And, [4] [p] having made peace through the blood of his cross, [q] by him to reconcile [r] all things unto himself; by him, I say, whether they be things in earth, or things in heaven.

21 And you, [s] that were sometime alienated and enemies [5] in your mind [t] by wicked works, yet now hath he reconciled

22 [u] In the body of his flesh through death, [x] to present you holy and unblameable and unreproveable in his sight:

23 If ye continue in the faith [y] grounded and settled, and be [z] not moved away from the hope of the gospel, which ye have heard, [a] and which was preached [b] to every creature which is under heaven; [c] whereof I Paul am made a minister;

24 [d] Who now rejoice in my sufferings [e] for you, and fill up [f] that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ in my flesh for [g] his body's sake, which is the church:

25 Whereof I am made a minister, according to [h] the dispensation of God which is given to me for you, [2] to fulfil the word of God;

26 Even [i] the mystery which hath been hid from ages and from generations, [k] but now is made manifest to his saints:

27 [l] To whom God would make known what is [m] the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles; which is Christ [3] in you, [n] the hope of glory:

28 Whom we preach, [o] warning every man, and teaching every man in all wisdom; [p] that we may present every man perfect in Christ Jesus:

29 [q] Whereunto I also labour, [r] striving [s] according to his working, which worketh in me mightily.

CHAPTER II.

He exhorteth to constancy in Christ, and to beware of vain traditions.

FOR I would that ye knew what great [4] [a] conflict I have for you, and for them at Laodicea, and for as many as have not seen my face in the flesh;

2 [b] That their hearts might be comforted, [c] being knit together in love, and unto all riches of the full assurance of understanding, [d] to the acknowledgement of the mystery of God, and of the Father, and of Christ;

3 [5] [e] In whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge.

4 And this I say, [f] lest any man should beguile you with enticing words.

5 For [g] though I be absent in the flesh, yet am I with you in the spirit, joying and beholding [h] your order, and the [i] stedfastness of your faith in Christ.

6 [k] As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him:

7 [l] Rooted and built up in him, and stablished in the faith, as ye have been taught, abounding therein with thanksgiving.

8 [m] Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after [n] the tradition of men, after the [6] [o] rudiments of the world, and not after Christ.

9 For [p] in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily.

10 [q] And ye are complete in him, [r] which is the head of all [s] principality and power:

11 In whom also ye are [t] circumcised with the circumcision made without hands, in [u] putting off the body of the sins of the flesh by the circumcision of Christ:

12 [x] Buried with him in baptism, wherein also [y] ye are risen with him through [z] the faith of the operation of God, [a] who hath raised him from the dead.

13 [b] And you, being dead in your sins and the uncircumcision of your flesh, hath he quickened together with him, having forgiven you all trespasses;

14 [c] Blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross;

15 And [d] having spoiled [e] principalities and powers, he made a shew of them openly, triumphing over them [2] in it.

16 Let no man therefore [f] judge you [3] [g] in meat, or in drink, or [4] in respect [h] of an holyday, or of the new moon, or of the sabbath days:

17 [i] Which are a shadow of things to come; but the body is of Christ.

18 [k] Let no man [5] beguile you of your reward [6] in a voluntary humility and worshipping of angels, intruding into those things [l] which he hath not seen, vainly puffed up by his fleshly mind,

19 And not holding [m] the Head, from which all the body by joints and bands having nourishment ministered, and knit together, increaseth with the increase of God.

20 Wherefore if ye be [n] dead with Christ from [o] the [7] rudiments of the world, [p] why, as though living in the world, are ye subject to ordinances,

21 ([q] Touch not; taste not; handle not;

22 Which all are to perish with the using;) [r] after the commandments and doctrines of men?

23 [s] Which things have indeed a shew of wisdom in [t] will worship, and humility, and [8] neglecting of the body; not in any honour to the satisfying of the flesh.

CHAPTER III.

He exhorteth to put off the old man, and to put on Christ.

IF ye then [a] be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where [b] Christ sitteth on the right hand of God.

2 Set your [9] affection on things above, not on things on the earth.

3 [c] For ye are dead, [d] and your life is hid with Christ in God.

4 [e] When Christ, who is [f] our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him [g] in glory.

5 [h] Mortify therefore [i] your members which are upon the earth; [k] fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection, [l] evil concupiscence, and covetousness, [m] which is idolatry:

6 [n] For which things' sake the wrath of God cometh on [o] the children of disobedience:

7 [p] In the which ye also walked some time, when ye lived in them.

8 [q] But now ye also put off all these; anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy, [r] filthy communication out of your mouth.

9 [s] Lie not one to another, [t] seeing that ye have put off the old man with his deeds;

10 And have put on the new man, which [u] is renewed in knowledge [v] after the image of him that [w] created him:

11 Where there is neither [x] Greek nor Jew, circumcision nor uncircumcision, Barbarian, Scythian, bond nor free: [a] but Christ is all, and in all.

12 [b] Put on therefore, [c] as the elect of God, holy and beloved, [d] bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, longsuffering;

13 [e] Forbearing one another, and forgiving one another, if any man have a [2] quarrel against any: even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye.

14 [f] And above all these things [g] put on charity, which is the [h] bond of perfectness.

15 And let [i] the peace of God rule in your hearts, [k] to the which also ye are called [l] in one body; [m] and be ye thankful.

16 Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another [n] in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing [o] with grace in your hearts to the Lord.

17 And [p] whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, [q] giving thanks to God and the Father by him.

18 [r] Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, [s] as it is fit in the Lord.

19 [t] Husbands, love your wives, and be not [u] bitter against them.

20 [x] Children, obey your parents [y] in all things: for this is well pleasing unto the Lord.

21 [z] Fathers, provoke not your children to anger, lest they be discouraged.

22 [a] Servants, obey [b] in all things your masters [c] according to the flesh; not with eyeservice, as menpleasers; but in singleness of heart, fearing God:

23 [d] And whatsoever ye do, do it heartily, as to the Lord, and not unto men;

24 [e] Knowing that of the Lord ye shall receive the reward of the inheritance: [f] for ye serve the Lord Christ.

25 But he that doeth wrong shall receive for the wrong which he hath done: and [g] there is no respect of persons.

CHAPTER IV.

He exhorteth to be fervent in prayer, and to walk wisely toward them without knowledge of Christ.

[a] MASTERS, give unto your servants that which is just and equal; knowing that ye also have a Master in heaven.

2 [b] Continue in prayer, and watch in the same [c] with thanksgiving;
3 [d] Withal praying also for us, that God would [e] open unto us a door of utterance, to speak [f] the mystery of Christ, [g] for which I am also in bonds:
4 That I may make it manifest, as I ought to speak.
5 [h] Walk in wisdom toward them that are without, [i] redeeming the time.
6 Let your speech be alway [k] with grace, [l] seasoned with salt, [m] that ye may know how ye ought to answer every man.
7 [n] All my state shall Tychicus declare unto you, who is a beloved brother, and a faithful minister and fellowservant in the Lord:
8 [o] Whom I have sent unto you for the same purpose, that he might know your estate, and comfort your hearts;
9 With [p] Onesimus, a faithful and beloved brother, who is one of you. They shall make known unto you all things which are done here.
10 [q] Aristarchus my fellowprisoner saluteth you, and [r] Marcus, sister's son to Barnabas, (touching whom ye received commandments: if he come unto you, receive him;)
11 And Jesus, which is called Justus, who are of the circumcision. These only are my fellowworkers unto the kingdom of God, which have been a comfort unto me.
12 [s] Epaphras, who is one of you, a servant of Christ, saluteth you, always [2] [t] labouring fervently for you in prayers, that ye may stand [u] perfect and [3] complete in all the will of God.
13 For I bear him record, that he hath a great zeal for you, and them that are in Laodicea, and them in Hierapolis.
14 [x] Luke, the beloved physician, and [y] Demas, greet you.
15 Salute the brethren which are in Laodicea, and Nymphas, and [z] the church which is in his house.
16 And when [a] this epistle is read among you, cause that it be read also in the church of the Laodiceans; and that ye likewise read the epistle from Laodicea.
17 And say to [b] Archippus, Take heed to [c] the ministry which thou hast received in the Lord, that thou fulfil it.
18 [d] The salutation by the hand of me Paul. [e] Remember my bonds. [f] Grace be with you. Amen.

¶ Written from Rome to the Colossians by Tychicus and Onesimus.

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE THESSALONIANS.

CHAPTER I.

Paul's conviction of the sincerity of the faith of the Thessalonians, and their conversion to God.

PAUL, and [a] Silvanus, and Timotheus, unto the church of the Thessalonians which is in God the Father and in the Lord Jesus Christ: [b] Grace be unto you, and peace, from God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ.
2 [c] We give thanks to God always for you all, making mention of you in our prayers;
3 [d] Remembering without ceasing [e] your work of faith, [f] and labour of love, and patience of hope in our Lord Jesus Christ, in the sight of God and our Father;
4 Knowing, brethren [2] beloved, [g] your election of God.
5 For [h] our gospel came not unto you in word only, but also in power, and [i] in the Holy Ghost, [k] and in much assurance; as [l] ye know what manner of men we were among you for your sake.
6 And [m] ye became followers of us, and of the Lord, having received the word in much affliction, [n] with joy of the Holy Ghost:
7 So that ye were ensamples to all that believe in Macedonia and Achaia.
8 For from you [o] sounded out the word of the Lord not only in Macedonia and Achaia, but also [p] in every place your faith to God-ward is spread abroad; so that we need not to speak any thing.
9 For they themselves shew of us [q] what manner of entering in we had unto you, [r] and how ye turned to God from idols to serve the living and true God;
10 And [s] to wait for his Son [t] from heaven, [u] whom he raised from the dead, even Jesus, which delivered us [x] from the wrath to come.

CHAPTER II.

In what manner the gospel was preached to the Thessalonians, and how they received it.

FOR [a] yourselves, brethren, know our entrance in unto you, that it was not in vain :

2 But even after that we had suffered before, and were shamefully entreated, as ye know, at [b] Philippi, [c] we were bold in our God [d] to speak unto you the gospel of God [e] with much contention.

3 [f] For our exhortation was not of deceit, nor of uncleanness, nor in guile :

4 But as [g] we were allowed of God [h] to be put in trust with the gospel, even so we speak ; [i] not as pleasing men, but God, [k] which trieth our hearts.

5 For [l] neither at any time used we flattering words, as ye know, nor a cloke of covetousness ; [m] God is witness :

6 [n] Nor of men sought we glory, neither of you, nor yet of others, when [o] we might have [2] been [p] burdensome, [q] as the apostles of Christ.

7 But [r] we were gentle among you, even as a nurse cherisheth her children :

8 So being affectionately desirous of you, we were willing [s] to have imparted unto you, not the gospel of God only, but also [t] our own souls, because ye were dear unto us.

9 For ye remember, brethren, our labour and travail : for [u] labouring night and day, [x] because we would not be chargeable unto any of you, we preached unto you the gospel of God.

10 [y] Ye are witnesses, and God also, [z] how holily and justly and unblameably we behaved ourselves among you that believe :

11 As ye know how we exhorted and comforted and charged every one of you, as a father doth his children,

12 [a] That ye would walk worthy of God, [b] who hath called you unto his kingdom and glory.

13 For this cause also thank we God [c] without ceasing, because, when ye received the word of God which ye heard of us, ye received it [d] not as the word of men, but as it is in truth, the word of God, which effectually worketh also in you that believe.

14 For ye, brethren, became followers [e] of the churches of God which in Judæa are in Christ Jesus : for [f] ye also have suffered like things of your own countrymen, [g] even as they have of the Jews :

15 [h] Who both killed the Lord Jesus, and [i] their own prophets, and have [2] persecuted us ; and they please not God, [k] and are contrary to all men :

16 [l] Forbidding us to speak to the Gentiles that they might be saved, [m] to fill up their sins alway : [n] for the wrath is come upon them to the uttermost.

17 But we, brethren, being taken from you for a short time [o] in presence, not in heart, endeavoured the more abundantly [p] to see your face with great desire.

18 Wherefore we would have come unto you, even I Paul, once and again ; but [q] Satan hindered us.

19 For [r] what is our hope, or joy, or [s] crown of [3] rejoicing ? Are not even ye in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ [t] at his coming ?

20 For ye are our glory and joy.

CHAPTER III.

Paul's love to the Thessalonians shewn by rejoicing in their well doing, and by praying for them.

WHEREFORE [a] when we could no longer forbear, [b] we thought it good to be left at Athens alone ;

2 And sent [c] Timotheus, our brother, and minister of God, and our fellowlabourer in the gospel of Christ, to establish you, and to comfort you concerning your faith :

3 [d] That no man should be moved by these afflictions : for yourselves know that [e] we are appointed thereunto.

4 [f] For verily, when we were with you, we told you before that we should suffer tribulation ; even as it came to pass, and ye know.

5 For this cause, [g] when I could no longer forbear, I sent to know your faith, [h] lest by some means the tempter have tempted you, and [i] our labour be in vain.

6 [k] But now when Timotheus came from you unto us, and brought us good tidings of your faith and charity, and that ye have good remembrance of us always, desiring greatly to see us, [l] as we also to see you :

7 Therefore, brethren, [m] we were comforted over you in all our affliction and distress by your faith :

8 For now we live, if ye [n] stand fast in the Lord.

9 [o] For what thanks can we render to God again for you, for all the joy wherewith we joy for your sakes before our God ;

10 [p] Night and day [q] praying exceedingly [r] that we might see your face, [s] and might perfect that which is lacking in your faith ?

11 Now God himself and our Father, and our Lord Jesus Christ, [2] [t] direct our way unto you.

12 And the Lord [u] make you to increase and abound in love [x] one toward another, and toward all men, even as we do toward you:

13 To the end he may [y] stablish your hearts unblameable in holiness before God, even our Father, at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ [z] with all his saints.

CHAPTER IV.

He exhorteth them to live holily, love one another, and follow their own business.

FURTHERMORE then we [3] beseech you, brethren, and [4] exhort you by the Lord Jesus, [a] that as ye have received of us [b] how ye ought to walk [c] and to please God, so ye would abound more and more.

2 For ye know what commandments we gave you by the Lord Jesus.

3 For this is [d] the will of God, even [e] your sanctification, [f] that ye should abstain from fornication:

4 [g] That every one of you should know how to possess his vessel in sanctification and honour;

5 [h] Not in the lust of concupiscence, [i] even as the Gentiles [k] which know not God:

6 [l] That no man go beyond and [5] defraud his brother [6] in any matter: because that the Lord [m] is the avenger of all such, as we also have forewarned you and testified.

7 For God hath not called us unto uncleanness, [n] but unto holiness.

8 [o] He therefore that [7] despiseth, despiseth not man, but God, [p] who hath also given unto us his holy Spirit.

9 But as touching brotherly love [q] ye need not that I write unto you: for [r] ye yourselves are taught of God [s] to love one another.

10 [t] And indeed ye do it toward all the brethren which are in all Macedonia: but we beseech you, brethren, [u] that ye increase more and more;

11 And that ye study to be quiet, and [x] to do your own business, and [y] to work with your own hands, as we commanded you;

12 [z] That ye may walk honestly toward them that are without, and that ye may have lack [8] of nothing.

13 But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, [a] even as others [b] which have no hope.

14 For [c] if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so [d] them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him.

15 For this we say unto you [e] by the word of the Lord, that [f] we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent them which are asleep.

16 For [g] the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with [h] the trump of God: [i] and the dead in Christ shall rise first:

17 [k] Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them [l] in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so [m] shall we ever be with the Lord.

18 [n] Wherefore [2] comfort one another with these words.

CHAPTER V.

The description of Christ's coming to judgment.

BUT of [a] the times and the seasons, brethren, [b] ye have no need that I write unto you.

2 For yourselves know perfectly that [c] the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night.

3 For when they shall say, Peace and safety; then [d] sudden destruction cometh upon them, [e] as travail upon a woman with child; and they shall not escape.

4 [f] But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief.

5 Ye are all [g] the children of light, and the children of the day: we are not of the night, nor of darkness.

6 [h] Therefore let us not sleep, as do others; but [i] let us watch and be sober.

7 For [k] they that sleep sleep in the night; and they that be drunken [l] are drunken in the night.

8 But let us, who are of the day, be sober, [m] putting on the breastplate of faith and love; and for an helmet, the hope of salvation.

9 For [n] God hath not appointed us to wrath, [o] but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ,

10 [p] Who died for us, that, whether we wake or sleep, we should live together with him.

11 [q] Wherefore [2] comfort yourselves together, and edify one another, even as also ye do.

12 And we beseech you, brethren, [r] to know them which labour among you, and are over you in the Lord, and admonish you;

13 And to esteem them very highly in love for their work's sake. [s] And be at peace among yourselves.

14 Now we [3] exhort you, brethren, [t] warn them that are [4] unruly, [u] comfort the feebleminded, [x] support the weak, [y] be patient toward all men.

15 [z] See that none render evil for evil unto any man; but ever [a] follow that which is good, both among yourselves, and to all men.

16 [b] Rejoice evermore.

17 [c] Pray without ceasing.

18 [d] In every thing give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you.

19 [e] Quench not the Spirit.

20 [f] Despise not prophesyings.

21 [g] Prove all things; [h] hold fast that which is good.

22 [i] Abstain from all appearance of evil.

23 And [k] the very God of peace [l] sanctify you wholly; and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body [m] be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ.

24 [n] Faithful is he that calleth you, who also will do it.

25 Brethren, [o] pray for us.

26 [p] Greet all the brethren with an holy kiss.

27 I [5] charge you by the Lord that [q] this epistle be read unto all the holy brethren.

28 [r] The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you. Amen.

¶ The first epistle unto the Thessalonians was written from Athens.

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE THESSALONIANS.

CHAPTER I.

Paul certifieth them of the good opinion he had of their faith, love, and patience.

PAUL, [a] and Silvanus, and Timotheus, unto the church of the Thessalonians [b] in God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ:

2 [c] Grace unto you, and peace, from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.

3 [d] We are bound to thank God always for you, brethren, as it is meet, because that your faith groweth exceedingly, and the charity of every one of you all toward each other aboundeth;

4 So that [e] we ourselves glory in you in the churches of God [f] for your patience and faith [g] in all your persecutions and tribulations that ye endure:

5 Which is [h] a manifest token of the righteous judgment of God, that ye may be counted worthy of the kingdom of God, [i] for which ye also suffer:

6 [k] Seeing it is a righteous thing with God to recompense tribulation to them that trouble you;

7 And to you who are troubled [l] rest with us, when [m] the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with [2] his mighty angels,

8 [n] In flaming fire [3] taking vengeance on them [o] that know not God, and [p] that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ:

9 [q] Who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and [r] from the glory of his power;

10 [s] When he shall come to be glorified in his saints, [t] and to be admired in all them that believe (because our testimony among you was believed) in that day.

11 Wherefore also we pray always for you, that our God would [4] [u] count you worthy of this calling, and fulfil all the good pleasure of his goodness, and [x] the work of faith with power:

12 [y] That the name of our Lord Jesus Christ may be glorified in you, and ye in him, according to the grace of our God and the Lord Jesus Christ.

CHAPTER II.

He sheweth that there shall be a departure from the faith, and a discovery of antichrist.

NOW we beseech you, brethren, [a] by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, [b] and by our gathering together unto him,

2 [c] That ye be not soon shaken in mind, or be troubled, neither by spirit, nor by word, nor by letter as from us, as that the day of Christ is at hand.

3 [d] Let no man deceive you by any means: for that day shall not come, [e] except there come a falling away first, and [f] that man of sin be revealed, [g] the son of perdition;

4 Who opposeth and [h] exalteth himself [i] above all that is called God, or that is worshipped; so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, shewing himself that he is God.

5 Remember ye not, that, when I was yet with you, I told you these things?

6 And now ye know what [5] withholdeth that he might be revealed in his time.

7 For [k] the mystery of iniquity doth already work: only he who now letteth will let, until he be taken out of the way.

8 And then shall that Wicked be revealed, [l] whom the Lord shall consume [m] with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy [n] with the brightness of his coming:

9 Even him, whose coming is [o] after the working of Satan with all power and [p] signs and lying wonders,

10 And with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in [q] them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved.

11 And [r] for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, [s] that they should believe a lie:

12 That they all might be damned who believed not the truth, but [t] had pleasure in unrighteousness.

13 But [u] we are bound to give thanks alway to God for you, brethren beloved of the Lord, because God [x] hath [y] from the beginning chosen you to salvation [z] through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth:

14 Whereunto he called you by our gospel, to [a] the obtaining of the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ.

15 Therefore, brethren, [b] stand fast, and hold [c] the traditions which ye have been taught, whether by word, or our epistle.

16 [d] Now our Lord Jesus Christ himself, and God, even our Father, [e] which hath loved us, and hath given us everlasting consolation and [f] good hope through grace, 17 Comfort your hearts, [g] and stablish you in every good word and work.

CHAPTER III.

He maketh request to God in their behalf, and giveth them divers precepts.

FINALLY, brethren, [a] pray for us, that the word of the Lord [2] may have free course, and be glorified, even as it is with you:

2 And [b] that we may be delivered from [3] unreasonable and wicked men: [c] for all men have not faith.

3 But [d] the Lord is faithful, who shall stablish you, and [e] keep you from evil.

4 And [f] we have confidence in the Lord touching you, that ye both do and will do the things which we command you.

5 And [g] the Lord direct your hearts into the love of God, and into [4] the patient waiting for Christ.

6 Now we command you, brethren, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, [h] that ye withdraw yourselves [i] from every brother that walketh [k] disorderly, and not after [l] the tradition which he received of us.

7 For yourselves know [m] how ye ought to follow us: for [n] we behaved not ourselves disorderly among you;

8 Neither did we eat any man's bread for nought; but [o] wrought with labour and travail night and day, that we might not be chargeable to any of you:

9 [p] Not because we have not power, but to make [q] ourselves an ensample unto you to follow us.

10 For even when we were with you, this we commanded you, [r] that if any would not work, neither should he eat.

11 For we hear that there are some [s] which walk among you disorderly, [t] working not at all, but are busybodies.

12 [u] Now them that are such we command and exhort by our Lord Jesus Christ, [x] that with quietness they work, and eat their own bread.

13 But ye, brethren, [y] [2] be not weary in well doing.

14 And if any man obey not our word [3] by this epistle, note that man, and [z] have no company with him, that he may be ashamed.

15 [a] Yet count him not as an enemy, [b] but admonish him as a brother.

16 Now [c] the Lord of peace himself give you peace always by all means. The Lord be with you all.

17 [d] The salutation of Paul with mine own hand, which is the token in every epistle: so I write.

18 [e] The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.

¶ The second epistle to the Thessalonians was written from Athens.

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO TIMOTHY.

CHAPTER I.

Of Saint Paul's calling to be an apostle, and of Hymenæus and Alexander.

PAUL, an apostle of Jesus Christ [a] by the commandment [b] of God our Saviour, and Lord Jesus Christ, [c] which is our hope;

2 Unto [d] Timothy, [e] my own son in the faith: [f] Grace, mercy, and peace, from God our Father and Jesus Christ our Lord.

3 As I besought thee to abide still at Ephesus, [g] when I went into Macedonia, that thou mightest charge some [h] that they teach no other doctrine,

4 [i] Neither give heed to fables and endless genealogies, [k] which minister questions, rather than godly edifying which is in faith: so do.

5 Now [l] the end of the commandment is charity [m] out of a pure heart, and of a good conscience, and of faith unfeigned:

6 From which some [2] having swerved have turned aside unto [n] vain jangling;

7 Desiring to be teachers of the law; [o] understanding neither what they say, nor whereof they affirm.

8 But we know that [p] the law is good, if a man use it lawfully;

9 [q] Knowing this, that the law is not made for a righteous man, but for the lawless and disobedient, for the ungodly and for sinners, for unholy and profane, for murderers of fathers and murderers of mothers, for manslayers,

10 For whoremongers, for them that defile themselves with mankind, for menstealers, for liars, for perjured persons, and if there be any other thing that is contrary [r] to sound doctrine;

11 According to the glorious gospel of [s] the blessed God, [t] which was committed to my trust.

12 And I thank Christ Jesus our Lord, [u] who hath enabled me, [x] for that he counted me faithful, [y] putting me into the ministry;

13 [z] Who was before a blasphemer, and a persecutor, and injurious: but I obtained mercy, because [a] I did it ignorantly in unbelief.

14 [b] And the grace of our Lord was exceeding abundant [c] with faith [d] and love which is in Christ Jesus.

15 [e] This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that [f] Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners; of whom I am chief.

16 Howbeit for this cause [g] I obtained mercy, that in me first Jesus Christ might shew forth all longsuffering, [h] for a pattern to them which should hereafter believe on him to life everlasting.

17 Now unto [i] the King eternal, [k] immortal, [l] invisible, [m] the only wise God, [n] be honour and glory for ever and ever. Amen.

18 This charge [o] I commit unto thee, son Timothy, [p] according to the prophecies which went before on thee, that thou by them mightest [q] war a good warfare;

19 [r] Holding faith, and a good conscience; which some having put away concerning faith [s] have made shipwreck:

20 Of whom is [t] Hymenæus and [u] Alexander; whom I have [x] delivered unto Satan, that they may learn not to [y] blaspheme.

CHAPTER II.

It is meet to give thanks for all men.

I [2] EXHORT therefore, that, first of all, supplications, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks, be made for all men;

2 [a] For kings, and [b] for all that are in [3] authority; that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty.

3 For this is [c] good and acceptable in the sight [d] of God our Saviour;

4 [e] Who will have all men to be saved, [f] and to come unto the knowledge of the truth.

5 [g] For there is one God, and [h] one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus;

6 [i] Who gave himself a ransom for all, [k] [4] to be testified [l] in due time.

7 [m] Whereunto I am ordained a preacher, and an apostle, ([n] I speak the truth in Christ, and lie not;) [o] a teacher of the Gentiles in faith and verity.

8 I will therefore that men pray [p] every where, [q] lifting up holy hands, without wrath and doubting.

9 In like manner also, that [r] women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety; not with [5] broided hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array;

10 [s] But (which becometh women professing godliness) with good works.

11 Let the woman learn in silence with all subjection.

12 But [t] I suffer not a woman to teach, [u] nor to usurp authority over the man, but to be in silence.

13 For [x] Adam was first formed, then Eve.

14 And [y] Adam was not deceived, but the woman being deceived was in the transgression.

15 Notwithstanding she shall be saved in childbearing, if they continue in faith and charity and holiness with sobriety.

CHAPTER III.

Of bishops and deacons and their wives, and of the truth taught in the church.

THIS [a] is a true saying, If a man desire the office of a [b] bishop, he desireth a good [c] work.

2 [d] A bishop then must be blameless, [e] the husband of one wife, vigilant, sober, [6] of good behaviour, given to hospitality, [f] apt to teach;

3 [g] [7] Not given to wine, [h] no striker, [i] not greedy of filthy lucre; but [k] patient, not a brawler, not covetous;

4 One that ruleth well his own house, [l] having his children in subjection with all gravity;

5 (For if a man know not how to rule his own house, how shall he take care of the church of God?)

6 Not [2] a novice, lest being lifted up with pride [m] he fall into the condemnation of the devil.

7 Moreover he must have a good report [n] of them which are without; lest he fall into reproach [o] and the snare of the devil.

8 Likewise must [p] the deacons be grave, not doubletongued, [q] not given to much wine, not greedy of filthy lucre;

9 [r] Holding the mystery of the faith in a pure conscience.

10 And let these also first be proved; then let them use the office of a deacon, being found blameless.

11 [s] Even so must their wives be grave, not slanderers, sober, faithful in all things.

12 Let the deacons be the husbands of one wife, ruling their children and their own houses well.

13 For [t] they that have [3] used the office of a deacon well purchase to themselves a good degree, and great boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus.

14 These things write I unto thee, hoping to come unto thee shortly:

15 But if I tarry long, that thou mayest know how thou oughtest to behave thyself [u] in the house of God, which is the church of the living God, the pillar and [4] ground of the truth.

16 And without controversy great is the mystery of godliness: [x] God was [5] manifest in the flesh, [y] justified in the Spirit, [z] seen of angels, [a] preached unto the Gentiles, [b] believed on in the world, [c] received up into glory.

CHAPTER IV.

That Timothy may not fail in his duty, he is furnished with divers precepts.

NOW the Spirit [a] speaketh expressly, that [b] in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed [c] to seducing spirits, [d] and doctrines of devils;

2 [e] Speaking lies in hypocrisy; [f] having their conscience seared with a hot iron;

3 [g] Forbidding to marry, [h] and commanding to abstain from meats, which God hath created [i] to be received [k] with thanksgiving of them which believe and know the truth.

4 For [l] every creature of God is good, and nothing to be refused, if it be received with thanksgiving:

5 For it is sanctified by the word of God and prayer.

6 If thou put the brethren in remembrance of these things, thou shalt be a good minister of Jesus Christ, [m] nourished up in the words of faith and of good doctrine, whereunto thou hast attained.

7 But [n] refuse profane and old wives' fables, and [o] exercise thyself rather unto godliness.

8 For [p] bodily exercise profiteth [2] little: [q] but godliness is profitable unto all things, [r] having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come.

9 [s] This is a faithful saying and worthy of all acceptation.

10 For therefore [t] we both labour and suffer reproach, because we [u] trust in the living God, [x] who is the Saviour of all men, specially of those that believe.

11 [y] These things command and teach.

12 [z] Let no man despise thy youth: but [a] be thou an example of the believers, in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity.

13 Till I come, give attendance to reading, to exhortation, to doctrine.

14 [b] Neglect not the gift that is in thee, which was given thee [c] by prophecy, [d] with the laying on of the hands of the presbytery.

15 Meditate upon these things: give thyself wholly to them; that thy profiting may appear [3] to all.

16 [e] Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine; continue in them: for in doing this thou shalt both [f] save thyself, and [g] them that hear thee.

CHAPTER V.

Rules to be observed in reproving; of widows and elders; a precept for Timothy's health.

REBUKE [a] not an elder, but intreat him as a father; and the younger men as brethren;

2 The elder women as mothers; the younger as sisters, with all purity.

3 Honour widows [b] that are widows indeed.

4 But if any widow have children or nephews, let them learn first to shew [4] piety at home, and [c] to requite their parents: [d] for that is good and acceptable before God.

5 [e] Now she that is a widow indeed, and desolate, trusteth in God, and [f] continueth in supplications and prayers [g] night and day.

6 [h] But she that liveth [5] in pleasure is dead while she liveth.

7 [i] And these things give in charge, that they may be blameless.

8 But if any provide not for his own, [k] and specially for those of his own [6] house, [l] he hath denied the faith, [m] and is worse than an infidel.

9 Let not a widow be [7] taken into the number under threescore years old, [n] having been the wife of one man,

10 Well reported of for good works; if she have brought up children, if she have [o] lodged strangers, if she have [p] washed the saints' feet, if she have relieved the afflicted, if she have diligently followed every good work.

11 But the younger widows refuse: for when they have begun to wax wanton against Christ, they will marry;

12 Having damnation, because they have cast off their first faith.

13 [q] And withal they learn to be idle, wandering about from house to house; and not only idle, but tattlers also and busybodies, speaking things which they ought not.

14 [r] I will therefore that the younger women marry, bear children, guide the house, [8] give none occasion to the adversary [2] to speak reproachfully.

15 For some are already turned aside after Satan.

16 If any man or woman that believeth have widows, let them relieve them, and let not the church be charged; that it may relieve [t] them that are widows indeed.

17 [u] Let the elders that rule well [x] be counted worthy of double honour, especially they who labour in the word and doctrine.

18 For the scripture saith, [y] Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn. And, [z] The labourer is worthy of his reward.

19 Against an elder receive not an accusation, but [3] [a] before two or three witnesses.

20 [b] Them that sin rebuke before all, [c] that others also may fear.

21 [d] I charge thee before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, and the elect angels, that thou observe these things [4] without preferring one before another, doing nothing by partiality.

22 [e] Lay hands suddenly on no man, [f] neither be partaker of other men's sins: keep thyself pure.

23 Drink no longer water, but use a little wine [g] for thy stomach's sake and thine often infirmities.

24 [h] Some men's sins are open beforehand, going before to judgment; and some men they follow after.

25 Likewise also the good works of some are manifest beforehand; and they that are otherwise cannot be hid.

CHAPTER VI.

Of the duty of servants: godliness is great gain, and love of money the root of all evil.

LET as many [a] servants as are under the yoke count their own masters worthy of all honour, [b] that the name of God and his doctrine be not blasphemed.

2 And they that have believing masters, let them not despise them, [c] because they are brethren; but rather do them service, because they are [2] faithful and beloved, partakers of the benefit. [d] These things teach and exhort.

3 If any man [e] teach otherwise, and consent [f] not to wholesome words, even the words of our Lord Jesus Christ, [g] and to the doctrine which is according to godliness;

4 He is [3] proud, [h] knowing nothing, but [4] doting about [i] questions and strifes of words, whereof cometh envy, strife, railings, evil surmisings,

5 [k] [5] Perverse disputings of [l] men of corrupt minds, and destitute of the truth, [m] supposing that gain is godliness: [n] from such withdraw thyself.

6 But [o] godliness with contentment is great gain.

7 For [p] we brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out.

8 And [q] having food and raiment let us be therewith content.

9 But [r] they that will be rich fall into temptation [s] and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, [t] which drown men in destruction and perdition.

10 [u] For the love of money is the root of all evil: which while some coveted after, they have [6] erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows.

11 [x] But thou, [y] O man of God, flee these things; and follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, meekness.

12 [z] Fight the good fight of faith, [a] lay hold on eternal life, whereunto thou art also called, [b] and hast professed a good profession before many witnesses.

13 [c] I give thee charge in the sight of God, [d] who quickeneth all things, and before Christ Jesus, [e] who before Pontius Pilate witnessed a good [2] confession;

14 That thou keep this commandment without spot, unrebukeable, [f] until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ:

15 Which in his times he shall shew, who is [g] the blessed and only Potentate, [h] the King of kings, and Lord of lords;

16 [i] Who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto; [k] whom no man hath seen, nor can see: [l] to whom be honour and power everlasting. Amen.

17 Charge them that are rich in this world, that they be not highminded, [m] nor trust in [3] [n] uncertain riches, but in [o] the living God, [p] who giveth us richly all things to enjoy;

18 That they do good, that [q] they be rich in good works, [r] ready to distribute, [4] [s] willing to communicate;

19 [t] Laying up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come, that they may [u] lay hold on eternal life.

20 O Timothy, [x] keep that which is committed to thy trust, [y] avoiding profane and vain babblings, and oppositions of science falsely so called:

21 Which some professing [z] have erred concerning the faith. Grace be with thee. Amen.

¶ The first to Timothy was written from Laodicea, which is the chiefest city of Phrygia Pacatiana.

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO TIMOTHY.

CHAPTER I.

Paul's love to Timothy, and his exhortation to persist in the truth he had learned.

PAUL, [a] an apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God, according to [b] the promise of life which is in Christ Jesus,

2 [c] To Timothy, my dearly beloved son: Grace, mercy, and peace, from God the Father and Christ Jesus our Lord.

3 [d] I thank God, [e] whom I serve from my forefathers with pure conscience, that [f] without ceasing I have remembrance of thee in my prayers night and day;

4 [g] Greatly desiring to see thee, being mindful of thy tears, that I may be filled with joy;

5 When I call to remembrance [h] the unfeigned faith that is in thee, which dwelt first in thy grandmother Lois, and [i] thy mother Eunice; and I am persuaded that in thee also.

6 Wherefore I put thee in remembrance [k] that thou stir up the gift of God, which is in thee by the putting on of my hands.

7 For [l] God hath not given us the spirit of fear; [m] but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind.

8 [n] Be not thou therefore ashamed of [o] the testimony of our Lord, nor of me [p] his prisoner: [q] but be thou partaker of the afflictions of the gospel according to the power of God;

9 [r] Who hath saved us, and [s] called us with an holy calling, [t] not according to our works, but [u] according to his own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus [x] before the world began,

10 But [y] is now made manifest by the appearing of our Saviour Jesus Christ,

[z] who hath abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel:

11 [a] Whereunto I am appointed a preacher, and an apostle, and a teacher of the Gentiles.

12 [b] For the which cause I also suffer these things: nevertheless I am not ashamed: [c] for I know whom I have [2] believed, and am persuaded that he is able to [d] keep that which I have committed unto him [e] against that day.

13 [f] Hold fast [g] the form of [h] sound words, [i] which thou hast heard of me, [k] in faith and love which is in Christ Jesus.

14 [l] That good thing which was committed unto thee keep by the Holy Ghost [m] which dwelleth in us.

15 This thou knowest, that [n] all they which are in Asia be [o] turned away from me; of whom are Phygellus and Hermogenes.

16 The Lord [p] give mercy unto [q] the house of Onesiphorus; [r] for he oft refreshed me, and [s] was not ashamed of [t] my chain:

17 But, when he was in Rome, he sought me out very diligently, and found me.

18 The Lord grant unto him [u] that he may find mercy of the Lord [x] in that day: and in how many things he [y] ministered unto me at Ephesus, thou knowest very well.

CHAPTER II.

Exhortation to constancy and perseverance, and to the duty of a faithful servant of the Lord.

THOU therefore, [a] my son, [b] be strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus.

2 [c] And the things that thou hast heard of me [3] among many witnesses, [d] the same commit thou to faithful men, who shall be [e] able to teach others also.

3 [f] Thou therefore endure hardness, [g] as a good soldier of Jesus Christ.

4 [h] No man that warreth entangleth himself with the affairs of this life; that he may please him who hath chosen him to be a soldier.

5 And [i] if a man also strive for masteries, yet is he not crowned, except he strive lawfully.

6 [k 2] The husbandman that laboureth must be first partaker of the fruits.

7 Consider what I say; and the Lord give thee understanding in all things.

8 Remember that Jesus Christ [l] of the seed of David [m] was raised from the dead [n] according to my gospel:

9 [o] Wherein I suffer trouble, as an evil doer, [p] even unto bonds; [q] but the word of God is not bound.

10 Therefore [r] I endure all things for the elect's sakes, [s] that they may also obtain the salvation which is in Christ Jesus with eternal glory.

11 [t] It is a faithful saying: For [u] if we be dead with him, we shall also live with him:

12 [x] If we suffer, we shall also reign with him: [y] if we deny him, he also will deny us:

13 [z] If we believe not, yet he abideth faithful: [a] he cannot deny himself.

14 Of these things put them in remembrance, [b] charging them before the Lord [c] that they strive not about words to no profit, but to the subverting of the hearers.

15 Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth.

16 But [d] shun profane and vain babblings: for they will increase unto more ungodliness.

17 And their word will eat as doth a [3] canker: of whom is [e] Hymenæus and Philetus;

18 Who [f] concerning the truth have erred, [g] saying that the resurrection is past already; and overthrow the faith of some.

19 Nevertheless [h] the foundation of God standeth [4] sure, having this seal, The Lord [i] knoweth them that are his. And, Let every one that nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquity.

20 [k] But in a great house there are not only vessels of gold and of silver, but also of wood and of earth; [l] and some to honour, and some to dishonour.

21 [m] If a man therefore purge himself from these, he shall be a vessel unto honour, sanctified, and meet for the master's use, and [n] prepared unto every good work.

22 Flee also youthful lusts: but [o] follow righteousness, faith, charity, peace, with them that [p] call on the Lord [q] out of a pure heart.

23 But [r] foolish and unlearned questions avoid, knowing that they do gender strifes.

24 And [s] the servant of the Lord must not strive; but be gentle unto all men, [t] apt to teach, [2] patient,

25 [u] In meekness instructing those that oppose themselves; [x] if God peradventure will give them repentance [y] to the acknowledging of the truth;

26 And that they may [3] recover themselves [z] out of the snare of the devil, who are [4] taken captive by him at his will.

CHAPTER III.

Of the times to come, and of enemies of the truth.

THIS know also, that [a] in the last days perilous times shall come.
2 For men shall be [b] lovers of their own selves, [c] covetous, [d] boasters, [e] proud, [f] blasphemers, [g] disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy,
3 [h] Without natural affection, [i] truce-breakers, [5] false accusers, [k] incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good,
4 [l] Traitors, heady, highminded, [m] lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God;
5 Having a form of godliness, but [n] denying the power thereof: [o] from such turn away.
6 For [p] of this sort are they which creep into houses, and lead captive silly women laden with sins, led away with divers lusts,
7 Ever learning, and never able [q] to come to the knowledge of the truth.
8 [r] Now as Jannes and Jambres withstood Moses, so do these also resist the truth: [s] men of corrupt minds, [t] [6] reprobate concerning the faith.
9 But they shall proceed no further: for their folly shall be manifest unto all men, [u] as their's also was.
10 [x] But [7] thou hast fully known my doctrine, manner of life, purpose, faith, longsuffering, charity, patience,
11 Persecutions, afflictions, which came unto me [y] at Antioch, [z] at Iconium, [a] at Lystra; what persecutions I endured: but [b] out of them all the Lord delivered me.
12 Yea, and [c] all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution.
13 [d] But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived.
14 But [e] continue thou in the things which thou hast learned and hast been assured of, knowing of whom thou hast learned them;
15 And that from a child thou hast known [f] the holy scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus.
16 [g] All scripture is given by inspiration of God, [h] and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness:
17 [i] That the man of God may be perfect, [2] [k] throughly furnished unto all good works.

CHAPTER IV.

Exhortation to Timothy to do his duty, and certification of the nearness of Saint Paul's death.

I [a] CHARGE thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, [b] who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom;
2 Preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, [c] rebuke, [d] exhort with all longsuffering and doctrine.
3 [e] For the time will come when they will not endure [f] sound doctrine; [g] but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears;
4 And they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and [h] shall be turned unto fables.
5 But watch thou in all things, [i] endure afflictions, do the work of [k] an evangelist, [3] make full proof of thy ministry.
6 For [l] I am now ready to be offered, and the time of [m] my departure is at hand.
7 [n] I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith:
8 Henceforth there is laid up for me [o] a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me [p] at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing.
9 Do thy diligence to come shortly unto me:
10 For [q] Demas hath forsaken me, [r] having loved this present world, and is departed unto Thessalonica; Crescens to Galatia, Titus unto Dalmatia.
11 [s] Only [t] Luke is with me. Take [u] Mark, and bring him with thee: for he is profitable to me for the ministry.
12 And [x] Tychicus have I sent to Ephesus.
13 The cloke that I left at Troas with Carpus, when thou comest, bring with thee, and the books, but especially the parchments.
14 [y] Alexander the coppersmith did me much evil: [z] the Lord reward him according to his works:
15 Of whom be thou ware also; for he hath greatly withstood [4] our words.
16 At my first answer no man stood with me, [a] but all men forsook me: [b] I pray God that it may not be laid to their charge.
17 [c] Notwithstanding the Lord stood with me, and strengthened me; [d] that by me the preaching might be fully known, and that all the Gentiles might hear: and I was delivered [e] out of the mouth of the lion.

18 [f] And the Lord shall deliver me from every evil work, and will preserve me unto his heavenly kingdom: [g] to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.

19 Salute [h] Prisca and Aquila, and [i] the household of Onesiphorus.

20 [k] Erastus abode at Corinth: but [l] Trophimus have I left at Miletum sick.

21 [m] Do thy diligence to come before winter. Eubulus greeteth thee, and Pudens, and Linus, and Claudia, and all the brethren.

22 [n] The Lord Jesus Christ be with thy spirit. Grace be with you. Amen.

¶ The second epistle unto Timotheus, ordained the first bishop of the church of the Ephesians, was written from Rome, when Paul was brought before [2] Nero the second time.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL TO TITUS.

CHAPTER I.

How they that are to be chosen ministers ought to be qualified.

PAUL, a servant of God, and an apostle of Jesus Christ, according to the faith of God's elect, and [a] the acknowledging of the truth [b] which is after godliness;

2 [2c] In hope of eternal life, which God, [d] that cannot lie, promised [e] before the world began;

3 [f] But hath in due times manifested his word through preaching, [g] which is committed unto me [h] according to the commandment of God our Saviour;

4 To [i] Titus, [k] mine own son after [l] the common faith: [m] Grace, mercy, and peace, from God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ our Saviour.

5 For this cause left I thee in Crete, that thou shouldest [n] set in order the things that are [3] wanting, and [o] ordain elders in every city, as I had appointed thee:

6 [p] If any be blameless, [q] the husband of one wife, [r] having faithful children not accused of riot or unruly.

7 For a bishop must be blameless, as [s] the steward of God; not selfwilled, not soon angry, [t] not given to wine, no striker, [u] not given to filthy lucre;

8 [x] But a lover of hospitality, a lover of [4] good men, sober, just, holy, temperate;

9 [y] Holding fast [z] the faithful word [5] as he hath been taught, that he may be able [a] by sound doctrine both to exhort and to convince the gainsayers.

10 For [b] there are many unruly and vain talkers and [c] deceivers, [d] specially they of the circumcision:

11 Whose mouths must be stopped, [e] who subvert whole houses, teaching things which they ought not, [f] for filthy lucre's sake.

12 [g] One of themselves, even a prophet of their own, said, The Cretians are alway liars, evil beasts, slow bellies.

13 This witness is true. [h] Wherefore rebuke them sharply, that they may be [i] sound in the faith;

14 [k] Not giving heed to Jewish fables, and [l] commandments of men, that turn from the truth.

15 [m] Unto the pure all things are pure: but [n] unto them that are defiled and unbelieving is nothing pure; but even their mind and conscience is defiled.

16 They profess that they know God; but [o] in works they deny him, being abominable, and disobedient, [p] and unto every good work [2] reprobate.

CHAPTER II.

Of the duty of servants, and in general of all Christians.

BUT speak thou the things which become [a] sound doctrine:

2 That the aged men be [3] sober, grave, temperate, [b] sound in faith, in charity, in patience.

3 [c] The aged women likewise, that they be in behaviour as becometh [4] holiness, not [5] false accusers, not given to much wine, teachers of good things;

4 That they may teach the young women to be [6] sober, [d] to love their husbands, to love their children,

5 To be discreet, chaste, keepers at home, good, [e] obedient to their own husbands, [f] that the word of God be not blasphemed.

6 Young men likewise exhort to be [7] sober minded.

7 [g] In all things shewing thyself a pattern of good works: in doctrine shewing uncorruptness, gravity, [h] sincerity,

8 [i] Sound speech, that cannot be condemned; [k] that he that is of the contrary part [l] may be ashamed, having no evil thing to say of you.
9 Exhort [m] servants to be obedient unto their own masters, and to please them well [n] in all things; not [2] answering again;
10 Not purloining, but shewing all good fidelity; [o] that they may adorn the doctrine of God our Saviour in all things.
11 For [p] the grace of God [3] that bringeth salvation [q] hath appeared to all men,
12 Teaching us [r] that, denying ungodliness [s] and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world;
13 [t] Looking for that blessed [u] hope, and the glorious [x] appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ;
14 [y] Who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, [z] and purify unto himself [a] a peculiar people, [b] zealous of good works.
15 These things speak, and [c] exhort, and rebuke with all authority. [d] Let no man despise thee.

CHAPTER III.

Titus is directed by Paul concerning the things he should teach, and not teach.

PUT them in mind [a] to be subject to principalities and powers, to obey magistrates, [b] to be ready to every good work,
2 [c] To speak evil of no man, [d] to be no brawlers, but [e] gentle, shewing all [f] meekness unto all men.
3 For [g] we ourselves also were sometimes foolish, disobedient, deceived, serving divers lusts and pleasures, living in malice and envy, hateful, and hating one another.
4 But after that [h] the kindness and [2] love of [i] God our Saviour toward man appeared,
5 [k] Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us, by [l] the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost;
6 [m] Which he shed on us [3] abundantly through Jesus Christ our Saviour;
7 [n] That being justified by his grace, [o] we should be made heirs [p] according to the hope of eternal life.
8 [q] This is a faithful saying, and these things I will that thou affirm constantly, that they which have believed in God might be careful [r] to maintain good works. These things are good and profitable unto men.
9 But [s] avoid foolish questions, and genealogies, and contentions, and strivings about the law; [t] for they are unprofitable and vain.
10 A man that is an heretick [u] after the first and second admonition [x] reject;
11 Knowing that he that is such is subverted, and sinneth, [y] being condemned of himself.
12 When I shall send Artemas unto thee, or [z] Tychicus, be diligent to come unto me to Nicopolis: for I have determined there to winter.
13 Bring Zenas the lawyer and [a] Apollos on their journey diligently, that nothing be wanting unto them.
14 And let our's also learn [b] to [4] maintain good works for necessary uses, that they be [c] not unfruitful.
15 All that are with me salute thee. Greet them that love us in the faith. Grace be with you all. Amen.

¶ It was written to Titus, ordained the first bishop of the church of the Cretians, from Nicopolis of Macedonia.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL TO PHILEMON.

Paul rejoiceth to hear of the faith and love of Philemon.

PAUL, [a] a prisoner of Jesus Christ, and Timothy our brother, unto Philemon our dearly beloved, [b] and fellowlabourer,
2 And to our beloved Apphia, and [c] Archippus [d] our fellowsoldier, and to [e] the church in thy house:
3 [f] Grace to you, and peace, from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ.
4 [g] I thank my God, making mention of thee always in my prayers,
5 [h] Hearing of thy love and faith, which thou hast toward the Lord Jesus, and toward all saints;
6 That the communication of thy faith may become effectual [i] by the acknowledging of every good thing which is in you in Christ Jesus.
7 For we have great joy and consolation in thy love, because the bowels of the saints [k] are refreshed by thee, brother.

8 Wherefore, [l] though I might be much bold in Christ to enjoin thee that which is convenient,

9 Yet for love's sake I rather beseech thee, being such an one as Paul the aged, [m] and now also a prisoner of Jesus Christ.

10 I beseech thee for my son [n] Onesimus, [o] whom I have begotten in my bonds:

11 Which in time past was to thee unprofitable, but now profitable to thee and to me:

12 Whom I have sent again: thou therefore receive him, that is, mine own bowels:

13 Whom I would have retained with me, [p] that in thy stead he might have ministered unto me in the bonds of the gospel:

14 But without thy mind would I do nothing; [q] that thy benefit should not be as it were of necessity, but willingly.

15 [r] For perhaps he therefore departed for a season, that thou shouldest receive him for ever;

16 Not now as a servant, but above a servant, [s] a brother beloved, specially to me, but how much more unto thee, [t] both in the flesh, and in the Lord?

17 If thou count me therefore [u] a partner, receive him as myself.

18 If he hath wronged thee, or oweth thee ought, put that on mine account;

19 I Paul have written it with mine own hand, I will repay it: albeit I do not say to thee how thou owest unto me even thine own self besides.

20 Yea, brother, let me have joy of thee in the Lord: [x] refresh my bowels in the Lord.

21 [y] Having confidence in thy obedience I wrote unto thee, knowing that thou wilt also do more than I say.

22 But withal prepare me also a lodging: for [z] I trust that [a] through your prayers I shall be given unto you.

23 There salute thee [b] Epaphras, my fellowprisoner in Christ Jesus;

24 [c] Marcus, [d] Aristarchus, [e] Demas, [f] Lucas, my fellowlabourers.

25 [g] The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit. Amen.

¶ Written from Rome to Philemon, by Onesimus, a servant.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE HEBREWS.

CHAPTER I.

Christ is preferred above the angels, both in person and office.

GOD, who at sundry times and [a] in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets,

2 Hath [b] in these last days [c] spoken unto us by his Son, [d] whom he hath appointed heir of all things, [e] by whom also he made the worlds;

3 [f] Who being the brightness of his glory, and the express image of his person, and [g] upholding all things by the word of his power, [h] when he had by himself purged our sins, [i] sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high;

4 Being made so much better than the angels, as [k] he hath by inheritance obtained a more excellent name than they.

5 For unto which of the angels said he at any time, [l] Thou art my son, this day have I begotten thee? And again, [m] I will be to him a Father, and he shall be to me a Son?

6 [2] And again, when he bringeth in [n] the firstbegotten into the world, he saith, [o] And let all the angels of God worship him.

7 And [2] of the angels he saith, [p] Who maketh his angels spirits, and his ministers a flame of fire.

8 But unto the Son he saith, [q] Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever: a sceptre of [3] righteousness is the sceptre of thy kingdom.

9 Thou hast loved righteousness, and hated iniquity; therefore God, even thy God, [r] hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows.

10 And, [s] Thou, Lord, in the beginning hast laid the foundation of the earth; and the heavens are the works of thine hands:

11 [t] They shall perish; but thou remainest; and they all shall wax old as doth a garment;

12 And as a vesture shalt thou fold them up, and they shall be changed: but thou art the same, and thy years shall not fail.

13 But to which of the angels said he at any time, [u] Sit on my right hand, until I make thine enemies thy footstool?

14 [x] Are they not all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be [y] heirs of salvation?

CHAPTER II.

We ought to be obedient to Christ Jesus, because he took our nature upon him.

THEREFORE we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should [2] let them slip.

2 For if the word [a] spoken by angels was stedfast, and [b] every transgression and disobedience received a just recompence of reward;

3 [c] How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation; [d] which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was [e] confirmed unto us by them that heard him;

4 [f] God also bearing them witness, [g] both with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles, and [3] [h] gifts of the Holy Ghost, [i] according to his own will?

5 For unto the angels hath he not put in subjection [k] the world to come, whereof we speak.

6 But one in a certain place testified, saying, [l] What is man, that thou art mindful of him? or the son of man, that thou visitest him?

7 Thou madest him [4] a little lower than the angels; thou crownedst him with glory and honour, and didst set him over the works of thy hands:

8 [m] Thou hast put all things in subjection under his feet. For in that he put all in subjection under him, he left nothing that is not put under him. But now [n] we see not yet all things put under him.

9 But we see Jesus, [o] who was made a little lower than the angels [5] for the suffering of death, [p] crowned with glory and honour; that he by the grace of God should taste death [q] for every man.

10 [r] For it became him, [s] for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make [t] the captain of their salvation [u] perfect through sufferings.

11 For [x] both he that sanctifieth and they who are sanctified [y] are all of one: for which cause [z] he is not ashamed to call them brethren,

12 Saying, [a] I will declare thy name unto my brethren, in the midst of the church will I sing praise unto thee.

13 [b] And again, [b] I will put my trust in him. And again, [c] Behold I and the children [d] which God hath given me.

14 Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he [e] also himself likewise took part of the same; [f] that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil;

15 And deliver them who [g] through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage.

16 For verily [e] he took not on him the nature of angels; but he took on him the seed of Abraham.

17 Wherefore in all things it behoved him [h] to be made like unto his brethren, that he might be [i] a merciful and faithful high priest in things pertaining to God, to make reconciliation for the sins of the people.

18 [k] For in that he himself hath suffered being tempted, he is able to succour them that are tempted.

CHAPTER III.

If we believe not in Christ, we shall be more worthy punishment than hardhearted Israel.

WHEREFORE, holy brethren, partakers of [a] the heavenly calling, consider [b] the Apostle and High Priest of our profession, Christ Jesus;

2 Who was faithful to him that [2] appointed him, as also [c] Moses was faithful in all his house.

3 For this man was counted worthy of more glory than Moses, inasmuch as [d] he who hath builded the house hath more honour than the house.

4 For every house is builded by some man; but [e] he that built all things is God.

5 [f] And Moses verily was faithful in all his house, as [g] a servant, [h] for a testimony of those things which were to be spoken after;

6 But Christ as [i] a son over his own house; [k] whose house are we, [l] if we hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end.

7 Wherefore (as [m] the Holy Ghost saith, [n] To day if ye will hear his voice,

8 Harden not your hearts, as in the provocation, in the day of temptation in the wilderness:

9 When your fathers tempted me, proved me, and saw my works forty years.

10 Wherefore I was grieved with that generation, and said, They do alway err in their heart; and they have not known my ways.

11 So I sware in my wrath, [3] They shall not enter into my rest.)

12 Take heed, brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief, in departing from the living God.

13 But exhort one another daily, while it is called To day; lest any of you be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin.

14 For we are made partakers of Christ, [o] if we hold the beginning of our confidence stedfast unto the end;

15 While it is said, [p] To day if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts, as in the provocation.

16 [q] For some, when they had heard, did provoke: howbeit not all that came out of Egypt by Moses.

17 But with whom was he grieved forty years? was it not with them that had sinned, [r] whose carcases fell in the wilderness?

18 And [s] to whom sware he that they should not enter into his rest, but to them that believed not?

19 [t] So we see that they could not enter in because of unbelief.

CHAPTER IV.

The power of God's word; by Jesus we may go boldly to the throne of grace.

LET [a] us therefore fear, lest, a promise being left us of entering into his rest, any of you should seem to come short of it.

2 For unto us was the gospel preached, as well as unto them: but [2] the word preached did not profit them, [3] not being mixed with faith in them that heard it.

3 [b] For we which have believed do enter into rest, as he said, [c] As I have sworn in my wrath, if they shall enter into my rest: although the works were finished from the foundation of the world.

4 For he spake in a certain place of the seventh day on this wise. [d] And God did rest the seventh day from all his works.

5 And in this place again, If they shall enter into my rest.

6 Seeing therefore it remaineth that some must enter therein, [e] and they to whom [4] it was first preached entered not in because of unbelief:

7 Again, he limiteth a certain day, saying in David, To day, after so long a time; as it is said, [f] To day if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts.

8 For if [5] Jesus had given them rest, then would he not afterward have spoken of another day.

9 There remaineth therefore a [6] rest to the people of God.

10 For he that is entered into his rest, he also hath ceased from his own works, as God did from his.

11 Let us labour therefore to enter into that rest, lest any man fall [g] after the same example of [7] unbelief.

12 For the word of God is [h] quick, and powerful, and [i] sharper than any [k] twoedged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is [l] a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart.

13 [m] Neither is there any creature that is not manifest in his sight: but all things are naked [n] and opened unto the eyes of him with whom we have to do.

14 Seeing then that we have [o] a great high priest, [p] that is passed into the heavens, Jesus the Son of God, [q] let us hold fast our profession.

15 For [r] we have not an high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but [s] was in all points tempted like as we are, [t] yet without sin.

16 [u] Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need.

CHAPTER V.

The authority and honour of our Saviour's priesthood; negligence in the knowledge thereof is reproved.

FOR every high priest taken from among men [c] is ordained for men [b] in things pertaining to God, [c] that he may offer both gifts and sacrifices for sins:

2 [d] Who [2] can have compassion on the ignorant, and on them that are out of the way; for that [e] he himself also is compassed with infirmity.

3 And [f] by reason hereof he ought, as for the people, so also for himself, to offer for sins.

4 [g] And no man taketh this honour unto himself, but he that is called of God, as [h] was Aaron.

5 [i] So also Christ glorified not himself to be made an high priest; but he that said unto him, [k] Thou art my Son, to day have I begotten thee.

6 As he saith also in another place, [l] Thou art a priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec.

7 Who in the days of his flesh, when he had [m] offered up prayers and supplications [n] with strong crying and tears unto him [o] that was able to save him from death, and was heard [3] [p] in that he feared;

8 [q] Though he were a Son, yet learned he [r] obedience by the things which he suffered;

9 And [s] being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him;

10 Called of God an high priest [t] after the order of Melchisedec.

11 Of whom [u] we have many things to say, and hard to be uttered, seeing ye are [x] dull of hearing.

12 For when for the time ye ought to be teachers, ye have need that one teach you again which be [y] the first principles of the oracles of God; and are become such as have need of [z] milk, and not of strong meat.

13 For every one that useth milk [4] is unskilful in the word of righteousness: for he is [a] a babe.

14 But strong meat belongeth to them that are [5] of full age, even those who by reason [6] of use have their senses exercised [b] to discern both good and evil.

CHAPTER VI.

An exhortation not to fall back from faith, but to be stedfast and patient.

THEREFORE [a] leaving [2] the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on unto perfection; not laying again the foundation of repentance [b] from dead works, and of faith toward God,

2 [c] Of the doctrine of baptisms, [d] and of laying on of hands, [e] and of resurrection of the dead, [f] and of eternal judgment.

3 And this will we do, [g] if God permit.

4 For [h] it is impossible for those [i] who were once enlightened, and have tasted of [k] the heavenly gift, and [l] were made partakers of the Holy Ghost,

5 And have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of [m] the world to come,

6 If they shall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance; [n] seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame.

7 For the earth which drinketh in the rain that cometh oft upon it, and bringeth forth herbs meet for them [3] by whom it is dressed, [o] receiveth blessing from God:

8 [p] But that which beareth thorns and briers is rejected, and is nigh unto cursing; whose end is to be burned.

9 But, beloved, we are persuaded better things of you, and things that accompany salvation, though we thus speak.

10 [q] For [r] God is not unrighteous to forget [s] your work and labour of love, which ye have shewed toward his name, in that ye have [t] ministered to the saints, and do minister.

11 And we desire that [u] every one of you do shew the same diligence [x] to the full assurance of hope unto the end:

12 That ye be not slothful, but followers of them who through faith and patience [y] inherit the promises.

13 For when God made promise to Abraham, because he could swear by no greater, [z] he sware by himself,

14 Saying, Surely blessing I will bless thee, and multiplying I will multiply thee.

15 And so, after he had patiently endured, he obtained the promise.

16 For men verily swear by the greater: and [a] an oath for confirmation is to them an end of all strife.

17 Wherein God, willing more abundantly to shew unto [b] the heirs of promise [c] the immutability of his counsel, [4] confirmed it by an oath:

18 That by two immutable things, in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have a strong consolation, who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope [d] set before us:

19 Which hope we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and stedfast, [e] and which entereth into that within the veil;

20 [f] Whither the forerunner is for us entered, even Jesus, [g] made an high priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec.

CHAPTER VII.

Christ a priest after the order of Melchisedec, more excellent than those of Aaron's order.

FOR this [a] Melchisedec, king of Salem, priest of the most high God, who met Abraham returning from the slaughter of the kings, and blessed him;

2 To whom also Abraham gave a tenth part of all; first being by interpretation King of righteousness, and after that also King of Salem, which is, King of peace;

3 Without father, without mother, [2] without descent, having neither beginning of days, nor end of life; but made like unto the Son of God; abideth a priest continually.

4 Now consider how great this man was, [b] unto whom even the patriarch Abraham gave the tenth of the spoils.

5 And verily [c] they that are of the sons of Levi, who receive the office of the priesthood, have a commandment to take tithes of the people according to the law, that is, of their brethren, though they come out of the loins of Abraham:

6 But he whose [3] descent is not counted from them received tithes of Abraham, [d] and blessed [e] him that had the promises.

7 And without all contradiction the less is blessed of the better.

8 And here men that die receive tithes: but there he receiveth them, [f] of whom it is witnessed that he liveth.

9 And as I may so say, Levi also, who receiveth tithes, payed tithes in Abraham.

10 For he was yet in the loins of his father, when Melchisedec met him.

11 [g] If therefore perfection were by the Levitical priesthood, (for under it the people received the law,) what further need was there that another priest should rise after the order of Melchisedec, and not be called after the order of Aaron?

12 For the priesthood being changed, there is made of necessity a change also of the law.

13 For he of whom these things are spoken pertaineth to another tribe, of which no man gave attendance at the altar.

14 For it is evident that [h] our Lord sprang out of Juda: of which tribe Moses spake nothing concerning priesthood.

15 And it is yet far more evident: for that after the similitude of Melchisedec there ariseth another priest, 16 Who is made, not after the law of a carnal commandment, but after the power of an endless life.

17 For he testifieth, [i] Thou art a priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec.

18 For there is verily a disannulling of the commandment going before for [k] the weakness and unprofitableness thereof.

19 For [l] the law made nothing perfect, [2] but the bringing in of [m] a better hope did; by the which [n] we draw nigh unto God.

20 And inasmuch as not without an oath he was made priest:

21 (For those priests were made [3] without an oath; but this with an oath by him that said unto him, [o] The Lord sware and will not repent, Thou art a priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec:)

22 By so much [p] was Jesus made a surety of a better testament.

23 And they truly were many priests, because they were not suffered to continue by reason of death:

24 But this man, because he continueth ever, hath [4] an unchangeable priesthood.

25 Wherefore he is able also to save them [5] to the uttermost that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth [q] to make intercession for them.

26 For such an high priest became us, [r] who is holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners, [s] and made higher than the heavens;

27 Who needeth not daily, as those high priests, to offer up sacrifice, [t] first for his own sins, [u] and then for the people's: for [x] this he did once, when he offered up himself.

28 For the law maketh [y] men high priests which have infirmity; but the word of the oath, which was since the law, maketh the Son, [z] who is [6] consecrated for evermore.

CHAPTER VIII.

By the eternal priesthood of Christ the Levitical priesthood of Aaron is abolished.

NOW of the things which we have spoken this is the sum: We have such an high priest, [a] who is set on the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in the heavens:

2 A minister [7] of [b] the sanctuary, and of [c] the true tabernacle, which the Lord pitched, and not man.

3 For [d] every high priest is ordained to offer gifts and sacrifices: wherefore [e] it is of necessity that this man have somewhat also to offer.

4 For if he were on earth, he should not be a priest, seeing that [8] there are priests that offer gifts according to the law:

5 Who serve unto the example and [f] shadow of heavenly things, as Moses was admonished of God when he was about to make the tabernacle: [g] for, See, saith he, that thou make all things according to the pattern shewed to thee in the mount.

6 But now [h] hath he obtained a more excellent ministry, by how much also he is the mediator of a better [2] covenant, which was established upon better promises.

7 [i] For if that first covenant had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for the second.

8 For finding fault with them, he saith, [k] Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah:

9 Not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day when I took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt; because they continued not in my covenant, and I regarded them not, saith the Lord.

10 For [l] this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith the Lord; I will [3] put my laws into their mind, and write them [4] in their hearts: and [m] I will be to them a God, and they shall be to me a people:

11 And [n] they shall not teach every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord: for all shall know me, from the least to the greatest.

12 For I will be merciful to their unrighteousness, [o] and their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more.

13 [p] In that he saith, A new covenant, he hath made the first old. Now that which decayeth and waxeth old is ready to vanish away.

CHAPTER IX.

Rites and sacrifices of the law inferior to the dignity of the blood of Christ.

THEN verily the first covenant had also [5] ordinances of divine service, and [q] a worldly sanctuary.

2 [b] For there was a tabernacle made; the first, [c] wherein was [d] the candlestick, and [e] the table, and the shewbread; which is called [6] the sanctuary.

3 [f] And after the second veil, the tabernacle which is called the Holiest of all:

4 Which had the golden censer, and [g] the ark of the covenant overlaid round about with gold, wherein was [h] the golden pot that had manna, and [i] Aaron's rod that budded, and [k] the tables of the covenant;

5 And [l] over it the cherubims of glory shadowing the mercyseat; of which we cannot now speak particularly.

6 Now when these things were thus ordained, [m] the priests went always into the first tabernacle, accomplishing the service of God.

7 But into the second went the high priest alone [n] once every year, not without blood, [o] which he offered for himself, and for the errors of the people:

8 [p] The Holy Ghost this signifying, that [q] the way into the holiest of all was not yet made manifest, while as the first tabernacle was yet standing:

9 Which was a figure for the time then present, in which were offered both gifts and sacrifices, [r] that could not make him that did the service perfect, as pertaining to the conscience;

10 Which stood only in [s] meats and drinks, and [t] divers washings, [u] and carnal [2] ordinances, imposed on them until the time of reformation.

11 But Christ being come [x] an high priest [y] of good things to come, [z] by a greater and more perfect tabernacle, not made with hands, that is to say, not of this building;

12 Neither [a] by the blood of goats and calves, but [b] by his own blood he entered in [c] once into the holy place, [d] having obtained eternal redemption for us.

13 For if [e] the blood of bulls and of goats, and [f] the ashes of an heifer sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh:

14 How much more [g] shall the blood of Christ, [h] who through the eternal Spirit [i] offered himself without [3] spot to God, [k] purge your conscience from [l] dead works [m] to serve the living God?

15 [n] And for this cause [o] he is the mediator of the new testament, [p] that by means of death, for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first testament, [q] they which are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance.

16 For where a testament is, there must also of necessity [4] be the death of the testator.

17 For [r] a testament is of force after men are dead: otherwise it is of no strength at all while the testator liveth.

18 [s] Whereupon neither the first testament was [5] dedicated without blood.

19 For when Moses had spoken every precept to all the people according to the law, [t] he took the blood of calves and of goats, [u] with water, and [6] scarlet wool, and hyssop, and sprinkled both the book, and all the people,

20 Saying, [x] This is the blood of the testament which God hath enjoined unto you.

21 Moreover [y] he sprinkled with blood both the tabernacle, and all the vessels of the ministry.

22 And almost all things are by the law purged with blood; and [z] without shedding of blood is no remission.

23 It was therefore necessary that [a] the patterns of things in the heavens should be purified with these; but the heavenly things themselves with better sacrifices than these.

24 For [b] Christ is not entered into the holy places made with hands, which are the figures of [c] the true: but into heaven itself, now [d] to appear in the presence of God for us:

25 Nor yet that he should offer himself often, as [e] the high priest entereth into the holy place every year with blood of others;

26 For then must he often have suffered since the foundation of the world: but now [f] once [g] in the end of the world hath he appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself.

27 [h] And as it is appointed unto men once to die, [i] but after this the judgment:

28 So [k] Christ was once [l] offered to bear the sins [m] of many; and unto them that [n] look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation.

CHAPTER X.

The sacrifice of Christ's body once offered hath for ever taken away sins.

FOR the law having [a] a shadow [b] of good things to come, and not the very image of the things, [c] can never with those sacrifices which they offered year by year continually make the comers thereunto [d] perfect.

2 For then [2] would they not have ceased to be offered? because that the worshippers once purged should have had no more conscience of sins.

3 [e] But in those sacrifices there is a remembrance again made of sins every year.

4 For [f] it is not possible that the blood of bulls and of goats should take away sins.

5 Wherefore when he cometh into the world, he saith, [g] Sacrifice and offering thou wouldest not, but a body [3] hast thou prepared me:

6 In burnt offerings and sacrifices for sin thou hast had no pleasure.

7 Then said I, Lo, I come (in the volume of the book it is written of me,) to do thy will, O God.

8 Above when he said, Sacrifice and offering and burnt offerings and offering for sin thou wouldest not, neither hadst pleasure therein; which are offered by the law;

9 Then said he, Lo, I come to do thy will, O God. He taketh away the first, that he may establish the second.

10 [h] By the which will we are sanctified [i] through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all.

11 And every priest standeth [k] daily ministering and offering oftentimes the same sacrifices, [l] which can never take away sins:

12 [m] But this man, after he had offered one sacrifice for sins for ever, sat down on the right hand of God;

13 From henceforth expecting [n] till his enemies be made his footstool.

14 For by one offering [o] he hath perfected for ever them that are sanctified.

15 Whereof the Holy Ghost also is a witness to us: for after that he had said before,

16 [p] This is the covenant that I will make with them after those days, saith the Lord, I will put my laws into their hearts, and in their minds will I write them;

17 [2] And their sins and iniquities will I remember no more.

18 Now where remission of these is, there is no more offering for sin.

19 Having therefore, brethren, [q] [3] boldness to enter [r] into the holiest by the blood of Jesus,

20 By [s] a new and living way, which he hath [4] consecrated for us, [t] through the veil, that is to say, his flesh;

21 And having [u] an high priest over [x] the house of God;

22 [y] Let us draw near with a true heart [z] in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled [a] from an evil conscience, and [b] our bodies washed with pure water.

23 [c] Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering; (for [d] he is faithful that promised;)

24 And let us consider one another to provoke unto love and to good works:

25 [e] Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another: and [f] so much the more, as ye see [g] the day approaching.

26 For [h] if we sin wilfully [i] after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins,

27 But a certain fearful looking for of judgment and [k] fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversaries.

28 [l] He that despised Moses' law died without mercy [m] under two or three witnesses:

29 [n] Of how much sorer punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, and [o] hath counted the blood of the covenant, wherewith he was sanctified, an unholy thing, [p] and hath done despite unto the Spirit of grace?

30 For we know him that hath said, [q] Vengeance belongeth unto me, I will recompense, saith the Lord. And again, [r] The Lord shall judge his people.

31 [s] It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God.

32 But [t] call to remembrance the former days, in which, [u] after ye were illuminated, ye endured [x] a great fight of afflictions;

33 Partly, whilst ye were made [y] a gazingstock both by reproaches and afflictions; and partly, whilst [z] ye became companions of them that were so used.

34 For ye had compassion of me [a] in my bonds, and [b] took joyfully the spoiling of your goods, knowing [2] in yourselves that [c] ye have in heaven a better and an enduring substance.

35 Cast not away therefore your confidence, [d] which hath great recompence of reward.

36 [e] For ye have need of patience, that, after ye have done the will of God, [f] ye might receive the promise.

37 For [g] yet a little while, and [h] he that shall come will come, and will not tarry.

38 Now [i] the just shall live by faith: but if any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him.

39 But we are not of them [k] who draw back unto perdition; but of them that [l] believe to the saving of the soul.

CHAPTER XI.

What faith is, without which we cannot please God.

NOW faith is the [3] substance of things hoped for, the evidence [a] of things not seen.

2 For [b] by it the elders obtained a good report.

3 Through faith we understand that [c] the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear.

4 By faith [d] Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, by which he obtained witness that he was righteous, God testifying of his gifts: and by it he being dead [e] [4] yet speaketh.

5 By faith [f] Enoch was translated that he should not see death; and was not found, because God had translated him: for before his translation he had this testimony, that he pleased God.

6 But without faith it is impossible to please him: for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him.

7 By faith [g] Noah, being warned of God of things not seen as yet, [5] moved with fear, [h] prepared an ark to the saving of his house; by the which he condemned the world, and became heir of [i] the righteousness which is by faith.

8 By faith [k] Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed; and he went out, not knowing whither he went.

9 By faith he sojourned in the land of promise, as in a strange country, [l] dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, [m] the heirs with him of the same promise:

10 For he looked for [n] a city which hath foundations, [o] whose builder and maker is God.

11 Through faith also [p] Sara herself received strength to conceive seed, and [q] was delivered of a child when she was past age, because she judged him [r] faithful who had promised.

12 Therefore sprang there even of one, and [s] him as good as dead, [t] so many as the stars of the sky in multitude, and as the sand which is by the sea shore innumerable.

13 These all died [2] in faith, [u] not having received the promises, but [x] having seen them afar off, and were persuaded of them, and embraced them, and [y] confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth.

14 For they that say such things [z] declare plainly that they seek a country.

15 And truly, if they had been mindful of that country from whence they came out, they might have had opportunity to have returned.

16 But now they desire a better country, that is, an heavenly: wherefore God is not ashamed [a] to be called their God: for [b] he hath prepared for them a city.

17 By faith [c] Abraham, when he was tried, offered up Isaac: and he that had received the promises [d] offered up his only begotten son,

18 [3] Of whom it was said, [e] That in Isaac shall thy seed be called:

19 Accounting that God [f] was able to raise him up, even from the dead; from whence also he received him in a figure.

20 By faith [g] Isaac blessed Jacob and Esau concerning things to come.

21 By faith Jacob, when he was a dying, [h] blessed both the sons of Joseph; and [i] worshipped, leaning upon the top of his staff.

22 By faith [k] Joseph, when he died, [4] made mention of the departing of the children of Israel; and gave commandment concerning his bones.

23 By faith [l] Moses, when he was born, was hid three months of his parents, because they saw he was a proper child; and they were not afraid of the king's [m] commandment.

24 By faith [n] Moses, when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter;

25 [o] Choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season;

26 Esteeming [p] the reproach [5] of Christ greater riches than the treasures in Egypt: for he had respect unto [q] the recompence of the reward.

27 By faith [r] he forsook Egypt, not fearing the wrath of the king: for he endured, as [s] seeing him who is invisible.

28 Through faith [t] he kept the passover, and the sprinkling of blood, lest he that destroyed the firstborn should touch them.

29 By faith [u] they passed through the Red sea as by dry land: which the Egyptians assaying to do were drowned.

30 By faith [x] the walls of Jericho fell down, after they were compassed about seven days.

31 By faith [y] the harlot Rahab perished not with them [2] that believed not, when [z] she had received the spies with peace.

32 And what shall I more say? for the time would fail me to tell of [a] Gedeon, and of [b] Barak, and of [c] Samson, and of [d] Jephthae; of [e] David also, and f Samuel, and of the prophets:

33 Who through faith subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, [g] obtained promises, [h] stopped the mouths of lions,

34 [i] Quenched the violence of fire, [k] escaped the edge of the sword, [l] out of weakness were made strong, waxed valiant in fight, [m] turned to flight the armies of the aliens.

35 [n] Women received their dead raised to life again: and others were [o] tortured, not accepting deliverance; that they might obtain a better resurrection:

36 And others had trial of cruel mockings and scourgings, yea, moreover [r] of bonds and imprisonment:

37 [q] They were stoned, they were sawn asunder, were tempted, were slain with the sword: [r] they wandered about [s] in sheepskins and goatskins; being destitute, afflicted, tormented;

38 (Of whom the world was not worthy:) they wandered in deserts, and in mountains, and [t] in dens and caves of the earth.

39 And these all, [u] having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise:

40 God having [3] provided [x] some better thing for us, that they without us should not be [y] made perfect.

CHAPTER XII.

An exhortation to faith, patience, and godliness, and a commendation of the new testament above the old.

WHEREFORE seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, [a] let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and [b] let us run [c] with patience the race that is set before us,

2 Looking unto Jesus the [4] author and finisher of our faith; [d] who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and [e] is set down at the right hand of the throne of God.

3 [f] For consider him that endured such contradiction of sinners against himself, [g] lest ye be wearied and faint in your minds.

4 [h] Ye have not yet resisted unto blood, striving against sin.

5 And ye have forgotten the exhortation which speaketh unto you as unto children, [i] My son, despise not thou the chastening of the Lord, nor faint when thou art rebuked of him:

6 For [k] whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth.

7 [l] If ye endure chastening, God dealeth with you as with sons; for what son is he whom the father chasteneth not?

8 But if ye be without chastisement, [m] whereof all are partakers, then are ye bastards, and not sons.

9 Furthermore we have had fathers of our flesh which corrected us, and we gave them reverence: shall we not much rather be in subjection unto [n] the Father of spirits, and live?

10 For they verily for a few days chastened us [2] after their own pleasure; but he for our profit, [o] that we might be partakers of his holiness.

11 Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous: nevertheless afterward it yieldeth [p] the peaceable fruit of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby.

12 Wherefore [q] lift up the hands which hang down, and the feeble knees;

13 [r] And make [3] straight paths for your feet, lest that which is lame be turned out of the way; [s] but let it rather be healed.

14 [t] Follow peace with all men, and holiness, [u] without which no man shall see the Lord:

15 [x] Looking diligently [y] lest any man [4] fail of the grace of God; [z] lest any root of bitterness springing up trouble you, and thereby many be defiled;

16 [a] Lest there be any fornicator, or profane person, as Esau, [b] who for one morsel of meat sold his birthright.

17 For ye know how that afterward, [c] when he would have inherited the blessing, he was rejected: [d] for he found no [5] place of repentance, though he sought it carefully with tears.

18 For ye are not come unto [e] the mount that might be touched, and that burned with fire, nor unto blackness, and darkness, and tempest,

19 And the sound of a trumpet, and the voice of words; which voice they that heard [f] intreated that the word should not be spoken to them any more:

20 (For they could not endure that which was commanded, [g] And if so much as a beast touch the mountain, it shall be stoned, or thrust through with a dart:

21 [h] And so terrible was the sight, that Moses said, I exceedingly fear and quake:)

22 But ye are come [i] unto mount Sion, [k] and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, [l] and to an innumerable company of angels,

23 To the general assembly and church of [m] the firstborn, [n] which are [2] written in heaven, and to God [o] the Judge of all, and to the spirits of just men [p] made perfect,

24 And to Jesus [q] the mediator of the new [3] covenant, and to [r] the blood of sprinkling, that speaketh better things [s] than that of Abel.

25 See that ye refuse not him that speaketh. For [t] if they escaped not who refused him that spake on earth, much more shall not we escape, if we turn away from him that speaketh from heaven:

26 [u] Whose voice then shook the earth: but now he hath promised, saying, [x] Yet once more I shake not the earth only, but also heaven.

27 And this word, Yet once more, signifieth [y] the removing of those things that [4] are shaken, as of things that are made, that those things which cannot be shaken may remain.

28 Wherefore we receiving a kingdom which cannot be moved, [5] let us have grace, whereby we may serve God acceptably with reverence and godly fear:

29 For [z] our God is a consuming fire.

CHAPTER XIII.

Admonitions to charity, avoidance of covetousness, confession of Christ, and almsgiving.

LET [a] brotherly love continue.

2 [b] Be not forgetful to entertain strangers: for thereby [c] some have entertained angels unawares.

3 [d] Remember them that are in bonds, as bound with them; and them which suffer adversity, as being yourselves also in the body.

4 Marriage is honourable in all, and the bed undefiled: [e] but whoremongers and adulterers God will judge.

5 Let your conversation be without covetousness; and f be content with such things as ye have: for he hath said, [g] I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee.

6 So that we may boldly say, [h] The Lord is my helper, and I will not fear what man shall do unto me.

7 [i] Remember them which [6] have the rule over you, who have spoken unto you the word of God: [k] whose faith follow, considering the end of their conversation.

8 Jesus Christ [l] the same yesterday, and to day, and for ever.

9 [m] Be not carried about with divers and strange doctrines. For it is a good thing that the heart be established with grace; [n] not with meats, which have not profited them that have been occupied therein.

10 [o] We have an altar, whereof they have no right to eat which serve the tabernacle.

11 For [p] the bodies of those beasts, whose blood is brought into the sanctuary by the high priest for sin, are burned without the camp.

12 Wherefore Jesus also, that he might sanctify the people with his own blood, [q] suffered without the gate.

13 Let us go forth therefore unto him without the camp, bearing [r] his reproach.

14 [s] For here have we no continuing city, but we seek one to come.
15 [t] By him therefore let us offer [u] the sacrifice of praise to God continually, that is, [x] the fruit of our lips [2] giving thanks to his name.
16 [y] But to do good and to communicate forget not: for [z] with such sacrifices God is well pleased.
17 [a] Obey them that [3] have the rule over you, and submit yourselves: for [b] they watch for your souls, as they that must give account, that they may do it with joy, and not with grief: for that is unprofitable for you.
18 [c] Pray for us: for we trust we have [d] a good conscience, in all things willing to live honestly.
19 But I beseech you [e] the rather to do this, that I may be restored to you the sooner.
20 Now [f] the God of peace, [g] that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, [h] that great shepherd of the sheep, [i] through the blood of the everlasting [2] covenant,
21 [k] Make you perfect in every good work to do his will, [3] [l] working in you that which is wellpleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ; [m] to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.
22 And I beseech you, brethren, suffer the word of exhortation: for [n] I have written a letter unto you in few words.
23 Know ye that [o] our brother Timothy [p] is set at liberty; with whom, if he come shortly, I will see you.
24 Salute all them [q] that have the rule over you, and all the saints. They of Italy salute you.
25 [r] Grace be with you all. Amen.

¶ Written to the Hebrews from Italy by Timothy.

THE GENERAL EPISTLE OF JAMES.

CHAPTER I.

In our trials we are not to impute our weakness to God, but to hearken to the word.

[a] JAMES, [b] a servant of God and of the Lord Jesus Christ, [c] to the twelve tribes [d] which are scattered abroad, greeting.
2 My brethren, [e] count it all joy [f] when ye fall into divers temptations;
3 [g] Knowing this, that the trying of your faith worketh patience.
4 But let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing.
5 [h] If any of you lack wisdom, [i] let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and [k] it shall be given him.
6 [l] But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering. For he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea driven with the wind and tossed.
7 For let not that man think that he shall receive any thing of the Lord.
8 [m] A double minded man is unstable in all his ways.
9 Let the brother of low degree [2] rejoice in that he is exalted:
10 But the rich, in that he is made low: because [n] as the flower of the grass he shall pass away.
11 For the sun is no sooner risen with a burning heat, but it withereth the grass, and the flower thereof falleth, and the grace of the fashion of it perisheth: so also shall the rich man fade away in his ways.
12 [o] Blessed is the man that endureth temptation: for when he is tried, he shall receive [p] the crown of life, [q] which the Lord hath promised to them that love him.
13 Let no man say when he is tempted, I am tempted of God: for God cannot be tempted with [3] evil, neither tempteth he any man:
14 But every man is tempted, when he is drawn away of his own lust, and enticed.
15 Then [r] when lust hath conceived, it bringeth forth sin: and sin, when it is finished, [s] bringeth forth death.
16 Do not err, my beloved brethren.
17 [t] Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, [u] with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning.
18 [x] Of his own will begat he us with the word of truth, [y] that we should be a kind of [z] firstfruits of his creatures.
19 Wherefore, my beloved brethren, [a] let every man be swift to hear, [b] slow to speak, [c] slow to wrath:
20 For the wrath of man worketh not the righteousness of God.
21 Wherefore [d] lay apart all filthiness and superfluity of naughtiness, and receive with meekness the engrafted word, [e] which is able to save your souls.

22 But [f] be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves.

23 For [g] if any be a hearer of the word, and not a doer, he is like unto a man beholding his natural face in a glass:

24 For he beholdeth himself, and goeth his way, and straightway forgetteth what manner of man he was.

25 But [h] whoso looketh into the perfect [i] law of liberty, and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work, [k] this man shall be blessed in his [2] deed.

26 If any man among you seem to be religious, and [l] bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion is vain.

27 Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, [m] To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, [n] and to keep himself unspotted from the world.

CHAPTER II.

We are not to boast of faith where no deeds are, which is but a dead faith.

MY brethren, have not the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ, [a] the Lord of glory, with [b] respect of persons.

2 For if there come unto your [3] assembly a man with a gold ring, in goodly apparel, and there come in also a poor man in vile raiment;

3 And ye have respect to him that weareth the gay clothing, and say unto him, Sit thou here [4] in a good place; and say to the poor, Stand thou there, or sit here under my footstool:

4 Are ye not then partial in yourselves, and are become judges of evil thoughts?

5 Hearken, my beloved brethren, [c] Hath not God chosen the poor of this world [d] rich in faith, and heirs of [5] the kingdom [e] which he hath promised to them that love him?

6 But [f] ye have despised the poor. Do not rich men oppress you, [g] and draw you before the judgment seats?

7 Do not they blaspheme that worthy name by the which ye are called?

8 If ye fulfil the royal law according to the scripture, [h] Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself, ye do well:

9 But [i] if ye have respect to persons, ye commit sin, and are convinced of the law as transgressors.

10 For whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, [k] he is guilty of all.

11 For [2] he that said, [l] Do not commit adultery, said also, Do not kill. Now if thou commit no adultery, yet if thou kill, thou art become a transgressor of the law.

12 So speak ye, and so do, as they that shall be judged by [m] the law of liberty.

13 For [n] he shall have judgment without mercy, that hath shewed no mercy; and [o] mercy [3] rejoiceth against judgment.

14 [p] What doth it profit, my brethren, though a man say he hath faith, and have not works? can faith save him?

15 [q] If a brother or sister be naked, and destitute of daily food,

16 And [r] one of you say unto them, Depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled; notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the body; what doth it profit?

17 Even so faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being [4] alone.

18 Yea, a man may say, Thou hast faith, and I have works: shew me thy faith [5] without thy works, [s] and I will shew thee my faith by my works.

19 Thou believest that there is one God; thou doest well: [t] the devils also believe, and tremble.

20 But wilt thou know, O vain man, that faith without works is dead?

21 Was not Abraham our father justified by works, [u] when he had offered Isaac his son upon the altar?

22 [6] Seest thou [x] how faith wrought with his works, and by works was faith made perfect?

23 And the scripture was fulfilled which saith, [y] Abraham believed God, and it was imputed unto him for righteousness: and he was called [z] the Friend of God.

24 Ye see then how that by works a man is justified, and not by faith only.

25 Likewise also [a] was not Rahab the harlot justified by works, when she had received the messengers, and had sent them out another way?

26 For as the body without the [7] spirit is dead, so faith without works is dead also.

CHAPTER III.

We are to bridle the tongue, a powerful instrument of much good and great harm.

MY brethren, [a] be not many masters, [b] knowing that we shall receive the greater [2] condemnation.

2 For [c] in many things we offend all.

[d] If any man offend not in word, [e] the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body.

3 Behold, [f] we put bits in the horses' mouths, that they may obey us; and we turn about their whole body.

4 Behold also the ships, which though they be so great, and are driven of fierce winds, yet are they turned about with a very small helm, whithersoever the governor listeth.

5 Even so [g] the tongue is a little member, and [h] boasteth great things. Behold, how great [3] a matter a little fire kindleth!

6 And [i] the tongue is a fire, a world of iniquity: so is the tongue among our members, that [k] it defileth the whole body, and setteth on fire the [4] course of nature; and it is set on fire of hell.

7 For every [5] kind of beasts, and of birds, and of serpents, and of things in the sea, is tamed, and hath been tamed of [6] mankind:

8 But the tongue can no man tame; it is an unruly evil, [l] full of deadly poison.

9 Therewith bless we God, even the Father; and therewith curse we men, [m] which are made after the similitude of God.

10 Out of the same mouth proceedeth blessing and cursing. My brethren, these things ought not so to be.

11 Doth a fountain send forth at the same [7] place sweet water and bitter?

12 Can the fig tree, my brethren, bear olive berries? either a vine, figs? so can no fountain both yield salt water and fresh.

13 [n] Who is a wise man and endued with knowledge among you? let him shew out of a good conversation [o] his works [p] with meekness of wisdom.

14 But if ye have [q] bitter envying and strife in your hearts, [r] glory not, and lie not against the truth.

15 [s] This wisdom descendeth not from above, but is earthly, [8] sensual, devilish.

16 For [t] where envying and strife is, there is [9] confusion and every evil work.

17 But [u] the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be intreated, full of mercy and good fruits, [2] without partiality, [x] and without hypocrisy.

18 [y] And the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace of them that make peace.

CHAPTER IV.

We are not to be confident of worldly success, but mindful of the uncertainty of this life.

FROM whence come wars and [2] fightings among you? come they not hence, even of your [2] lusts [a] that war in your members?

2 Ye lust, and have not: ye [4] kill, and desire to have, and cannot obtain: ye fight and war, yet ye have not, because ye ask not.

3 [b] Ye ask, and receive not, [c] because ye ask amiss, that ye may consume it upon your [5] lusts.

4 [d] Ye adulterers and adulteresses, know ye not that [e] the friendship of the world is enmity with God? [f] whosoever therefore will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God.

5 Do ye think that the scripture saith in vain, [g] The spirit that dwelleth in us lusteth [6] to envy?

6 But he giveth more grace. Wherefore he saith, [h] God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace unto the humble.

7 Submit yourselves therefore to God. [i] Resist the devil, and he will flee from you.

8 [k] Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you. [l] Cleanse your hands, ye sinners; and [m] purify your hearts, ye [n] double minded.

9 [o] Be afflicted, and mourn, and weep: let your laughter be turned to mourning, and your joy to heaviness.

10 [p] Humble yourselves in the sight of the Lord, and he shall lift you up.

11 [q] Speak not evil one of another, brethren. He that speaketh evil of his brother, [r] and judgeth his brother, speaketh evil of the law, and judgeth the law: but if thou judge the law, thou art not a doer of the law, but a judge.

12 There is one lawgiver, [s] who is able to save and to destroy: [t] who art thou that judgest another?

13 [u] Go to now, ye that say, To day or to morrow we will go into such a city, and continue there a year, and buy and sell, and get gain:

14 Whereas ye know not what shall be on the morrow. For what is your life? [7] [x] It is even a vapour, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away.

15 For that ye ought to say, [y] If the Lord will, we shall live, and do this, or that.

16 But now ye rejoice in your boastings: [z] all such rejoicing is evil.

17 Therefore [a] to him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin.

CHAPTER V.

Fear of God's vengeance; prayer in adversity, rejoicing in prosperity.

GO [a] to now, ye rich men, weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you.

2 Your riches are corrupted, and [b] your garments are motheaten.

3 Your gold and silver is cankered; and the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh as it were fire. [c] Ye have heaped treasure together for the last days.

4 Behold, [d] the hire of the labourers who have reaped down your fields, which is of you kept back by fraud, crieth: and [e] the cries of them which have reaped are entered into the ears of the Lord of sabaoth.

5 [f] Ye have lived in pleasure on the earth, and been wanton; ye have nourished your hearts, as in a day of slaughter.

6 [g] Ye have condemned and killed the just; and he doth not resist you.

7 [2] Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord. Behold, the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive [h] the early and latter rain.

8 Be ye also patient; stablish your hearts: [i] for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh.

9 [k] [3] Grudge not one against another, brethren, lest ye be condemned: behold, the judge [l] standeth before the door.

10 [m] Take, my brethren, the prophets, who have spoken in the name of the Lord, for an example of suffering affliction, and of patience.

11 Behold, [n] we count them happy which endure. Ye have heard of [o] the patience of Job, and have seen [p] the end of the Lord; that [q] the Lord is very pitiful, and of tender mercy.

12 But above all things, my brethren, [r] swear not, neither by heaven, neither by the earth, neither by any other oath: but let your yea be yea; and your nay, nay; lest ye fall into condemnation.

13 Is any among you afflicted? let him pray. Is any merry? [s] let him sing psalms.

14 Is any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, [t] anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord:

15 And the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; [u] and if he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him.

16 Confess your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed. [x] The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much.

17 Elias was a man [y] subject to like passions as we are, and [z] he prayed [2] earnestly that it might not rain: [a] and it rained not on the earth by the space of three years and six months.

18 And [b] he prayed again, and the heaven gave rain, and the earth brought forth her fruit.

19 Brethren, [c] if any of you do err from the truth, and one convert him;

20 Let him know, that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his way [d] shall save a soul from death, and [e] shall hide a multitude of sins.

THE FIRST EPISTLE GENERAL OF PETER.

CHAPTER I.

Peter blesseth God for spiritual graces, and sheweth that salvation in Christ was prophesied.

PETER, an apostle of Jesus Christ, to the strangers [a] scattered throughout Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia,

2 [b] Elect [c] according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, [d] through sanctification of the Spirit, unto obedience and [e] sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ: [f] Grace unto you, and peace, be multiplied.

3 [g] Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which [h] according to his [2] abundant mercy [i] hath begotten us again unto a lively hope [k] by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead,

4 To an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, [l] and that fadeth not away, [m] reserved in heaven [2] for you,

5 [n] Who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time.

6 [o] Wherein ye greatly rejoice, though now [p] for a season, if need be, [q] ye are in heaviness through manifold temptations:

7 That [r] the trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though [s] it be tried with fire, [t] might be found unto praise and honour and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ:

8 [u] Whom having not seen, ye love: [x] in whom, though now ye see him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory:

9 Receiving [y] the end of your faith, even the salvation of your souls.

10 [z] Of which salvation the prophets have enquired and searched diligently, who prophesied of the grace that should come unto you:

11 Searching what, or what manner of time [a] the Spirit of Christ which was in them did signify, when it testified beforehand [b] the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow.

12 [c] Unto whom it was revealed, that [d] not unto themselves, but unto us they did minister the things, which are now reported unto you by them that have preached the gospel unto you with [e] the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven; [f] which things the angels desire to look into.

13 Wherefore [g] gird up the loins of your mind, [h] be sober, and hope [2] to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto you [i] at the revelation of Jesus Christ;

14 As obedient children, [k] not fashioning yourselves according to the former lusts [l] in your ignorance:

15 [m] But as he which hath called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation;

16 Because it is written, [n] Be ye holy; for I am holy.

17 And if ye call on the Father, [o] who without respect of persons judgeth according to every man's work, [p] pass the time of your [q] sojourning here in fear:

18 Forasmuch as ye know [r] that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, from your vain conversation [s] received by tradition from your fathers;

19 But [t] with the precious blood of Christ, [u] as of a lamb without blemish and without spot:

20 [x] Who verily was foreordained before the foundation of the world, but was manifest [y] in these last times for you,

21 Who by him do believe in God, [z] that raised him up from the dead, and [a] gave him glory; that your faith and hope might be in God.

22 Seeing ye [b] have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned [c] love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently:

23 [d] Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, [e] by the word of God, which liveth and abideth for ever.

24 [3] For [f] all flesh is as grass, and all the glory of man as the flower of grass. The grass withereth, and the flower thereof falleth away:

25 [g] But the word of the Lord endureth for ever. [h] And this is the word which by the gospel is preached unto you.

CHAPTER II.

Christ the foundation whereupon all are built.

WHEREFORE [a] laying aside all malice, and all guile, and hypocrisies, and envies, and all evil speakings,

2 [b] As newborn babes, desire the sincere [c] milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby:

3 If so be ye have [d] tasted that the Lord is gracious.

4 To whom coming, as unto a living stone, [e] disallowed indeed of men, but chosen of God, and precious,

5 [f] Ye also, as lively stones, [2] are built up [g] a spiritual house, [h] an holy priesthood, to offer up [i] spiritual sacrifices, [k] acceptable to God by Jesus Christ.

6 Wherefore also it is contained in the scripture, [l] Behold, I lay in Sion a chief corner stone, elect, precious: and he that believeth on him shall not be confounded.

7 Unto you therefore which believe he is [3] precious: but unto them which be disobedient, [m] the stone which the builders disallowed, the same is made the head of the corner,

8 [n] And a stone of stumbling, and a rock of offence, [o] even to them which stumble at the word, being disobedient: [p] whereunto also they were appointed.

9 But ye are [q] a chosen generation, [r] a royal priesthood, [s] an holy nation, [t] [4] a peculiar people; that ye should shew forth the [5] praises of him who hath called you out of [u] darkness into his marvellous light:

10 [x] Which in time past were not a people, but are now the people of God: which had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy.

11 Dearly beloved, I beseech you [y] as strangers and pilgrims, [z] abstain from fleshly lusts, [a] which war against the soul;

12 [b] Having your conversation honest

among the Gentiles: that, [c] whereas they speak against you as evildoers, [c] they may by your good works, which they shall behold, glorify God [d] in the day of visitation.

13 [e] Submit yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake: whether it be to the king, as supreme;

14 Or unto governors, as unto them that are sent by him [f] for the punishment of evildoers, and [g] for the praise of them that do well.

15 For so is the will of God, that [h] with well doing ye may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men:

16 [i] As free, and not [2] using your liberty for a cloke of maliciousness, but as [k] the servants of God.

17 [l] [3] Honour all men. [m] Love the brotherhood. [n] Fear God. Honour the king.

18 [o] Servants, be subject to your masters with all fear; not only to the good and gentle, but also to the froward.

19 For this is [4] [p] thankworthy, if a man for conscience toward God endure grief, suffering wrongfully.

20 For [q] what glory is it, if, when ye be buffeted for your faults, ye shall take it patiently? but if, when ye do well, and suffer for it, ye take it patiently, this is [5] acceptable with God.

21 For [r] even hereunto were ye called: because [s] Christ also suffered [6] for us, [t] leaving us an example, that ye should follow his steps:

22 [u] Who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth:

23 [x] Who, when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, he threatened not; but [y] [7] committed himself to him that judgeth righteously:

24 [z] Who his own self bare our sins in his own body [8] on the tree, [a] that we, being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness: [b] by whose stripes ye were healed.

25 For [c] ye were as sheep going astray; but are now returned [d] unto the Shepherd and Bishop of your souls.

CHAPTER III.

Exhortation to unity and love, and the benefits of Christ to the world.

LIKEWISE, [a] ye wives, be in subjection to your own husbands; that, if any obey not the word, [b] they also may without the word [c] be won by the conversation of the wives;

2 [d] While they behold your chaste conversation coupled with fear.

3 [e] Whose adorning let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting the hair, and of wearing of gold, or of putting on of apparel;

4 But let it be [f] the hidden man of the heart, in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price.

5 For after this manner in the old time the holy women also, who trusted in God, adorned themselves, being in subjection unto their own husbands:

6 Even as Sara obeyed Abraham, [g] calling him lord: whose [2] daughters ye are, as long as ye do well, and are not afraid with any amazement.

7 [h] Likewise, ye husbands, dwell with them according to knowledge, giving honour unto the wife, [i] as unto the weaker vessel, and as being heirs together of the grace of life; [k] that your prayers be not hindered.

8 Finally, [l] be ye all of one mind, having compassion one of another, [m] [3] love as brethren, [n] be pitiful, be courteous:

9 [o] Not rendering evil for evil, or railing for railing: but contrariwise blessing; knowing that ye are thereunto called, [p] that ye should inherit a blessing.

10 For [q] he that will love life, and see good days, [r] let him refrain his tongue from evil, and his lips that they speak no guile:

11 Let him [s] eschew evil, and do good; [t] let him seek peace, and ensue it.

12 For the eyes of the Lord are over the righteous, [u] and his ears are open unto their prayers: but the face of the Lord is [4] against them that do evil.

13 [x] And who is he that will harm you, if ye be followers of that which is good?

14 [y] But and if ye suffer for righteousness' sake, happy are ye: and [z] be not afraid of their terror, neither be troubled;

15 But sanctify the Lord God in your hearts: and [a] be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and [5] fear:

16 [b] Having a good conscience; [c] that, whereas they speak evil of you, as of evildoers, they may be ashamed that falsely accuse your good conversation in Christ.

17 For it is better, if the will of God be so, that ye suffer for well doing, than for evil doing.

18 For Christ also hath [d] once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, [e] being put to death [f] in the flesh, but [g] quickened by the Spirit:

19 By which also he went and [h] preached unto the spirits [i] in prison;

20 Which sometime were disobedient, [k] when once the longsuffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while [l] the ark was a preparing, [m] wherein few, that is, eight souls were saved by water.

21 [n] The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us (not the putting away of [o] the filth of the flesh, [p] but the answer of a good conscience toward God,) [q] by the resurrection of Jesus Christ:

22 Who is gone into heaven, and [r] is on the right hand of God; [s] angels and authorities and powers being made subject unto him.

CHAPTER IV.

Exhortation to cease from sin, and comfort against persecution.

FORASMUCH then [a] as Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh, arm yourselves likewise with the same mind: for [b] he that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin;

2 [c] That he no longer [d] should live the rest of his time in the flesh to the lusts of men, [e] but to the will of God.

3 [f] For the time past of our life may suffice us [g] to have wrought the will of the Gentiles, when we walked in lasciviousness, lusts, excess of wine, revellings, banquetings, and abominable idolatries:

4 Wherein they think it strange that ye run not with them to the same excess of riot, [h] speaking evil of you:

5 Who shall give account to him that is ready [i] to judge the quick and the dead.

6 For for this cause [k] was the gospel preached also to them that are dead, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit.

7 But [l] the end of all things is at hand: [m] be ye therefore sober, and watch unto prayer.

8 [n] And above all things have fervent charity among yourselves: for [o] charity [2] shall cover the multitude of sins.

9 [p] Use hospitality one to another [q] without grudging.

10 [r] As every man hath received the gift, even so minister the same one to another, [s] as good stewards of [t] the manifold grace of God.

11 [u] If any man speak, let him speak as the oracles of God; [x] if any man minister, let him do it as of the ability which God giveth: that [y] God in all things may be glorified through Jesus Christ, [z] to whom be praise and dominion for ever and ever. Amen.

12 Beloved, think it not strange concerning [a] the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you:

13 [b] But rejoice, inasmuch as [c] ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings; [d] that, when his glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy.

14 [e] If ye be reproached for the name of Christ, happy are ye; for the spirit of glory and of God resteth upon you: [f] on their part he is evil spoken of, but on your part he is glorified.

15 But [g] let none of you suffer as a murderer, or as a thief, or as an evildoer, [h] or as a busybody in other men's matters.

16 Yet if any man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed; [i] but let him glorify God on this behalf.

17 For the time is come [k] that judgment must begin at the house of God: and [l] if it first begin at us, [m] what shall the end be of them that obey not the gospel of God?

18 [n] And if the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear?

19 Wherefore let them that suffer according to the will of God [o] commit the keeping of their souls to him in well doing, as unto a faithful Creator.

CHAPTER V.

Exhortation to be sober, watchful, and constant in the faith, and to resist the devil.

THE elders which are among you I exhort, who am also [a] an elder, and [b] a witness of the sufferings of Christ, and also [c] a partaker of the glory that shall be revealed:

2 [d] Feed the flock of God [2] which is among you, taking the oversight thereof, [e] not by constraint, but willingly; [f] not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind;

3 Neither as [3] [g] being lords over [h] God's heritage, but [i] being ensamples to the flock.

4 And when [k] the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive [l] a crown of glory [m] that fadeth not away.

5 Likewise, ye younger, submit yourselves unto the elder. Yea, [n] all of you be subject one to another, and be clothed with humility: for [o] God resisteth the proud, and [p] giveth grace to the humble.

6 [q] Humble yourselves therefore under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time:

7 [r] Casting all your care upon him; for he careth for you.

8 [s] Be sober, be vigilant; because [t] your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour:

9 [u] Whom resist stedfast in the faith, [x] knowing that the same afflictions are accomplished in your brethren that are in the world.

10 But the God of all grace, [y] who hath called us unto his eternal glory by Christ Jesus, after that ye have suffered [z] a while, [a] make you perfect, [b] stablish, strengthen, settle you.

11 [c] To him be glory and dominion for ever and ever. Amen.

12 [d] By Silvanus, a faithful brother unto you, as I suppose, I have [e] written briefly, exhorting, and testifying [f] that this is the true grace of God wherein ye stand.

13 The church that is at Babylon, elected together with you, saluteth you; and so doth [g] Marcus my son.

14 [h] Greet ye one another with a kiss of charity. [i] Peace be with you all that are in Christ Jesus. Amen.

THE SECOND EPISTLE GENERAL OF PETER.

CHAPTER I.

Confirmation in hope of the increase of God's graces, and exhortation to good works.

[2] SIMON Peter, a servant and an apostle of Jesus Christ, to them that have obtained [a] like precious faith with us through the righteousness [3] of God and our Saviour Jesus Christ:

2 [b] Grace and peace be multiplied unto you through the knowledge of God, and of Jesus our Lord,

3 According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, [c] through the knowledge of him [d] that hath called us [4] to glory and virtue:

4 [e] Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises: that by these ye might be [f] partakers of the divine nature, [g] having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust.

5 And beside this, [h] giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue [i] knowledge;

6 And to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness;

7 And to godliness brotherly kindness; and [k] to brotherly kindness charity.

8 For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be [5] barren [l] nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ.

9 But he that lacketh these things [m] is blind, and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was [n] purged from his old sins.

10 Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence [o] to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things, [p] ye shall never fall:

11 For so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

12 Wherefore [q] I will not be negligent to put you always in remembrance of these things, [r] though ye know them, and be established in the present truth.

13 Yea, I think it meet, [s] as long as I am in this tabernacle, [t] to stir you up by putting you in remembrance;

14 [u] Knowing that shortly I must put off this my tabernacle, even as [x] our Lord Jesus Christ hath shewed me.

15 Moreover I will endeavour that ye may be able after my decease to have these things always in remembrance.

16 For we have not followed [y] cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but [z] were eyewitnesses of his majesty.

17 For he received from God the Father honour and glory, when there came such a voice to him from the excellent glory, [a] This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.

18 And this voice which came from heaven we heard, when we were with him in [b] the holy mount.

19 We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto [c] a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and [d] the day star arise in your hearts:

20 Knowing this first, that [e] no prophecy of the scripture is of any private interpretation.

21 For [f] the prophecy came not [2] in old time by the will of man: [g] but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost.

CHAPTER II.

The punishment of false teachers.

BUT [a] there were false prophets also among the people, even as [b] there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even [c] denying the Lord [d] that bought them, [e] and bring upon themselves swift destruction.

2 And many shall follow their [2] pernicious ways; by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of.

3 And [f] through covetousness shall they with feigned words [g] make merchandise of you: [h] whose judgment now of a long time lingereth not, and their damnation slumbereth not.

4 For if God spared not [i] the angels [k] that sinned, but [l] cast them down to hell, and delivered them into chains of darkness, to be reserved unto judgment;

5 And spared not the old world, but saved [m] Noah the eighth person, [n] a preacher of righteousness, [o] bringing in the flood upon the world of the ungodly;

6 And [p] turning the cities of Sodom and Gomorrha into ashes condemned them with an overthrow, [q] making them an ensample unto those that after should live ungodly;

7 And [r] delivered just Lot, vexed with the filthy conversation of the wicked:

8 (For that righteous man dwelling among them, [s] in seeing and hearing, vexed his righteous soul from day to day with their unlawful deeds;)

9 [t] The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptations, and to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished:

10 But chiefly [u] them that walk after the flesh in the lust of uncleanness, and despise [3] government. [x] Presumptuous are they, selfwilled, they are not afraid to speak evil of dignities.

11 Whereas [y] angels, which are greater in power and might, bring not railing accusation [4] against them before the Lord.

12 But these, [z] as natural brute beasts, made to be taken and destroyed, speak evil of the things that they understand not; and shall utterly perish in their own corruption;

13 [a] And shall receive the reward of unrighteousness, as they that count it pleasure [b] to riot in the day time. [c] Spots they are and blemishes, sporting themselves with their own deceivings while [d] they feast with you;

14 Having eyes full of [5] adultery, and that cannot cease from sin; beguiling unstable souls: [e] an heart they have exercised with covetous practices; cursed children:

15 Which have forsaken the right way, and are gone astray, following the way of [f] Balaam the son of Bosor, who loved the wages of unrighteousness;

16 But was rebuked for his iniquity: the dumb ass speaking with man's voice forbad the madness of the prophet.

17 [g] These are wells without water, clouds that are carried with a tempest; to whom the mist of darkness is reserved for ever.

18 For when [h] they speak great swelling words of vanity, they allure through the lusts of the flesh, through much wantonness, those that [i] were [2] clean escaped from them who live in error.

19 While they promise them [k] liberty, they themselves are [l] the servants of corruption: for of whom a man is overcome, of the same is he brought in bondage.

20 For [m] if after they [n] have escaped the pollutions of the world [o] through the knowledge of the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, they are again entangled therein, and overcome, the latter end is worse with them than the beginning.

21 For [p] it had been better for them not to have known the way of righteousness, than, after they have known it, to turn from the holy commandment delivered unto them.

22 But it is happened unto them according to the true proverb, [q] The dog is turned to his own vomit again; and the sow that was washed to her wallowing in the mire.

CHAPTER III.

The certainty of Christ's coming to judgment, and how the world shall be destroyed.

THIS second epistle, beloved, I now write unto you; in both which [a] I stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance:

2 That ye may be mindful of the words which were spoken before by the holy prophets, [b] and of the commandment of us the apostles of the Lord and Saviour:

3 [c] Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers, [d] walking after their own lusts,

4 And saying, [e] Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation.

5 For this they willingly are ignorant of, that [f] by the word of God the heavens were of old, and the earth [3] [g] standing out of the water and in the water:

6 [h] Whereby the world that then was, being overflowed with water, perished:

7 But [i] the heavens and the earth, which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto [k] fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men.

8 But, beloved, be not ignorant of this one thing, that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and [l] a thousand years as one day.

9 [m] The Lord is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness; but [n] is longsuffering to us-ward, [o] not willing that any should perish, but [p] that all should come to repentance.

10 But [q] the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which [r] the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up.

11 Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be [s] in all holy conversation and godliness,

12 [t] Looking for and [2] hasting unto the coming of the day of God, wherein the heavens being on fire shall [u] be dissolved, and the elements shall [x] melt with fervent heat?

13 Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for [y] new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness.

14 Wherefore, beloved, seeing that ye look for such things, be diligent [z] that ye may be found of him in peace, without spot, and blameless.

15 And account that [a] the longsuffering of our Lord is salvation; even as our beloved brother Paul also according to the wisdom given unto him hath written unto you;

16 As also in all his epistles, [b] speaking in them of these things; in which are some things hard to be understood, which they that are unlearned and unstable wrest, as they do also the other scriptures, unto their own destruction.

17 Ye therefore, beloved, [c] seeing ye know these things before, [d] beware lest ye also, being led away with the error of the wicked, fall from your own stedfastness.

18 [e] But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. [f] To him be glory both now and for ever. Amen.

THE FIRST EPISTLE GENERAL OF JOHN.

CHAPTER I.

Description of the person of Christ, and assurance of forgiveness of sins by his death.

THAT [a] which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, [b] which we have looked upon, and [c] our hands have handled, of the Word of life;

2 (For [d] the life [e] was manifested, and we have seen it, [f] and bear witness, [g] and shew unto you that eternal life, [h] which was with the Father, and was manifested unto us;)

3 [i] That which we have seen and heard declare we unto you, that ye also may have fellowship with us: and truly [k] our fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ.

4 And these things write we unto you, [l] that your joy may be full.

5 [m] This then is the message which we have heard of him, and declare unto you, that [n] God is light, and in him is no darkness at all.

6 [o] If we say that we have fellowship with him, and walk in darkness, we lie, and do not the truth:

7 But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and [p] the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin.

8 [q] If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, [r] and the truth is not in us.

9 [s] If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to [t] cleanse us from all unrighteousness.

10 If we say that we have not sinned, we make him a liar, and his word is not in us.

CHAPTER II.

Comfort against the sins of infirmity, and what it is to rightly know God.

MY little children, these things write I unto you, that ye sin not. And if any man sin, [a] we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous:

2 And [b] he is the propitiation for our sins: and not for our's only, but [c] also for the sins of the whole world.

3 And hereby we do know that we know him, if we keep his commandments.

4 [d] He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, [e] is a liar, and the truth is not in him.

5 But [f] whoso keepeth his word, [g] in him verily is the love of God perfected: [h] hereby know we that we are in him.

6 [i] He that saith he abideth in him [k] ought himself also so to walk, even as he walked.

7 Brethren, [l] I write no new commandment unto you, but an old commandment [m] which ye had from the beginning. The old commandment is the word which ye have heard from the beginning.

8 Again, [n] a new commandment I write unto you, which thing is true in him and in you: [o] because the darkness is past, and [p] the true light now shineth.

9 [q] He that saith he is in the light, and hateth his brother, is in darkness even until now.

10 [r] He that loveth his brother abideth in the light, and [s] there is none [2] occasion of stumbling in him.

11 But he that hateth his brother is in darkness, and [t] walketh in darkness, and knoweth not whither he goeth, because that darkness hath blinded his eyes.

12 I write unto you, little children, because [u] your sins are forgiven you for his name's sake.

13 I write unto you, fathers, because ye have known him [x] that is from the beginning. I write unto you, young men, because ye have overcome the wicked one. I write unto you, little children, because ye have known the Father.

14 I have written unto you, fathers, because ye have known him that is from the beginning. I have written unto you, young men, because [y] ye are strong, and the word of God abideth in you, and ye have overcome the wicked one.

15 [z] Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. [a] If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him.

16 For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, [b] and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world.

17 And [c] the world passeth away, and the lust thereof: but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever.

18 [d] Little children, [e] it is the last time: and as ye have heard that [f] antichrist shall come, [g] even now are there many antichrists; whereby we know [h] that it is the last time.

19 [i] They went out from us, but they were not of us; for [k] if they had been of us, they would no doubt have continued with us: but they went out, [l] that they might be made manifest that they were not all of us.

20 But [m] ye have an unction [n] from the Holy One, and [o] ye know all things.

21 I have not written unto you because ye know not the truth, but because ye know it, and that no lie is of the truth.

22 [p] Who is a liar but he that denieth that Jesus is the Christ? He is antichrist, that denieth the Father and the Son.

23 [q] Whosoever denieth the Son, the same hath not the Father: [but] [r] he that acknowledgeth the Son hath the Father also.

24 Let that therefore abide in you, [s] which ye have heard from the beginning. If that which ye have heard from the beginning shall remain in you, [t] ye also shall continue in the Son, and in the Father.

25 [u] And this is the promise that he hath promised us, even eternal life.

26 These things have I written unto you [x] concerning them that seduce you.

27 But [y] the anointing which ye have received of him abideth in you, and [z] ye need not that any man teach you: but as the same anointing [a] teacheth you of all things, and is truth, and is no lie, and even as it hath taught you, ye shall abide in [2] him.

28 And now, little children, abide in him; that, [b] when he shall appear, we may have confidence, [c] and not be ashamed before him at his coming.

29 [d] If ye know that he is righteous, [3] ye know that [e] every one that doeth righteousness is born of him.

CHAPTER III.

Love of God towards us, whence we ought to have brotherly love to one another.

BEHOLD, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that [a] we should be called the sons of God: therefore the world knoweth us not, [b] because it knew him not.

2 Beloved, [c] now are we the sons of God, and [d] it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, [e] we shall be like him: for [f] we shall see him as he is.

3 [g] And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure.

4 Whosoever committeth sin transgresseth also the law: for [h] sin is the transgression of the law.

5 And ye know [i] that he was manifested [k] to take away our sins; and [l] in him is no sin.

6 Whosoever abideth in him sinneth not: [m] whosoever sinneth hath not seen him, neither known him.

7 Little children, [n] let no man deceive you: [o] he that doeth righteousness is righteous, even as he is righteous.

8 [p] He that committeth sin is of the devil; for the devil sinneth from the beginning. For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, [q] that he might destroy the works of the devil.

9 [r] Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin; for [s] his seed remaineth in him: and he cannot sin, because he is born of God.

10 In this the children of God are manifest, and the children of the devil: [t] whosoever doeth not righteousness is not of God, [u] neither he that loveth not his brother.

11 For [x] this is the [2] message that ye heard from the beginning, [y] that we should love one another.

12 Not as [z] Cain, who was of that wicked one, and slew his brother. And wherefore slew he him? Because his own works were evil, and his brother's righteous.

13 Marvel not, my brethren, if [a] the world hate you.

14 [b] We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren. [c] He that loveth not his brother abideth in death.

15 [d] Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer: and ye know that [e] no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him.

16 [f] Hereby perceive we the love of God, because he laid down his life for us: and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren.

17 But [g] whoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, [h] how dwelleth the love of God in him?

18 My little children, [i] let us not love in word, neither in tongue; but in deed and in truth.

19 And hereby we know [k] that we are of the truth, and shall [3] assure our hearts before him.

20 [l] For if our heart condemn us, God is greater than our heart, and knoweth all things.

21 [m] Beloved, if our heart condemn us not, [n] then have we confidence toward God.

22 And [o] whatsoever we ask, we receive of him, because we keep his commandments, [p] and do those things that are pleasing in his sight.

23 [q] And this is his commandment, That we should believe on the name of his Son Jesus Christ, [r] and love one another, [s] as he gave us commandment.

24 And [t] he that keepeth his commandments [u] dwelleth in him, and he in him. And [x] hereby we know that he abideth in us, by the Spirit which he hath given us.

CHAPTER IV.

Warning not to believe all who boast of the Spirit, but to try them.

BELOVED, [a] believe not every spirit, but [b] try the spirits whether they are of God: because [c] many false prophets are gone out into the world.

2 Hereby know ye the Spirit of God: [d] Every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is of God:

3 And [e] every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God: and this is that spirit of antichrist, whereof ye have heard that it should come; and [f] even now already is it in the world.

4 [g] Ye are of God, little children, and have overcome them: because greater is he that is in you, than [h] he that is in the world.

5 [i] They are of the world: therefore speak they of the world, and [k] the world heareth them.

6 We are of God: [l] he that knoweth God heareth us; he that is not of God heareth not us. Hereby know we [m] the spirit of truth, and the spirit of error.

7 [n] Beloved, let us love one another: for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God.

8 He that loveth not [o] knoweth not God; for [p] God is love.

9 [q] In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world, [r] that we might live through him.

10 Herein is love, [s] not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son [t] to be the propitiation for our sins.

11 Beloved, [u] if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another.

12 [x] No man hath seen God at any time. If we love one another, God dwelleth in us, and [y] his love is perfected in us.

13 [z] Hereby know we that we dwell in him, and he in us, because he hath given us of his Spirit.

14 And [a] we have seen and do testify that [b] the Father sent the Son to be the Saviour of the world.

15 [c] Whosoever shall confess that Jesus is the Son of God, God dwelleth in him, and he in God.

16 And we have known and believed the love that God hath to us. [d] God is love; and [e] he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him.

17 Herein is [2] our love made perfect, that [f] we may have boldness in the day of judgment: [g] because as he is, so are we in this world.

18 There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear: because fear hath torment. He that feareth [h] is not made perfect in love.

19 We love him, because he first loved us.

20 [i] If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar: for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God [k] whom he hath not seen?

21 And [l] this commandment have we from him, That he who loveth God love his brother also.

CHAPTER V.

He that loveth God loveth his children, and keepeth his commandments.

WHOSOEVER [a] believeth that [b] Jesus is the Christ is [c] born of God: [d] and every one that loveth him that begat loveth him also that is begotten of him.

2 By this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God, and keep his commandments.

3 [e] For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments: and [f] his commandments are not grievous.

4 For [g] whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world: and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith.

5 Who is he that overcometh the world, but [h] he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God?

6 This is he that came [i] by water and blood, even Jesus Christ; not by water only, but by water and blood. [k] And it is the Spirit that beareth witness, because the Spirit is truth.

7 For there are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, [l] the Word, and the Holy Ghost: [m] and these three are one.

8 And there are three that bear witness in earth, the spirit, and the water, and the blood: and these three agree in one.

9 If we receive [n] the witness of men, the witness of God is greater: [o] for this is the witness of God which he hath testified of his Son.

10 He that believeth on the Son of God [p] hath the witness in himself: he that believeth not God [q] hath made him a liar; because he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son.

11 [r] And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and [s] this life is in his Son.

12 [t] He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life.

13 [u] These things have I written unto you that believe on the name of the Son of God; [x] that ye may know that ye have eternal life, and that ye may believe on the name of the Son of God.

14 And this is the confidence that we have [2] in him, that, [y] if we ask any thing according to his will, he heareth us:

15 And if we know that he hear us, whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petitions that we desired of him.

16 If any man see his brother sin a sin which is not unto death, he shall ask, and [z] he shall give him life for them that sin not unto death. [a] There is a sin unto death: [b] I do not say that he shall pray for it.

17 [c] All unrighteousness is sin: and there is a sin not unto death.

18 We know that [d] whosoever is born of God sinneth not; but he that is begotten of God [e] keepeth himself, and that wicked one toucheth him not.

19 And we know that we are of God, and [f] the whole world lieth in wickedness.

20 And we know that the Son of God is come, and [g] hath given us an understanding, [h] that we may know him that is true, and we are in him that is true, even in his Son Jesus Christ. [i] This is the true God, [k] and eternal life.

21 Little children, [l] keep yourselves from idols. Amen.

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF JOHN.

Exhortation to persevere in Christian love and belief, that the reward of former profession be not lost.

THE elder unto the elect lady and her children, [a] whom I love in the truth; and not I only, but also all they that have known [b] the truth;

2 For the truth's sake, which dwelleth in us, and shall be with us for ever.

3 [c] Grace [2] be with you, mercy, and peace, from God the Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of the Father, [d] in truth and love.

4 I rejoiced greatly that I found of thy children [e] walking in truth, as we have received a commandment from the Father.

5 And now I beseech thee, lady, [f] not as though I wrote a new commandment unto thee, but that which we had from the beginning, [g] that we love one another.

6 And [h] this is love, that we walk after his commandments. This is the commandment, That, [i] as ye have heard from the beginning, ye should walk in it.

7 For [k] many deceivers are entered into the world, [l] who confess not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh. [m] This is a deceiver and an antichrist.

8 [n] Look to yourselves, [o] that we lose not those things which we have [2] wrought, but that we receive a full reward.

9 [p] Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son.

10 If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, [q] neither bid him God speed:

11 For he that biddeth him God speed is partaker of his evil deeds.

12 [r] Having many things to write unto you, I would not write with paper and ink: but I trust to come unto you, and speak [3] face to face, [s] that [4] our joy may be full.

13 [t] The children of thy elect sister greet thee. Amen.

THE THIRD EPISTLE OF JOHN.

Commendation of Gaius for his piety, and hospitality to true preachers.

THE elder unto the wellbeloved Gaius, [a] whom I love [2] in the truth.

2 Beloved, I [3] wish above all things that thou mayest prosper and be in health, even as thy soul prospereth.

3 For I rejoiced greatly, when the brethren came and testified of the truth that is in thee, even as [b] thou walkest in the truth.

4 I have no greater joy than to hear that [c] my children walk in truth.

5 Beloved, thou doest faithfully whatsoever thou doest to the brethren, and to strangers;

6 Which have borne witness of thy charity before the church: whom if thou bring forward on their journey [4] after a godly sort, thou shalt do well:

7 Because that for his name's sake they went forth, [d] taking nothing of the Gentiles.

8 We therefore ought to receive such, that we might be fellowhelpers to the truth.

9 I wrote unto the church: but Diotrephes, who loveth to have the preeminence among them, receiveth us not.

10 Wherefore, if I come, I will remember his deeds which he doeth, prating against us with malicious words: and not content therewith, neither doth he himself receive the brethren, and forbiddeth them that would, and casteth them out of the church.

11 Beloved, [e] follow not that which is evil, but that which is good. [f] He that doeth good is of God: but he that doeth evil hath not seen God.

12 Demetrius [g] hath good report of all men, and of the truth itself: yea, and we also bear record; [h] and ye know that our record is true.

13 [i] I had many things to write, but I will not with ink and pen write unto thee:

14 But I trust I shall shortly see thee, and we shall speak [2] face to face. Peace be to thee. Our friends salute thee. Greet the friends by name.

THE GENERAL EPISTLE OF JUDE.

Exhortation to constancy in profession of the faith; punishment prepared for false teachers.

JUDE, the servant of Jesus Christ, and [a] brother of James, to them that are sanctified by God the Father, and [b] preserved in Jesus Christ, and [c] called:

2 Mercy unto you, and [d] peace, and love, be multiplied.

3 Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you [e] of the common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you that [f] ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints.

4 [g] For there are certain men crept in unawares, [h] who were before of old ordained to this condemnation, ungodly men, [i] turning [k] the grace of our God into lasciviousness, and [l] denying the only Lord God, and our Lord Jesus Christ.

5 I will therefore put you in remembrance, though ye once knew this, how that [m] the Lord, having saved the people out of the land of Egypt, afterward [n] destroyed them that believed not.

6 And [o] the angels which kept not their [2] first estate, but left their own habitation, [p] he hath reserved in everlasting chains under darkness [q] unto the judgment of the great day.

7 Even as [r] Sodom and Gomorrha, and the cities about them in like manner, giving themselves over to fornication, and going after [3] strange flesh, are set forth for an example, suffering the vengeance of eternal fire.

8 [s] Likewise also these filthy dreamers defile the flesh, despise dominion, and [t] speak evil of dignities.

9 Yet [u] Michael the archangel, when contending with the devil he disputed about the body of Moses, [x] durst not bring against him a railing accusation, but said, [y] The Lord rebuke thee.

10 [z] But these speak evil of those things which they know not: but what they know naturally, as brute beasts, in those things they corrupt themselves.

11 Woe unto them! for they have gone in the way [a] of Cain, and [b] ran greedily after the error of Balaam for reward, and perished [c] in the gainsaying of Core.

12 [d] These are spots in your [e] feasts of charity, when they feast with you, feeding themselves without fear: [f] clouds they are without water, [g] carried about of winds; trees whose fruit withereth, without fruit, twice dead, [h] plucked up by the roots;

13 [i] Raging waves of the sea, [k] foaming out their own shame; wandering stars, [l] to whom is reserved the blackness of darkness for ever.

14 And Enoch also, [m] the seventh from Adam, prophesied of these, saying, Behold, [n] the Lord cometh with ten thousands of his saints,

15 To execute judgment upon all, and to convince all that are ungodly among them of all their ungodly deeds which they have ungodly committed, and of all their [o] hard speeches which ungodly sinners have spoken against him.

16 These are murmurers, complainers, walking after their own lusts; and [p] their mouth speaketh great swelling words, [q] having men's persons in admiration because of advantage.

17 [r] But, beloved, remember ye the words which were spoken before of the apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ;

18 How that they told you [s] there should be mockers in the last time, who should walk after their own ungodly lusts.

19 These be they [t] who separate themselves, [u] sensual, having not the Spirit.

20 But ye, beloved, [x] building up yourselves on your most holy faith, [y] praying in the Holy Ghost,

21 Keep yourselves in the love of God, [z] looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life.

22 And of some have compassion, making a difference:

23 And others [a] save with fear, [b] pulling them out of the fire; hating even [c] the garment spotted by the flesh.

24 [d] Now unto him that is able to keep you from falling, and [e] to present you faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy,

25 [f] To the only wise God our Saviour, be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever. Amen.

THE REVELATION OF
ST. JOHN THE DIVINE.

CHAPTER I.

Revelation to the churches of Asia.

THE Revelation of Jesus Christ, [a] which God gave unto him, to shew unto his servants things which [b] must shortly come to pass; and [c] he sent and signified it by his angel unto his servant John:

2 [d] Who bare record of the word of God, and of the testimony of Jesus Christ, and of all things [e] that he saw.

3 [f] Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy, and keep those things which are written therein: for [g] the time is at hand.

4 JOHN to the seven churches which are in Asia: Grace be unto you, and peace, from him [h] which is, and [i] which was, and which is to come; [k] and from the seven Spirits which are before his throne;

5 And from Jesus Christ, [l] who is the faithful witness, and the [m] first begotten of the dead, and [n] the prince of the kings of the earth. Unto him [o] that loved us, [p] and washed us from our sins in his own blood,

6 And hath [q] made us kings and priests unto God and his Father; [r] to him be glory and dominion for ever and ever. Amen.

7 [s] Behold, he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him, and [t] they also which pierced him: and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him. Even so, Amen.

8 [u] I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending, saith the Lord, [x] which is, and which was, and which is to come, the Almighty.

9 I John, who also am your brother, and [y] companion in tribulation, and [z] in the kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ, was in the isle that is called Patmos, [a] for the word of God, and for the testimony of Jesus Christ.

10 [b] I was in the Spirit on [c] the Lord's day, and heard behind me [d] a great voice, as of a trumpet,

11 Saying, [e] I am Alpha and Omega, [f] the first and the last: and, What thou seest, write in a book, and send it unto the seven churches which are in Asia; unto Ephesus, and unto Smyrna, and unto Pergamos, and unto Thyatira, and unto Sardis, and unto Philadelphia, and unto Laodicea.

12 And I turned to see the voice that spake with me. And being turned, [g] I saw seven golden candlesticks;

13 [h] And in the midst of the seven candlesticks [i] one like unto the Son of man, [k] clothed with a garment down to the foot, and [l] girt about the paps with a golden girdle.

14 His head and [m] his hairs were white like wool, as white as snow; and [n] his eyes were as a flame of fire;

15 [o] And his feet like unto fine brass, as if they burned in a furnace; and [p] his voice as the sound of many waters.

16 [q] And he had in his right hand seven stars: and [r] out of his mouth went a sharp twoedged sword: [s] and his countenance was as the sun shineth in his strength.

17 And [t] when I saw him, I fell at his feet as dead. And [u] he laid his right hand upon me, saying unto me, Fear not; [x] I am the first and the last:

18 [y] I am he that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, [z] I am alive for evermore, Amen; and [a] have the keys of hell and of death.

19 Write [b] the things which thou hast seen, [c] and the things which are, [d] and the things which shall be hereafter;

20 The mystery [e] of the seven stars which thou sawest in my right hand, [f] and the seven golden candlesticks. The seven stars are [g] the angels of the seven churches: and [h] the seven candlesticks which thou sawest are the seven churches.

CHAPTER II.

What is commanded to be written to the ministers of the churches.

UNTO the angel of the church of Ephesus write; These things saith [a] he that holdeth the seven stars in his right hand, [b] who walketh in the midst of the seven golden candlesticks;

2 [c] I know thy works, and thy labour, and thy patience, and how thou canst not bear them which are evil: and [d] thou hast tried them [e] which say they are apostles, and are not, and hast found them liars:

3 And hast borne, and hast patience, and for my name's sake hast laboured, and hast [f] not fainted.

4 Nevertheless I have somewhat against thee, because thou hast left thy first love.

5 Remember therefore from whence thou art fallen, and repent, and do the first works; [g] or else I will come unto thee quickly, and will remove thy candlestick out of his place, except thou repent.

6 But this thou hast, that thou hatest the deeds of [h] the Nicolaitanes, which I also hate.

7 [i] He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches; To him that overcometh will I give [k] to eat of [l] the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God.

8 And unto the angel of the church in Smyrna write; These things saith [m] the first and the last, which was dead, and is alive;

9 [n] I know thy works, and tribulation, and poverty, (but thou art [o] rich) and I know the blasphemy of [p] them which say they are Jews, and are not, [q] but are the synagogue of Satan.

10 [r] Fear none of those things which thou shalt suffer: behold, the devil shall cast some of you into prison, that ye may be tried; and ye shall have tribulation ten days: [s] be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee [t] a crown of life.

11 [u] He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches; He that overcometh shall not be hurt of [x] the second death.

12 And to the angel of the church in Pergamos write; These things saith [y] he which hath the sharp sword with two edges;

13 [z] I know thy works, and where thou dwellest, even [a] where Satan's seat is: and thou holdest fast my name, and hast not denied my faith, even in those days wherein Antipas was my faithful martyr, who was slain among you, where Satan dwelleth.

14 But I have a few things against thee, because thou hast there them that hold the doctrine of [b] Balaam, who taught Balac to cast a stumblingblock before the children of Israel, [c] to eat things sacrificed unto idols, [d] and to commit fornication.

15 So hast thou also them that hold the doctrine [e] of the Nicolaitanes, which thing I hate.

16 Repent; or else I will come unto thee quickly, and [f] will fight against them with the sword of my mouth.

17 [g] He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches; To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden manna, and will give him a white stone, and in the stone [h] a new name written, which no man knoweth saving he that receiveth it.

18 And unto the angel of the church in Thyatira write; These things saith the Son of God, [i] who hath his eyes like unto a flame of fire, and his feet are like fine brass;

19 [k] I know thy works, and charity, and service, and faith, and thy patience, and thy works; and the last to be more than the first.

20 Notwithstanding I have a few things against thee, because thou sufferest that woman [l] Jezebel, which calleth herself a prophetess, to teach and to seduce my servants [m] to commit fornication, and to eat things sacrificed unto idols.

21 And I gave her space [n] to repent of her fornication; and she repented not.
22 Behold, I will cast her into a bed, and them that commit adultery with her into great tribulation, except they repent of their deeds.
23 And I will kill her children with death; and all the churches shall know that [o] I am he which searcheth the reins and hearts: and [p] I will give unto every one of you according to your works.
24 But unto you I say, and unto the rest in Thyatira, as many as have not this doctrine, and which have not known the depths of Satan, as they speak; [q] I will put upon you none other burden.
25 But [r] that which ye have already hold fast till I come.
26 And he that overcometh, and keepeth [s] my works unto the end, [t] to him will I give power over the nations:
27 [u] And he shall rule them with a rod of iron; as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers: even as I received of my Father.
28 And I will give him [x] the morning star.
29 [y] He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches.

CHAPTER III.

Sardis reproved and threatened, Philadelphia approved, and Laodicea rebuked and admonished.

AND unto the angel of the church in Sardis write; These things saith he [a] that hath the seven Spirits of God, and the seven stars; [b] I know thy works, that thou hast a name that thou livest, [c] and art dead.
2 Be watchful, and strengthen the things which remain, that are ready to die: for I have not found thy works perfect before God.
3 [d] Remember therefore how thou hast received and heard, and hold fast, and [e] repent. [f] If therefore thou shalt not watch, I will come on thee as a thief, and thou shalt not know what hour I will come upon thee.
4 Thou hast [g] a few names even in Sardis which have not [h] defiled their garments; and they shall walk with me [i] in white: for they are worthy.
5 He that overcometh, [k] the same shall be clothed in white raiment; and I will not [l] blot out his name out of the [m] book of life, but [n] I will confess his name before my Father, and before his angels.
6 [o] He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches.
7 And to the angel of the church in Philadelphia write; These things saith [p] he that is holy, [q] he that is true, he that hath [r] the key of David, [s] he that openeth, and no man shutteth; and [t] shutteth, and no man openeth;
8 [u] I know thy works: behold, I have set before thee [x] an open door, and no man can shut it: for thou hast a little strength, and hast kept my word, and hast not denied my name.
9 Behold, I will make [y] them of the synagogue of Satan, which say they are Jews, and are not, but do lie; behold, [z] I will make them to come and worship before thy feet, and to know that I have loved thee.
10 Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, [a] I also will keep thee from the hour of temptation, which shall come upon [b] all the world, to try them that dwell [c] upon the earth.
11 Behold, [d] I come quickly: [e] hold that fast which thou hast, that no man take [f] thy crown.
12 Him that overcometh will I make [g] a pillar in the temple of my God, and he shall go no more out: and [h] I will write upon him the name of my God, and the name of the city of my God, which is [i] new Jerusalem, which cometh down out of heaven from my God: [k] and I will write upon him my new name.
13 [l] He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches.
14 And unto the angel of the church [2] of the Laodiceans write; [m] These things saith the Amen, [n] the faithful and true witness, [o] the beginning of the creation of God;
15 [p] I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot: I would thou wert cold or hot.
16 So then because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spue thee out of my mouth.
17 Because thou sayest, [q] I am rich, and increased with goods, and have need of nothing; and knowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked:
18 I counsel thee [r] to buy of me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich; and [s] white raiment, that thou mayest be clothed, and that the shame of thy nakedness do not appear; and anoint thine eyes with eyesalve, that thou mayest see.
19 [t] As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten: be zealous therefore, and repent.
20 Behold, [u] I stand at the door, and knock: [x] if any man hear my voice, and open the door, [y] I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me.

21 To him that overcometh [z] will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne.

22 [a] He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches.

CHAPTER IV.

John seeth the throne of God in heaven; the elders worship him that sat on the throne.

AFTER this I looked, and, behold, a door was opened in heaven: and [a] the first voice which I heard was as it were of a trumpet talking with me; which said, [b] Come up hither, [c] and I will shew thee things which must be hereafter.

2 And immediately [d] I was in the spirit: and, behold, [e] a throne was set in heaven, and one sat on the throne.

3 And he that sat was to look upon like a jasper and a sardine stone: [f] and there was a rainbow round about the throne, in sight like unto an emerald.

4 [g] And round about the throne were four and twenty seats: and upon the seats I saw four and twenty elders sitting, [h] clothed in white raiment; [i] and they had on their heads crowns of gold.

5 And out of the throne proceeded [k] lightnings and thunderings and voices: [l] and there were seven lamps of fire burning before the throne, which are [m] the seven Spirits of God.

6 And before the throne there was [n] a sea of glass like unto crystal: [o] and in the midst of the throne, and round about the throne, were four beasts full of eyes before [p] and behind.

7 [q] And the first beast was like a lion, and the second beast like a calf, and the third beast had a face as a man, and the fourth beast was like a flying eagle.

8 And the four beasts had each of them [r] six wings about him; and they were full of eyes [s] within: and [2] they rest not day and night, saying, [t] Holy, holy, holy, [u] Lord God Almighty, [z] which was, and is, and is to come.

9 And when those beasts give glory and honour and thanks to him that sat on the throne, [y] who liveth for ever and ever,

10 [z] The four and twenty elders fall down before him that sat on the throne, [a] and worship him that liveth for ever and ever, [b] and cast their crowns before the throne, saying,

11 [c] Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive glory and honour and power: [d] for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created.

CHAPTER V.

The elders praise the Lamb.

AND I saw in the right hand of him that sat on the throne [a] a book written within and on the backside, [b] sealed with seven seals.

2 And I saw a strong angel proclaiming with a loud voice, Who is worthy to open the book, and to loose the seals thereof?

3 And no man [c] in heaven, nor in earth, neither under the earth, was able to open the book, neither to look thereon.

4 And I wept much, because no man was found worthy to open and to read the book, neither to look thereon.

5 And one of the elders saith unto me, Weep not: behold, [d] the Lion of the tribe of Juda, [e] the Root of David, hath prevailed to open the book, [f] and to loose the seven seals thereof.

6 And I beheld, and, lo, in the midst of the throne and of the four beasts, and in the midst of the elders, stood [g] a Lamb as it had been slain, having seven horns and [h] seven eyes, which are [i] the seven Spirits of God sent forth into all the earth.

7 And he came and took the book out of the right hand [k] of him that sat upon the throne.

8 And when he had taken the book, [l] the four beasts and four and twenty elders fell down before the Lamb, having every one of them [m] harps, and golden vials full of [2] odours, [n] which are the prayers of saints.

9 And [o] they sung a new song, saying, [p] Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof: [q] for thou wast slain, and [r] hast redeemed us to God by thy blood [s] out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation;

10 [t] And hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth.

11 And I beheld, and I heard the voice of many angels [u] round about the throne and the beasts and the elders: and the number of them was [x] ten thousand times ten thousand, and thousands of thousands;

12 Saying with a loud voice, [y] Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honour, and glory, and blessing.

13 And [z] every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them, heard I saying, [a] Blessing, and honour, and glory, and power, be unto him [b] that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb for ever and ever.

14 [c] And the four beasts said, Amen. And the four and twenty elders fell down and worshipped him [d] that liveth for ever and ever.

CHAPTER VI.

The opening of the seals in order, and what followed thereupon.

AND [a] I saw when the Lamb opened one of the seals, and I heard, as it were the noise of thunder, [b] one of the four beasts saying, Come and see.

2 And I saw, and behold [c] a white horse: [d] and he that sat on him had a bow; [e] and a crown was given unto him: and he went forth conquering, and to conquer.

3 And when he had opened the second seal, [f] I heard the second beast say, Come and see.

4 [g] And there went out another horse that was red: and power was given to him that sat thereon to take peace from the earth, and that they should kill one another: and there was given unto him a great sword.

5 And when he had opened the third seal, [h] I heard the third beast say, Come and see. And I beheld, and lo [i] a black horse; and he that sat on him had a pair of balances in his hand.

6 And I heard a voice in the midst of the four beasts say, [2] A measure of wheat for a penny, and three measures of barley for a penny; and [k] see thou hurt not the oil and the wine.

7 And when he had opened the fourth seal, [l] I heard the voice of the fourth beast say, Come and see.

8 [m] And I looked, and behold a pale horse: and his name that sat on him was Death, and Hell followed with him. And power was given [3] unto them over the fourth part of the earth, [n] to kill with sword, and with hunger, and with death, [o] and with the beasts of the earth.

9 And when he had opened the fifth seal, I saw under [p] the altar [q] the souls of them that were slain [r] for the word of God, and for [s] the testimony which they held:

10 And they cried with a loud voice, saying, [t] How long, O Lord, [u] holy and true, [x] dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth?

11 And [y] white robes were given unto every one of them; and it was said unto them, [z] that they should rest yet for a little season, until their fellowservants also and their brethren, that should be killed as they were, should be fulfilled.

12 And I beheld when he had opened the sixth seal, [a] and, lo, there was a great earthquake; and [b] the sun became black as sackcloth of hair, and the moon became as blood;

13 [c] And the stars of heaven fell unto the earth, even as a fig tree casteth her [2] untimely figs, when she is shaken of a mighty wind.

14 [d] And the heaven departed as a scroll when it is rolled together; and [e] every mountain and island were moved out of their places.

15 And the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bondman, and every free man, [f] hid themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains;

16 [g] And said to the mountains and rocks, Fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb:

17 [h] For the great day of his wrath is come; [i] and who shall be able to stand?

CHAPTER VII.

An angel sealeth the servants of God; the number of them that were sealed.

AND after these things I saw four angels standing on the four corners of the earth, [a] holding the four winds of the earth, [b] that the wind should not blow on the earth, nor on the sea, nor on any tree.

2 And I saw another angel ascending from the east, having the seal of the living God: and he cried with a loud voice to the four angels, to whom it was given to hurt the earth and the sea,

3 Saying, [c] Hurt not the earth, neither the sea, nor the trees, till we have [d] sealed the servants of our God [e] in their foreheads.

4 [f] And I heard the number of them which were sealed: and there were sealed [g] an hundred and forty and four thousand of all the tribes of the children of Israel.

5 Of the tribe of Juda were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Reuben were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Gad were sealed twelve thousand.

6 Of the tribe of Aser were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Nephthalim were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Manasses were sealed twelve thousand.

7 Of the tribe of Simeon were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Levi were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Issachar were sealed twelve thousand.

8 Of the tribe of Zabulon were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Joseph were sealed twelve thousand. Of the tribe of Benjamin were sealed twelve thousand.

9 After this I beheld, and, lo, [h] a great multitude, which no man could number, [i] of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues, stood before the throne, and before the Lamb, [k] clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands;

10 And cried with a loud voice, saying, [l] Salvation to our God [m] which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb.

11 [n] And all the angels stood round about the throne, and about the elders and the four beasts, and fell before the throne on their faces, and worshipped God,

12 [o] Saying, Amen: Blessing, and glory, and wisdom, and thanksgiving, and honour, and power, and might, be unto our God for ever and ever. Amen.

13 And one of the elders answered, saying unto me, What are these which are arrayed in [p] white robes? and whence came they?

14 And I said unto him, Sir, thou knowest. And he said to me, [q] These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have [r] washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb.

15 Therefore are they before the throne of God, and serve him day and night in his temple: and he that sitteth on the throne shall [s] dwell among them.

16 [t] They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more: [u] neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat.

17 For the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne [x] shall feed them, and shall lead them unto living fountains of waters: [y] and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes.

CHAPTER VIII.

Seven trumpets given to seven angels, four of whom sound them, and plagues follow.

AND [a] when he had opened the seventh seal, there was silence in heaven about the space of half an hour.

2 [b] And I saw the seven angels which stood before God; [c] and to them were given seven trumpets.

3 And another angel came and stood at the altar, having a golden censer; and there was given unto him much incense, that he should [2] offer it with [d] the prayers of all saints upon [e] the golden altar which was before the throne.

4 And [f] the smoke of the incense, which came with the prayers of the saints, ascended up before God out of the angel's hand.

5 And the angel took the censer, and filled it with fire of the altar, and cast it [3] into the earth: and [g] there were voices, and thunderings, and lightnings, [h] and an earthquake.

6 And the seven angels which had the seven trumpets prepared themselves to sound.

7 The first angel sounded. [i] and there followed hail and fire mingled with blood, and they were cast [k] upon the earth: and the third part [l] of trees was burnt up, and [4] all green grass was burnt up.

8 And the second angel sounded, [m] and as it were a great mountain burning with fire was cast into the sea: [n] and the third part of the sea [o] became blood;

9 [p] And the third part of the creatures which were in the sea, and had life, died; and the third part of the ships were destroyed.

10 And the third angel sounded, [q] and there fell a great star from heaven, burning as it were a lamp, [r] and it fell upon the third part of the rivers, and upon the fountains of waters;

11 [s] And the name of the star is called Wormwood: [t] and the third part of the waters became wormwood; and many men died of the waters, because they were made bitter.

12 [u] And the fourth angel sounded, and the third part of the sun was smitten, and the third part of the moon, and the third part of the stars; so as the third part of them was darkened, and the day shone not for a third part of it, and the night likewise.

13 And I beheld, [x] and heard an angel flying through the midst of heaven, saying with a loud voice, [y] Woe, woe, woe, to the inhabiters of the earth by reason of the other voices of the trumpet of the three angels, which are yet to sound!

CHAPTER IX.

A star falleth from heaven, who openeth the bottomless pit, whence come forth locusts.

AND the fifth angel sounded, [a] and I saw a star fall from heaven unto the earth: and to him was given the key of [b] the bottomless pit.

2 And he opened the bottomless pit; [c] and there arose a smoke out of the pit, as the smoke of a great furnace; and the sun and the air were darkened by reason of the smoke of the pit.

3 And there came out of the smoke [d] locusts upon the earth: and unto them was given power, [e] as the scorpions of the earth have power.

4 And it was commanded them [f] that they should not hurt [g] the grass of the earth, neither any green thing, neither any tree; but only those men which have not [h] the seal of God in their foreheads.

5 And to them it was given that they should not kill them, [i] but that they should be tormented five months: and their torment was as the torment of a scorpion, when he striketh a man.

6 And in those days [k] shall men seek death, and shall not find it; and shall desire to die, and death shall flee from them.

7 And [l] the shapes of the locusts were like unto horses prepared unto battle; [m] and on their heads were as it were crowns like gold, [n] and their faces were as the faces of men.

8 And they had hair as the hair of women, and [o] their teeth were as the teeth of lions.

9 And they had breastplates, as it were breastplates of iron; and the sound of their wings was [p] as the sound of chariots of many horses running to battle.

10 And they had tails like unto scorpions, and there were stings in their tails: [q] and their power was to hurt men five months.

11 [r] And they had a king over them, which is [s] the angel of the bottomless pit, whose name in the Hebrew tongue is Abaddon, but in the Greek tongue hath his name [2] Apollyon.

12 [t] One woe is past; and, behold, there come two woes more hereafter.

13 And the sixth angel sounded, and I heard a voice from the four horns of the golden altar which is before God,

14 Saying to the sixth angel which had the trumpet, Loose the four angels which are bound [u] in the great river Euphrates.

15 And the four angels were loosed, which were prepared [3] for an hour, and a day, and a month, and a year, for to slay the third part of men.

16 And [x] the number of the army [y] of the horsemen were two hundred thousand thousand: [z] and I heard the number of them.

17 And thus I saw the horses in the vision, and them that sat on them, having breastplates of fire, and of jacinth, and brimstone: [a] and the heads of the horses were as the heads of lions; and out of their mouths issued fire and smoke and brimstone.

18 By these three was the third part of men killed, by the fire, and by the smoke, and by the brimstone, which issued out of their mouths.

19 For their power is in their mouth, and in their tails: [b] for their tails were like unto serpents, and had heads, and with them they do hurt.

20 And the rest of the men which were not killed by these plagues [c] yet repented not of the works of their hands, that they should not worship [d] devils, [e] and idols of gold, and silver, and brass, and stone, and of wood: which neither can see, nor hear, nor walk:

21 Neither repented they of their murders, [f] nor of their sorceries, nor of their fornication, nor of their thefts.

CHAPTER X.

An angel appeareth with an open book, and sweareth that there shall be no more time.

AND I saw another mighty angel come down from heaven, clothed with a cloud: [a] and a rainbow was upon his head, and [b] his face was as it were the sun, and [c] his feet as pillars of fire:

2 And he had in his hand a little book open: [d] and he set his right foot upon the sea, and his left foot on the earth,

3 And cried with a loud voice, as when a lion roareth: and when he had cried, [e] seven thunders uttered their voices.

4 And when the seven thunders had uttered their voices, I was about to write: and I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, [f] Seal up those things which the seven thunders uttered, and write them not.

5 And the angel which I saw stand upon the sea and upon the earth [g] lifted up his hand to heaven,

6 And sware by him that liveth for ever and ever, [h] who created heaven, and the things that therein are, and the earth, and the things that therein are, and the sea, and the things which are therein, [i] that there should be time no longer:

7 But [k] in the days of the voice of the seventh angel, when he shall begin to sound, the mystery of God should be finished, as he hath declared to his servants the prophets.

8 And [l] the voice which I heard from heaven spake unto me again, and said, Go and take the little book which is open in the hand of the angel which standeth upon the sea and upon the earth.

9 And I went unto the angel, and said unto him, Give me the little book. And he said unto me, [m] Take it, and eat it up: and it shall make thy belly bitter, but it shall be in thy mouth sweet as honey.

10 And I took the little book out of the angel's hand, and ate it up; [n] and it was in my mouth sweet as honey: and as soon as I had eaten it, [o] my belly was bitter.

11 And he said unto me, Thou must prophesy again before many peoples, and nations, and tongues, and kings.

CHAPTER XI.

The two witnesses prophesy: the second woe is past, and the seventh trumpet sounded.

AND there was given me [a] a reed like unto a rod: and the angel stood, saying, [b] Rise, and measure the temple of God, and the altar, and them that worship therein.

2 But [c] the court which is without the temple [2] leave out, and measure it not: [d] for it is given unto the Gentiles: and the holy city shall they [e] tread under foot [f] forty and two months.

3 And [3] I will give power unto my two [g] witnesses, [h] and they shall prophesy [i] a thousand two hundred and threescore days, clothed in sackcloth.

4 These are the [k] two olive trees, and the two candlesticks standing before the God of the earth.

5 And if any man will hurt them, [l] fire proceedeth out of their mouth, and devoureth their enemies: [m] and if any man will hurt them, he must in this manner be killed.

6 These [n] have power to shut heaven, that it rain not in the days of their prophecy: and [o] have power over waters to turn them to blood, and to smite the earth with all plagues, as often as they will.

7 And when they [p] shall have finished their testimony, [q] the beast that ascendeth [r] out of the bottomless pit [s] shall make war against them, and shall overcome them, and kill them.

8 And their dead bodies shall lie in the street of [t] the great city, which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt, [u] where also our Lord was crucified.

9 [x] And they of the people and kindreds and tongues and nations shall see their dead bodies three days and an half, [y] and shall not suffer their dead bodies to be put in graves.

10 [z] And they that dwell upon the earth shall rejoice over them, and make merry, [a] and shall send gifts one to another; [b] because these two prophets tormented them that dwelt on the earth.

11 [c] And after three days and an half [d] the Spirit of life from God entered into them, and they stood upon their feet; and great fear fell upon them which saw them.

12 And they heard a great voice from heaven saying unto them, Come up hither. [e] And they ascended up to heaven [f] in a cloud; [g] and their enemies beheld them.

13 And the same hour [h] was there a great earthquake, [i] and the tenth part of the city fell, and in the earthquake were slain [4] of men seven thousand: and the remnant were affrighted, [k] and gave glory to the God of heaven.

14 [l] The second woe is past; and, behold, the third woe cometh quickly.

15 And [m] the seventh angel sounded; [n] and there were great voices in heaven, saying, [o] The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ; [p] and he shall reign for ever and ever.

16 And [q] the four and twenty elders, which sat before God on their seats, fell upon their faces, and worshipped God,

17 Saying, We give thee thanks, O Lord God Almighty, [r] which art, and wast, and art to come; because thou hast taken to thee thy great power, [s] and hast reigned.

18 [t] And the nations were angry, and thy wrath is come, [u] and the time of the dead, that they should be judged, and that thou shouldest give reward unto thy servants the prophets, and to the saints, and them that fear thy name, [x] small and great; [y] and should-est destroy them which [2]destroy the earth.

19 And [z] the temple of God was opened in heaven, and there was seen in his temple the ark of his testament: and [a] there were lightnings, and voices, and thunderings, and an earthquake, [b] and great hail.

CHAPTER XII.

A woman clothed with the sun, before whom the great red dragon standeth.

AND there appeared a great [3]wonder in heaven; a woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars:

2 And she being with child cried, [a] travailing in birth, and pained to be delivered.

3 And there appeared another [4]wonder in heaven; and behold [b] a great red dragon, [c] having seven heads and ten horns, [d] and seven crowns upon his heads.

4 And [e] his tail drew the third part [f] of the stars of heaven, [g] and did cast them to the earth: and the dragon stood [h] before the woman which was ready to be delivered, [i] for to devour her child as soon as it was born.

5 And she brought forth a man child, [k] who was to rule all nations with a rod of iron: and her child was caught up unto God, and to his throne.

6 And [l] the woman fled into the wilderness, where she hath a place prepared of God, that they should feed her there [m] a thousand two hundred and threescore days.

7 And there was war in heaven: [n] Michael and his angels fought [o] against the dragon; and the dragon fought and his angels,

8 And prevailed not; neither was their place found any more in heaven.

9 And [p] the great dragon was cast out, [q] that old serpent, called the Devil, and Satan, [r] which deceiveth the whole world: [s] he was cast out into the earth, and his angels were cast out with him.

10 And I heard a loud voice saying in heaven, [t] Now is come salvation, and strength, and the kingdom of our God, and the power of his Christ: for the accuser of our brethren is cast down, [u] which accused them before our God day and night.

11 And [x] they overcame him by the blood of the Lamb, and by the word of their testimony; [y] and they loved not their lives unto the death.

12 Therefore [z] rejoice, ye heavens, and ye that dwell in them. [a] Woe to the inhabiters of the earth and of the sea! for the devil is come down unto you, having great wrath, [b] because he knoweth that he hath but a short time.

13 And when the dragon saw that he was cast unto the earth, he persecuted [c] the woman which brought forth the man child.

14 [d] And to the woman were given two wings of a great eagle, [e] that she might fly [f] into the wilderness, into her place, where she is nourished [g] for a time, and times, and half a time, from the face of the serpent.

15 And the serpent [h] cast out of his mouth water as a flood after the woman, that he might cause her to be carried away of the flood.

16 And the earth helped the woman, and the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed up the flood which the dragon cast out of his mouth.

17 And the dragon was wroth with the woman, [i] and went to make war with the remnant of her seed, [k] which keep the commandments of God, and have [l] the testimony of Jesus Christ.

CHAPTER XIII.

A beast riseth out of the sea, to whom the dragon giveth his power.

AND I stood upon the sand of the sea, and saw [a] a beast rise up out of the sea, [b] having seven heads and ten horns, and upon his horns ten crowns, and upon his heads the [2]name of blasphemy.

2 [c] And the beast which I saw was like unto a leopard, [d] and his feet were as the feet of a bear, [e] and his mouth as the mouth of a lion: and [f] the dragon gave him his power, [g] and his seat, [h] and great authority.

3 And I saw one of his heads [i] as it were [3]wounded to death; and his deadly wound was healed: and [k] all the world wondered after the beast.

4 And they worshipped the dragon which gave power unto the beast: and they worshipped the beast, saying, [l] Who is like unto the beast? who is able to make war with him?

5 And there was given unto him [m] a mouth speaking great things and blasphemies; and power was given unto him [2]to continue [n] forty and two months.

6 And he opened his mouth in blasphemy against God, to blaspheme his name, [o] and his tabernacle, and them that dwell in heaven.

7 And it was given unto him [p] to make war with the saints, and to overcome them: [q] and power was given him over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations.

8 And all that dwell upon the earth shall worship him, [r] whose names are not written in the book of life of the Lamb slain [s] from the foundation of the world.

9 [t] If any man have an ear, let him hear.

10 [u] He that leadeth into captivity shall go into captivity: [x] he that killeth with the sword must be killed with the sword. [y] Here is the patience and the faith of the saints.

11 And I beheld another beast [z] coming up out of the earth; and he had two horns like a lamb, and he spake as a dragon.

12 And he exerciseth all the power of the first beast before him, and causeth the earth and them which dwell therein to worship the first beast, [a] whose deadly wound was healed.

13 And [b] he doeth great wonders, [c] so that he maketh fire come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men,

14 And [d] deceiveth them that dwell on the earth [e] by the means of those miracles which he had power to do in the sight of the beast; saying to them that dwell on the earth, that they should make an image to the beast, which had the wound by a sword, [f] and did live.

15 And he had power to give [3] life unto the image of the beast, that the image of the beast should both speak, [g] and cause that as many as would not worship the image of the beast should be killed.

16 And he causeth all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, [h 4] to receive a mark in their right hand, or in their foreheads:

17 And that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or [i] the name of the beast, [k] or the number of his name.

18 [l] Here is wisdom. Let him that hath understanding count [m] the number of the beast: [n] for it is the number of a man; and his number is Six hundred threescore and six.

CHAPTER XIV.

The Lamb on mount Sion; the fall of Babylon, and the harvest of the world.

AND I looked, and, lo, [a] a Lamb stood on the mount Sion, and with him [b] an hundred forty and four thousand, [c] having his Father's name written in their foreheads.

2 And I heard a voice from heaven, [d] as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of a great thunder: and I heard the voice of [e] harpers harping with their harps:

3 And [f] they sung as it were a new song before the throne, and before the four beasts, and the elders: and no man could learn that song [g] but the hundred and forty and four thousand, which were redeemed from the earth.

4 These are they which were not defiled with women; [h] for they are virgins. These are they [i] which follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth. These [2 k] were redeemed from among men, [l] being the firstfruits unto God and to the Lamb.

5 And [m] in their mouth was found no guile: for [n] they are without fault before the throne of God.

6 And I saw another angel [o] fly in the midst of heaven, [p] having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, [q] and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people,

7 Saying with a loud voice, [r] Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come: [s] and worship him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters.

8 And there followed another angel, saying, [t] Babylon is fallen, is fallen, [u] that great city, because she made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.

9 And the third angel followed them, saying with a loud voice, [x] If any man worship the beast and his image, and receive his mark in his forehead, or in his hand,

10 The same [y] shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God, which is [z] poured out without mixture into [a] the cup of his indignation; and [b] he shall be tormented with [c] fire and brimstone in the presence of the holy angels, and in the presence of the Lamb:

11 And [d] the smoke of their torment ascendeth up for ever and ever: and they have no rest day nor night, who worship the beast and his image, and whosoever receiveth the mark of his name.

12 [e] Here is the patience of the saints: [f] here are they that keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus.

13 And I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, Write, [g] Blessed are the dead [h] which die in the Lord [3] from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, [i] that they may rest from their labours; and their works do follow them.

14 And I looked, and behold a white cloud, and upon the cloud one sat [k] like unto the Son of man, [l] having on his head a golden crown, and in his hand a sharp sickle.

15 And another angel [m] came out of the temple, crying with a loud voice to him that sat on the cloud, [n] Thrust in thy sickle, and reap: for the time is come for thee to reap; for the harvest [o] of the earth is [2] ripe.

16 And he that sat on the cloud thrust in his sickle on the earth; and the earth was reaped.

17 And another angel came out of the temple which is in heaven, he also having a sharp sickle.

18 And another angel came out from the altar, [p] which had power over fire; and cried with a loud cry to him that had the sharp sickle, saying, [q] Thrust in thy sharp sickle, and gather the clusters of the vine of the earth; for her grapes are fully ripe.

19 And the angel thrust in his sickle into the earth, and gathered the vine of the earth, and cast it into [r] the great winepress of the wrath of God.

20 And [s] the winepress was trodden [t] without the city, and blood came out of the winepress, [u] even unto the horse bridles, by the space of a thousand and six hundred furlongs.

CHAPTER XV.

The seven angels with the seven plagues; the seven vials of the wrath of God.

AND [a] I saw another sign in heaven, great and marvellous, [b] seven angels having the seven last plagues; [c] for in them is filled up the wrath of God.

2 And I saw as it were [d] a sea of glass [e] mingled with fire: and them that had gotten the victory over the beast, [f] and over his image, and over his mark, and over the number of his name, stand on the sea of glass, [g] having the harps of God.

3 And they sing [h] the song of Moses the servant of God, and the song of the Lamb, saying, [i] Great and marvellous are thy works, Lord God Almighty; [k] just and true are thy ways, thou King of [3] saints.

4 [l] Who shall not fear thee, O Lord, and glorify thy name? for thou only art holy: for [m] all nations shall come and worship before thee; for thy judgments are made manifest.

5 And after that I looked, and, behold, [n] the temple of the tabernacle of the testimony in heaven was opened:

6 [o] And the seven angels came out of the temple, having the seven plagues, [p] clothed in pure and white linen, and having their breasts girded with golden girdles.

7 [q] And one of the four beasts gave unto the seven angels seven golden vials full of the wrath of God, [r] who liveth for ever and ever.

8 And [s] the temple was filled with smoke [t] from the glory of God, and from his power; and no man was able to enter into the temple, till the seven plagues of the seven angels were fulfilled.

CHAPTER XVI.

The angels pour out their vials of wrath, and the plagues that follow.

AND I heard a great voice out of the temple saying [a] to the seven angels, Go your ways, and pour out the vials [b] of the wrath of God upon the earth.

2 And the first went, and poured out his vial [c] upon the earth; and [d] there fell a noisome and grievous sore upon the men [e] which had the mark of the beast, and upon them [f] which worshipped his image.

3 And the second angel poured out his vial [g] upon the sea; and [h] it became as the blood of a dead man: [i] and every living soul died in the sea.

4 And the third angel poured out his vial [k] upon the rivers and fountains of waters; [l] and they became blood.

5 And I heard the angel of the waters say, [m] Thou art righteous, O Lord, [n] which art, and wast, and shalt be, because thou hast judged thus.

6 For [o] they have shed the blood [p] of saints and prophets, [q] and thou hast given them blood to drink; for they are worthy.

7 And I heard another out of the altar say, Even so, [r] Lord God Almighty, [s] true and righteous are thy judgments.

8 And the fourth angel poured out his vial [t] upon the sun; [u] and power was given unto him to scorch men with fire.

9 And men were [2] scorched with great heat, and [x] blasphemed the name of God, which hath power over these plagues: [y] and they repented not [z] to give him glory.

10 And the fifth angel poured out his vial [a] upon the seat of the beast; [b] and his kingdom was full of darkness; [c] and they gnawed their tongues for pain,

11 And [d]blasphemed the God of heaven because of their pains and [e]their sores, [f]and repented not of their deeds.

12 And the sixth angel poured out his vial [g]upon the great river Euphrates: [h]and the water thereof was dried up, [i]that the way of the kings of the east might be prepared.

13 And I saw three unclean [k]spirits like frogs come out of the mouth of [l]the dragon, and out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of [m]the false prophet.

14 [n]For they are the spirits of devils, [o]working miracles, which go forth unto the kings of the earth [p]and of the whole world, to gather them to [q]the battle of that great day of God Almighty,

15 [r]Behold, I come as a thief. Blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments, [s]lest he walk naked, and they see his shame.

16 [t]And he gathered them together into a place called in the Hebrew tongue Armageddon.

17 And the seventh angel poured out his vial into the air; and there came a great voice out of the temple of heaven, from the throne, saying, [u]It is done.

18 And [x]there were voices, and thunders, and lightnings; [y]and there was a great earthquake, [z]such as was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake, and so great.

19 And [a]the great city was divided into three parts, and the cities of the nations fell: and great Babylon [b]came in remembrance before God, [c]to give unto her the cup of the wine of the fierceness of his wrath.

20 And [d]every island fled away, and the mountains were not found.

21 [e]And there fell upon men a great hail out of heaven, every stone about the weight of a talent: and [f]men blasphemed God because of [g]the plague of the hail; for the plague thereof was exceeding great.

CHAPTER XVII.

Great Babylon, the mother of all abominations; the victory of the Lamb.

AND there came [a]one of the seven angels which had the seven vials, and talked with me, saying unto me, Come hither; [b]I will shew unto thee the judgment of [c]the great whore [d]that sitteth upon many waters:

2 [e]With whom the kings of the earth have committed fornication, and [f]the inhabitants of the earth have been made drunk with the wine of her fornication.

3 So he carried me away in the spirit [g]into the wilderness: and I saw a woman sit [h]upon a scarlet coloured beast, full of [i]names of blasphemy, [k]having seven heads and [l]ten horns.

4 And the woman [m]was arrayed in purple and scarlet colour, [n]and [o]decked with gold and precious stones and pearls, [o]having a golden cup in her hand [p]full of abominations and filthiness of her fornication:

5 And upon her forehead was a name written, [q]MYSTERY, BABYLON [r]THE GREAT, [s]THE MOTHER OF [s]HARLOTS AND ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH.

6 And I saw [t]the woman drunken [u]with the blood of the saints, and with the blood of [x]the martyrs of Jesus: and when I saw her, I wondered with great admiration.

7 And the angel said unto me, Wherefore didst thou marvel? I will tell thee the mystery of the woman, and of the beast that carrieth her, which hath the seven heads and ten horns.

8 The beast that thou sawest was, and is not; and [y]shall ascend out of the bottomless pit, and [z]go into perdition: and they that dwell on the earth [a]shall wonder, [b]whose names were not written in the book of life from the foundation of the world, when they behold the beast that was, and is not, and yet is.

9 And [c]here is the mind which hath wisdom. [d]The seven heads are seven mountains, on which the woman sitteth.

10 And there are seven kings: five are fallen, and one is, and the other is not yet come; and when he cometh, he must continue a short space.

11 And the beast that was, and is not, even he is the eighth, and is of the seven, [e]and goeth into perdition.

12 And [f]the ten horns which thou sawest are ten kings, which have received no kingdom as yet; but receive power as kings one hour with the beast.

13 These have one mind, and shall give their power and strength unto the beast.

14 [g]These shall make war with the Lamb, and the Lamb shall overcome them: [h]for he is Lord of lords, and King of kings: [i]and they that are with him are called, and chosen, and faithful.

15 And he saith unto me, [k]The waters which thou sawest, where the whore sitteth, [l] are peoples, and multitudes, and nations, and tongues.

16 And the ten horns which thou sawest upon the beast, [m] these shall hate the whore, and shall make her desolate [n] and naked, and shall eat her flesh, and [o] burn her with fire.

17 [p] For God hath put in their hearts to fulfil his will, and to agree, and give their kingdom unto the beast, [q] until the words of God shall be fulfilled.

18 And the woman which thou sawest [r] is that great city, [s] which reigneth over the kings of the earth.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Babylon is fallen, and the people of God commanded to depart out of her.

AND [a] after these things I saw another angel come down from heaven, having great power; [b] and the earth was lightened with his glory.

2 And he cried mightily with a strong voice, saying, [c] Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen, and [d] is become the habitation of devils, and the hold of every foul spirit, and [e] a cage of every unclean and hateful bird.

3 For all nations [f] have drunk of the wine of the wrath of her fornication, and the kings of the earth have committed fornication with her, [g] and the merchants of the earth are waxed rich through the [2] abundance of her delicacies.

4 And I heard another voice from heaven, saying, [h] Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues.

5 [i] For her sins have reached unto heaven, and [k] God hath remembered her iniquities.

6 [l] Reward her even as she rewarded you, and double unto her double according to her works: [m] in the cup which she hath filled [n] fill to her double.

7 [o] How much she hath glorified herself, and lived deliciously, so much torment and sorrow give her: for she saith in her heart, I sit a [p] queen, and am no widow, and shall see no sorrow.

8 Therefore shall her plagues come [q] in one day, death, and mourning, and famine; and [r] she shall be utterly burned with fire: [s] for strong is the Lord God who judgeth her.

9 And [t] the kings of the earth, who have committed fornication and lived deliciously with her, [u] shall bewail her, and lament for her, [x] when they shall see the smoke of her burning,

10 Standing afar off for the fear of her torment, saying, [y] Alas, alas that great city Babylon, that mighty city! [z] for in one hour is thy judgment come.

11 And [a] the merchants of the earth shall weep and mourn over her; for no man buyeth their merchandise any more:

12 [b] The merchandise of gold, and silver, and precious stones, and of pearls, and fine linen, and purple, and silk, and scarlet, and all [3] thyine wood, and all manner vessels of ivory, and all manner vessels of most precious wood, and of brass, and iron, and marble,

13 And cinnamon, and odours, and ointments, and frankincense, and wine, and oil, and fine flour, and wheat, and beasts, and sheep, and horses, and chariots, and [4] slaves, and [c] souls of men.

14 And the fruits that thy soul lusted after are departed from thee, and all things which were dainty and goodly are departed from thee, and thou shalt find them no more at all.

15 [d] The merchants of these things, which were made rich by her, shall stand afar off for the fear of her torment, weeping and wailing,

16 And saying, Alas, alas that great city, [e] that was clothed in fine linen, and purple, and scarlet, and decked with gold, and precious stones, and pearls!

17 [f] For in one hour so great riches is come to nought. And [g] every shipmaster, and all the company in ships, and sailors, and as many as trade by sea, stood afar off, 18 [h] And cried when they saw the smoke of her burning, saying, [i] What city is like unto this great city!

19 And [k] they cast dust on their heads, and cried, weeping and wailing, saying, Alas, alas that great city, wherein were made rich all that had ships in the sea by reason of her costliness! [l] for in one hour is she made desolate.

20 [m] Rejoice over her, thou heaven, and ye holy apostles and prophets; for [n] God hath avenged you on her.

21 And a mighty angel took up a stone like a great millstone, and cast it into the sea, saying, [o] Thus with violence shall that great city Babylon be thrown down, and [p] shall be found no more at all.

22 [q] And the voice of harpers, and musicians, and of pipers, and trumpeters, shall be heard no more at all in thee; and no craftsman, of whatsoever craft he be, shall be found any more in thee; and the sound of a millstone shall be heard no more at all in thee;

23 [r] And the light of a candle shall shine no more at all in thee; [s] and the voice of the bridegroom and of the bride shall be heard no more at all in thee: for [t] thy merchants were the great men of the earth; [u] for by thy sorceries were all nations deceived.

24 And [x] in her was found the blood of prophets, and of saints, and of all that [y] were slain upon the earth.

CHAPTER XIX.

God praised for avenging the blood of his saints: marriage of the Lamb.

AND after these things [a] I heard a great voice of much people in heaven, saying, Alleluia; [b] Salvation, and glory, and honour, and power, unto the Lord our God:

2 For [c] true and righteous are his judgments: for he hath judged the great whore, which did corrupt the earth with her fornication, and [d] hath avenged the blood of his servants at her hand.

3 And again they said, Alleluia. And [e] her smoke rose up for ever and ever.

4 And [f] the four and twenty elders and the four beasts fell down and worshipped God that sat on the throne, saying, [g] Amen; Alleluia.

5 And a voice came out of the throne, saying, [h] Praise our God, all ye his servants, and ye that fear him, [i] both small and great.

6 [k] And I heard as it were the voice of a great multitude, and as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of mighty thunderings, saying, Alleluia: for [l] the Lord God omnipotent reigneth.

7 Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honour to him: for [m] the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready.

8 And [n] to her was granted that she should be arrayed in fine linen, clean and [2] white: [o] for the fine linen is the righteousness of saints.

9 And he saith unto me, Write, [p] Blessed are they which are called unto the marriage supper of the Lamb. And he saith unto me, [q] These are the true sayings of God.

10 And [r] I fell at his feet to worship him. And he said unto me, [s] See thou do it not: I am thy fellowservant, and of thy brethren [t] that have the testimony of Jesus: worship God: for the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy.

11 [u] And I saw heaven opened, and behold [x] a white horse; and he that sat upon him was called [y] Faithful and True, and [z] in righteousness he doth judge and make war.

12 [a] His eyes were as a flame of fire, [b] and on his head were many crowns; [c] and he had a name written, that no man knew, but he himself.

13 [d] And he was clothed with a vesture dipped in blood: and his name is called [e] The Word of God.

14 [f] And the armies which were in heaven followed him upon white horses, [g] clothed in fine linen, white and clean.

15 And [h] out of his mouth goeth a sharp sword, that with it he should smite the nations: and [i] he shall rule them with a rod of iron: and [k] he treadeth the winepress of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God.

16 And [l] he hath on his vesture and on his thigh a name written, [m] KING OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS.

17 And I saw an angel standing in the sun: and he cried with a loud voice, saying [n] to all the fowls that fly in the midst of heaven, [o] Come and gather yourselves together unto the supper of the great God;

18 [p] That ye may eat the flesh of kings, and the flesh of captains, and the flesh of mighty men, and the flesh of horses, and of them that sit on them, and the flesh of all men, both free and bond, both small and great.

19 [q] And I saw the beast, and the kings of the earth, and their armies, gathered together to make war against him that sat on the horse, and against his army.

20 [r] And the beast was taken, and with him the false prophet that wrought miracles before him, with which he deceived them that had received the mark of the beast, and [s] them that worshipped his image. [t] These both were cast alive into a lake of fire [u] burning with brimstone.

21 And the remnant [x] were slain with the sword of him that sat upon the horse, which sword proceeded out of his mouth: [y] and all the fowls [z] were filled with their flesh.

CHAPTER XX.

Satan bound for a thousand years; those blessed who have part in the first resurrection.

AND I saw an angel come down from heaven, [a] having the key of the bottomless pit and a great chain in his hand.

2 And he laid hold on [b] the dragon, that old serpent, which is the Devil, and Satan, and bound him a thousand years,

3 And cast him into the bottomless pit, and shut him up, and [c] set a seal upon him, [d] that he should deceive the nations no more, till the thousand years should be fulfilled: and after that he must be loosed a little season.

4 And I saw [e] thrones, and they sat upon them, and [f] judgment was given unto them: and I saw [g] the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, and [h] which had not worshipped the beast, [i] neither his image, neither had received his mark upon their foreheads, or in their hands; and they lived and [k] reigned with Christ a thousand years.

5 But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection.

6 Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such [l] the second death hath no power, but they shall be [m] priests of God and of Christ, [n] and shall reign with him a thousand years.

7 And when the thousand years are expired, [o] Satan shall be loosed out of his prison,

8 And shall go out [p] to deceive the nations which are in the four quarters of the earth, [q] Gog and Magog, [r] to gather them together to battle: the number of whom is as the sand of the sea.

9 [s] And they went up on the breadth of the earth, and compassed the camp of the saints about, and the beloved city: and fire came down from God out of heaven, and devoured them.

10 [t] And the devil that deceived them was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, [u] where the beast and the false prophet are, and [x] shall be tormented day and night for ever and ever.

11 And I saw a great white throne, and him that sat on it, from whose face [y] the earth and the heaven fled away; [z] and there was found no place for them.

12 And I saw the dead, [a] small and great, stand before God; [b] and the books were opened: and another [c] book was opened, which is the book of life: and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, [d] according to their works.

13 And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; [e] and death and [2] hell delivered up the dead which were in them: [f] and they were judged every man according to their works.

14 And [g] death and hell were cast into the lake of fire. [h] This is the second death.

15 And whosoever was not found written in the book of life [i] was cast into the lake of fire.

CHAPTER XXI.

A new heaven and a new earth; the heavenly Jerusalem, with a description thereof.

AND [a] I saw a new heaven and a new earth: [b] for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea.

2 And I John saw [c] the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared [d] as a bride adorned for her husband.

3 And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold, [e] the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God.

4 [f] And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and [g] there shall be no more death, [h] neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away.

5 And [i] he that sat upon the throne said, [k] Behold, I make all things new. And he said unto me, Write: for [l] these words are true and faithful.

6 And he said unto me, [m] It is done. [n] I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end. [o] I will give unto him that is athirst of the fountain of the water of life freely.

7 He that overcometh shall inherit [3] all things; and [p] I will be his God, and he shall be my son.

8 [q] But the fearful, and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars, shall have their part in [r] the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone: which is the second death.

9 And there came unto me one of [s] the seven angels which had the seven vials full of the seven last plagues, and talked with me, saying, Come hither, I will shew thee [t] the bride, the Lamb's wife.

10 And he carried me away [u] in the spirit to a great and high mountain, and shewed me [x] that great city, the holy Jerusalem, descending out of heaven from God,

11 y Having the glory of God: and her light was like unto a stone most precious, even like a jasper stone, clear as crystal;

12 And had a wall great and high, and had z twelve gates, and at the gates twelve angels, and names written thereon, which are the names of the twelve tribes of the children of Israel:

13 a On the east three gates; on the north three gates; on the south three gates; and on the west three gates.

14 And the wall of the city had twelve foundations, and b in them the names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb.

15 And he that talked with me c had a golden reed to measure the city, and the gates thereof, and the wall thereof.

16 And the city lieth foursquare, and the length is as large as the breadth: and he measured the city with the reed, twelve thousand furlongs. The length and the breadth and the height of it are equal.

17 And he measured the wall thereof, an hundred and forty and four cubits, according to the measure of a man, that is, of the angel.

18 And the building of the wall of it was of jasper: and the city was pure gold, like unto clear glass.

19 d And the foundations of the wall of the city were garnished with all manner of precious stones. The first foundation was jasper; the second, sapphire; the third, a chalcedony; the fourth, an emerald;

20 The fifth, sardonyx; the sixth, sardius; the seventh, chrysolyte; the eighth, beryl; the ninth, a topaz; the tenth, a chrysoprasus; the eleventh, a jacinth; the twelfth, an amethyst.

21 And the twelve gates were twelve pearls; every several gate was of one pearl: e and the street of the city was pure gold, as it were transparent glass.

22 f And I saw no temple therein: for the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are the temple of it.

23 g And the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon, to shine in it: for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof.

24 h And the nations of them which are saved shall walk in the light of it: and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honour into it.

25 i And the gates of it shall not be shut at all by day: for k there shall be no night there.

26 l And they shall bring the glory and honour of the nations into it.

27 And m there shall in no wise enter into it any thing that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie: but they which are written in the Lamb's n book of life.

CHAPTER XXII.

The river of the water of life; nothing may be added to or taken from the word of God.

AND he shewed me a a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb.

2 b In the midst of the street of it, and on either side of the river, was there c the tree of life, which bare twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month: and the leaves of the tree were d for the healing of the nations.

3 And e there shall be no more curse: f but the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it; and his servants shall serve him:

4 And g they shall see his face; and h his name shall be in their foreheads.

5 i And there shall be no night there; and they need no candle, neither light of the sun; for k the Lord God giveth them light: l and they shall reign for ever and ever.

6 And he said unto me, m These sayings are faithful and true: and the Lord God of the holy prophets n sent his angel to shew unto his servants the things which must shortly be done.

7 o Behold, I come quickly: p blessed is he that keepeth the sayings of the prophecy of this book.

8 And I John saw these things, and heard them. And when I had heard and seen, q I fell down to worship before the feet of the angel which shewed me these things.

9 Then saith he unto me, r See thou do it not: for I am thy fellowservant, and of thy brethren the prophets, and of them which keep the sayings of this book: worship God.

10 s And he saith unto me, Seal not the sayings of the prophecy of this book: t for the time is at hand.

11 u He that is unjust, let him be unjust still: and he which is filthy, let him be filthy still: and he that is righteous, let him be righteous still: and he that is holy, let him be holy still.

12 x And, behold, I come quickly; and y my reward is with me, z to give every man according as his work shall be.

13 [a] I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last.

14 [b] Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right [c] to the tree of life, [d] and may enter in through the gates into the city.

15 For [e] without are [f] dogs, and sorcerers, and whoremongers, and murderers, and idolaters, and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie.

16 [g] I Jesus have sent mine angel to testify unto you these things in the churches. [h] I am the root and the offspring of David, and [i] the bright and morning star.

17 And the Spirit and [k] the bride say, Come. And let him that heareth say, Come. [l] And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely.

18 For I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, [m] If any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book:

19 And if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, [n] God shall take away his part [2] out of the book of life, and out of [o] the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book.

20 He which testifieth these things saith, [p] Surely I come quickly. [q] Amen. [r] Even so, come, Lord Jesus.

21 [s] The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.

The Bible.

I. THE TITLE OF THE BIBLE.

THE TITLE of the Bible is of medieval origin. It is not found in Anglo-Saxon, though GOSPEL (God-spell or good-spell, i.e. story of God or good story) has come to us from that tongue. It is derived through the Norman French from the Latin Biblia, which was treated in the Middle Ages as a feminine singular noun, though it was a mere transliteration of the Greek neuter plural βιβλία. That Greek Christians should call the books which were read in their churches τὰ βιβλία (THE BOOKS) was natural enough: but this usage has not been traced higher than the fourth century, when it is found in Chrysostom. In the Gospels, and Acts, and Epistles, the books which were read in the Jewish synagogues are often entitled "The Scriptures." Sometimes (e.g. 1 Cor. xiv. 21) "The Law" seems to be used as a name which comprehends them all. Paul, in a notable passage, calls the books of Moses, if not the whole of the Hebrew Canon, "The Old Covenant" (ἐπὶ τῇ ἀναγνώσει τῆς παλαιᾶς διαθήκης, 2 Cor. iii. 14). In the same context he describes himself and his fellow-labourers as "ministers of a New Covenant." These terms (ἡ παλαιὰ διαθήκη and ἡ καινὴ διαθήκη) were employed afterwards by ecclesiastical writers to denote the Jewish and Christian Scriptures respectively. The Latin rendering of διαθήκη fluctuated at first between instrumentum and testamentum; but testamentum prevailed. Hence in the languages of the West the two collections of writings which make up the Bible came to be called "The Old Testament" and "The New Testament."

II. THE CANON OF SCRIPTURE.

Canon (Greek, a straight rod), used figuratively of a testing rule in art, logic, grammar, or ethics, occurs in the sense of a "rule of life" in Gal. vi. 16. In the early ages of Christianity, the term was used generally to denote a standard of opinion and practice. Its first direct application to the Holy Scriptures occurs in the "imprimatur" appended by Amphilochius to his Catalogue (A.D. 380); though Origen seems to have termed those books Canonical which Christians regard as genuine and of Divine authority. Uncanonical books are those not specified in the Canon. Apocryphal books are those of uncertain authority; they are found in MSS. as well as in printed Bibles in company with the Canonical books, and are read for historical purposes, and for "instruction of manners." External and internal evidence alike is against their inspiration and Divine authority, and they are no part of the rule of faith. The Bible is the Canon, or authoritative standard, of religion and morals.

THE JEWISH CANON. Before the Captivity there are only faint traces of the mode of preserving the sacred writings. Moses ordered "The Book of the Law" to be put "in the side of the ark" (Deut. xxxi. 26; cp. 2 Kings xxii. 8). To this was subsequently added that of Joshua, and other Annals; and later, Proverbs, and some Prophecies, for Daniel refers to the "Books" (ix. 2), Zechariah to "the Law and former Prophets" (vii. 12), and Isaiah to "the Book of the Lord" (xxix. 18; xxxiv. 16). Ezra and the "Great Synagogue" most probably determined the Canon of the Law in its final shape; and Nehemiah "gathered together the acts of the kings and the prophets, and those of David," when "founding a library" for the second Temple (2 Macc. ii. 13), c. 432 B.C. The first notice of the Old Testament as a collection of writings is in the Prologue to the Greek translation of Ecclesiasticus (B.C. 131), which specifies the "Law and the Prophets, and the rest of the books." (Cp. Luke xxiv. 44.) Philo Judæus (B.C. 20—A.D. 40) refers to constant use of "the laws and oracles produced by the prophets, and hymns and other" (writings). Josephus (A.D. 38 — c. 100) enumerates twenty-two books as "divine," viz. five of Moses, thirteen of Prophets (in which Job was probably included), and four of "hymns and directions of life." He mentions all the books of the Old Testament as Canonical, except Job, Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, and the Song of Solomon, to which he does not allude, as none of them furnished any materials for his work. He also adds, that, since the death of Artaxerxes (B.C. 424), "no one had dared, up to his day, to add anything to them, to take anything from them, or to make any change in them" (Against Apion, I. 8). Thus, the Jewish Canon was finally settled in the time of Ezra and Nehemiah, and its contents were identical with our own, our thirty-nine books being grouped so as to accord with the twenty-two letters of the Hebrew alphabet (the twelve minor prophets counting as one, Ruth being coupled with Judges, Ezra with Nehemiah, Lamentations with Jeremiah, while the two Books of Samuel, Kings, and Chronicles were reckoned as one each). That these did not constitute the entire Hebrew sacred literature is evident from the fact that reference is made in the Old Testament to fifteen other books, while others again are mentioned in the Apocrypha which were rejected from the Jewish Canon. The whole of the books included in the Jewish Canon are quoted in the New Testament as "Scripture," except Judges, Ecclesiastes, the Song of Solomon, Esther, Ezra, and Nehemiah; but, in addition, the "Book of Enoch" is quoted by Jude (verse 14). Our Lord also quotes from an unknown book (Luke xi. 49—51; John vii. 38), and so, too, James (iv. 5, 6). Jerome notices that the twenty-two books coincide with the letters in the Hebrew alphabet, and that the five double letters coincide with the five double books (Samuel, Kings, Chronicles, Ezra, and Jeremiah). He gives the contents of the Law, Prophets, and Hagiographa in exact accordance with the Hebrew authorities, as mentioned above, classing Daniel with the last. The Talmud also agrees in the same list, and gives the writers of the several books.

THE CHRISTIAN CANON. The Books of the Jewish Canon were read from the first in Christian assemblies, as of Divine authority (Lardner, ii. 132, 526), and were largely quoted by ecclesiastical authors. Melito and Origen deemed it important to enumerate them carefully. Together with the writings of the Apostles and the Evangelists they formed the Christian Canon.

III. VERSIONS OF THE SCRIPTURES*.

GREEK VERSIONS. 1. Of these the Septuagint occupies the highest rank. According to tradition, it was translated from the Hebrew by seventy-two Jews, each of whom, in a separate cell, made a complete translation of the entire Old Testament, and, when compared, these seventy-two copies were found to be so completely identical that they were deemed to be inspired. Jerome disbelieved this story; and the inequality of the rendering of different portions seems to afford convincing proof that they were the work of different persons and of different times. More probably it was begun in the time of Ptolemy Lagi, and finished in that of his successor Ptolemy Philadelphus (B.C. 285). It seems to have been the only Scripture with which the Alexandrian Jews and the early Christian writers were familiar. It is not accurately translated from the Hebrew, the text showing many important variations, both in words and phrases, as well as some additions to the original; and it contains many Coptic words. In this version, the Pentateuch possesses the highest literary merit, the Book of Proverbs ranks next, and Ecclesiastes occupies a very low place; the Prophets, Psalms, and other books are poor productions, while the Book of Daniel was so incorrect as to be disused by the early Christian Church.

2. Aquila, at the instigation of the Alexandrian Jews, sought in the second century A.D. to correct the inaccuracy of the LXX. by a new translation, which was so literal as to be sometimes unintelligible: it was highly esteemed by the Jews, and is quoted in the Talmud; but it is discredited by early Christian writers.

3. Theodotion, about the same time, revised the LXX., merely correcting its inaccuracies, and his translation of Daniel superseded that of the LXX.

4. Symmachus (c. A.D. 200) gives his name to a new translation, which is paraphrastic, like the LXX., but displays more purity and elegance of language. It proceeded from the Ebionites, a sect of Christian heretics, who did not admit the divinity of Christ.

Three later versions (quoted in Origen's Hexapla) were anonymous: only fragments of them are preserved.

SYRIAC. The Peshito version has been attributed to the second or even to the first century after Christ, and a Syriac version certainly existed very early. It contains all the Canonical Books of the Old Testament, as well as those of the New (except the latest, viz. the 2nd and 3rd Epistles of John, 2 Peter, the Epistle of Jude, and the Revelation). The Old Testament is translated from the Hebrew. This version has always been accepted by all sections of the Syrian Church as authentic, and from it several Arabic translations have been made.

LATIN VERSIONS. Fragments of an ancient Latin Version of the African Church, translated from the LXX., of about the second century A.D., are found in ancient Christian writers. This was superseded in Italy by the Itala, and this in turn by the Vulgate (i.e. the current text). Jerome (A.D. 383) revised the current Latin version of the New Testament. He also translated the Old Testament into Latin from the Hebrew. For this work he took up his residence at Bethlehem, and was occupied upon it for twenty-one years. Although at first the reverence for the LXX. militated against its reception, from the time of Gregory the Great it became the authorised version of the Western Church. This translation, however, was gradually corrupted by intermixture with other Latin versions. The discordance of the copies in use was noticed by the Council of Trent in one of its decrees, and Sixtus V gave to the world a revised text in 1590 A.D. Three years later the present standard edition was issued by Clement VIII.

Besides the Syriac and the Latin, there are many other versions, made at different times, and in countries widely separated one from another. These are for the most part independent testimonies, and not mere copies of some one common original, as their verbal differences sufficiently attest; but their complete agreement in all essential points demonstrates the care with which the sacred books have been preserved, while it establishes their integrity more satisfactorily than that of any other ancient book is established.

ENGLISH VERSIONS. Translations of the Psalter and of some other parts of the Bible were made in the thirteenth century or earlier.

1380. Wycliffe translated the New Testament from the Latin Vulgate. His followers added the Old Testament. (The whole work was edited by Forshall and Madden for the Clarendon Press in 1850.)

1525. Tyndale's New Testament was printed at Cologne. Many copies of it were publicly burnt by order of the Bishop of London.

1535. Miles Coverdale translated the whole Bible from the Latin Vulgate and the German, probably under the patronage of Thomas Cromwell. This was the first version of the whole Bible published in English. It was probably printed at Zürich.

1537. Matthew's Bible. A fusion of the two translations of Tyndale and Coverdale by John Rogers. This was begun abroad, but the printing was eventually undertaken by Grafton and Whitchurch of London. It was published with the King's licence, and was the first "Authorised Version."

1539. Taverner's, an expurgated edition of Matthew's Bible, edited by Taverner at the instigation of the ecclesiastical authorities.

1539. Cranmer's, or The Great Bible. A new edition of Matthew's Bible, revised, and compared with the Hebrew, by Coverdale and others, and published in England under the sanction of Cranmer.

1560. The Geneva Bible. Published by the refugee reformers at Geneva, and for half-a-century the most popular of all English versions.

1568. The Bishops' Bible. A revision of the Great Bible made at the suggestion of Archbishop Parker by fifteen theologians, eight of whom were Bishops. A second edition appeared in 1572.

1582. The Rheims Version of the New Testament. This translation was made from the Vulgate. A companion translation of the Old Testament was published at Douai in 1609–1610.

1611. The Authorised Version, translated from the Hebrew and Greek (by order of James I) by forty-seven divines, each taking a portion, which was revised by the whole body. This, from its great excellence, gradually superseded all preceding versions.

1885. The Holy Bible, being the Version set forth A.D. 1611 compared with the most ancient authorities and revised. Printed for the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge.

The Old Testament.

IV. GENUINENESS AND INTEGRITY OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.

In writings which claim to command belief from the world in all ages the following credentials are requisite:—1. Genuineness, i.e. that they are the works of the persons whose names they bear. 2. Integrity, i.e. that they are the unaltered writings of those authors.

ITS GENUINENESS. External Evidence. The Jews, to whom these books were entrusted, have been in all ages unanimous in their testimony that the Pentateuch was written by Moses; the Psalms by David, and those whose names are affixed to them; the Proverbs by Solomon; and that others were the work of those whose names they bear; and, with equal unanimity, testify to the authority of those books whose writers' names are lost. They are accredited by successive generations, till we come to the mention of them in the "Prologue" to Ecclesiasticus, the treatise of Josephus against Apion, and the writings of the New Testament. They are also frequently quoted by one another as authoritative and genuine; and the Pentateuch, Psalms, and Prophets, as well as the historical books, are so quoted by our Lord Himself. They were all admitted to be genuine by successive councils of the Christian Church.

INTERNAL EVIDENCE. (1) The Nationality of the writers. They all (with the possible exceptions of the authors of Job and Esther) profess to be Jews of Palestine, a people peculiarly separated from the rest of mankind by religion, by unique customs, and by physical position. These peculiarities are implicitly maintained throughout the whole books, which show no evidence of contact with the literature of any other countries except those in which the writers profess to have been in temporary exile.

(2) The Language, except in Daniel and Ezra, is uniformly Hebrew, which ceased to be a living speech soon after the Babylonish Captivity. Some parts of Daniel and also of Ezra are written in Hebrew, others in a form of Aramaic which is transitional, and presents various points of difference from the later Chaldee. This curious phenomenon finds its explanation in the residence of Daniel and Ezra at Babylon, and their relation to Babylonian and Persian rulers who successively held sway over that city and the surrounding countries.

(3) Circumstantiality. The records contain histories, frequent genealogies, and biographies, all of which are capable of more or less verification from other records, but no material discrepancy has been proved.

(4) The undesigned Coincidences (see Blunt's work on this subject) are numerous and deserve attention. Then, again, the physical allusions are exclusively applicable to Palestine, whose geographical and geological conformation is unparalleled; while the flora and fauna, as gathered from the work itself, have been proved by modern explorers to correspond exactly with the phenomena of that country (see Table of "TREES, PLANTS, &c.," pp. 88 foll.).

ITS INTEGRITY. The scrupulous care taken by Ezra, and those who followed him, to preserve the text of the Old Testament, after its Canon was completed, is sufficiently evident from the zealous accuracy with which the discrepancies in the text of various copies have been preserved. This is perhaps most conspicuous in certain Psalms, of which two distinct MSS. are extant, containing in some instances as many as sixty variations in the text of the two copies. The ancient Hebrew, in which it was written, was, after the Captivity, superseded by the Aramaic (a mixture of Chaldee with Hebrew). For a time the former was retained as the sacred, while the latter was the vernacular, language; but, before the Christian era, almost all the Scriptures were translated into Aramaic. In the time of Ezra, it is evident that an Aramaic version followed the reading of the Hebrew original in the synagogues (Neh. viii. 8). These Aramaic interpretations, called "Targums," are valuable, as affording proofs of the correct readings of ancient MSS. of the Old Testament, and also of the precise meaning of obscure words.

Of these Targums ten have come down to us, giving between them a complete interpretation of the whole of the books, except Ezra and Nehemiah. The Targum to Daniel is not fully known. The earliest are those of Jonathan (on the Prophets) and Onkelos (on the Pentateuch): the former is a paraphrase, the latter a literal translation, word for word, from the Hebrew; the former was written shortly before the Christian era, while Onkelos was contemporary with Christ, and a pupil of Gamaliel.

The Hebrew MSS. consist of the Synagogue Rolls, and copies for private reading. The former are the more important, and were written, as Josephus tells us, on fine skins (some of which, found in the Crimea, and therefore possibly belonging to the Jews of the Dispersion, are still preserved in the Imperial Library at St. Petersburg). The care with which they were transcribed is evident from the rules laid down in the Talmud. One scribe copied the consonants, another inserted the vowel points and accents in a fainter ink, a third revised the copy, and a fourth wrote in the Masorah. These rolls consisted of, (1) the Pentateuch (or Law); (2) Megilloth ("rolls"); and (3) the Haphtaroth ("dismissals"). It is from these and the Greek translations, made by the Alexandrian Jews, compared together, that a correct copy of the Scriptures must be derived; and the English Authorised Version was formed from the best recensions known at the time of its preparation.

Although the "various readings" in the MSS and printed editions of the Hebrew Bible are very numerous, being estimated at 30,000, and even by some scholars at 200,000, these are very unimportant. The Hebrew Bible of the present day is substantially the same as the recension made by Ezra and others, which was the "Textus Receptus" of our Lord's time. In it, however, the old phraseology has been occasionally modernised, obscure expressions explained by glosses, and the chronologies and genealogies have suffered, especially through the errors of transcribers. Thus there are many alterations in the language, yet none in the meaning, of the original writers. We have no autographs and no perfect MSS. of either Hebrew or Greek Scriptures, neither have we of any Greek or Latin classic author; on the contrary, there is no ancient book (sacred or secular) of which the text is not more or less imperfect. In this respect the Hebrew Scriptures stand in the same position as all other writings of antiquity. Dr. Bentley states the case truly:—"It is a fact undeniable, that the sacred books have suffered no more alterations than common or classic authors, and have no more variations than what must necessarily have happened from the nature of things; and it has been the common sense of men of letters, that numbers of MSS. do not make a text precarious, but are useful, nay necessary, to its establishment and certainty."

The Talmudists undertook a highly critical collation of many different texts, which, however they interpreted by a great mass of traditional commentary; but they collected together all that was known and approved of (both written and oral) respecting the sacred books, rejecting what was not supported by a considerable weight of testimony. In the sixth century A.D., a school of Jewish Doctors at Tiberias, known as the "Masoretes," extracted from the Talmud the traditional comments (Masorah) of criticism and grammatical emendations, in order to establish the genuine text of the Hebrew Scriptures. The text, as so fixed by them, became the standard, from which others were multiplied. In the eleventh century a collation was made of the Masoretic text of Tiberias, known as the Palestine Codex, with the Babylonian text, and between the two there were found to be eight hundred differences of reading, none of them, however, in any way affecting the sense of the subject-matter.

The Samaritan Pentateuch must belong to a date earlier than the Captivity of Judah, as the Samaritans had no intercourse with the Jews subsequently: it is highly probable that it was prior to the separation of the two kingdoms. A careful comparison, in modern times, of its text with that of the Hebrew ("Textus Receptus"), has shown that they agree in every material point, the differences being merely verbal.

V. SUMMARY OF THE BOOKS OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.

DIVISION OF THE OLD TESTAMENT. The Hebrews divided their sacred books into three parts:—

1. "THE LAW" (Torah), comprising the five books of Moses.
2. "THE PROPHETS" (Nebiim) comprising the books of Joshua, Judges, 1 and 2 Samuel, 1 and 2 Kings, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and the twelve Minor Prophets.
3. "THE SCRIPTURES" (Kethubim). Under this title were placed:
   (1) Psalms, Proverbs, Job.
   (2) Song of Solomon, Ruth, Lamentations, Ecclesiastes, Esther.
   (3) Daniel, Ezra, Nehemiah, 1 and 2 Chronicles.

1. THE LAW. The "Book of the Law" is mentioned in Deut. xxxi. 24, 26; Josh. i. 8; viii. 34; xxiv. 26. The distinctness of the five portions shows that they were designed to be separate, and so distinct names were found for each. The Hebrews used for this purpose the chief word in the first verse of each. In the LXX. they are denoted by titles indicating the subject-matter, which are still in use in the Christian Church, e.g. Genesis, Exodus, &c.

2. THE PROPHETS. This general appellation was given to these twenty-one books, because they were written by Prophets, who, as the Teachers of the people, were naturally the annalists also: e.g. Samuel, Nathan, Gad, Iddo, Isaiah, Jeremiah, &c. We read of them sometimes as living in communities. They seem to have cultivated literature, music, psalmody, &c.; and their writings, whether devotional or historical, were regarded as more or less prophetic (which means instructive, as well as predictive, cp. Acts xiii. 1; 1 Cor. xiii. 2, 8). They were divided into PRIORES (Joshua, Judges, 1 and 2 Samuel, 1 and 2 Kings) and POSTERIORES: these last being subdivided into Majores and Minores. The former designation was given to the writings of Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Ezekiel, because of their greater bulk, as well as prophetical pre-eminence; the latter to the remaining twelve prophetical books. The book of Daniel was excluded, partly on account of its author having exercised no prophetic office among "the people," partly because of its late reception into the sacred Canon; and also, in later times, because it was quoted by Christians against the Jews.

3. THE SCRIPTURES include the remaining books of the Hebrew Canon. The first group (1) consisted of the devotional books used in the services of the synagogue (the Psalms and Proverbs weekly, Job on most of the great fasts). The second (2), called the "Five Rolls," supplied for the most part the Lessons used on special festivals; the third (3) was a sort of Appendix, in which were placed those Canonical books which were not ranked among "The Prophets."

DIVISIONS OF THE BOOKS. The quotations made in the New Testament from the Old cite only the book (Acts ii. 16) from whence they are taken (except in the case of the Psalms, Acts xiii. 33, 35). They are mostly from the books read in the synagogue every Sabbath-day, and there are indications of a division into sections (Luke iv. 17; Acts xiii. 15, 33, 35; xv. 21; 2 Cor. iii. 14).

The Talmud divided "The Law" into fifty-four portions, one for each sabbath of the intercalary year. These were called Parshioth, which were subdivided into lesser Parshioth, being the sections of the Lesson taken by each individual Reader. These, again, were classed under two heads, viz. "Open" (Petuchoth), which marked a change of subject, like the modern paragraph, and began with a fresh line in the MSS.; and "Shut" (Satumoth), corresponding to minor divisions, like sentences, marked only by a space in the line. These breaks in the text were denoted by the initials "P" or "S" in the margin, to catch the reader's eye; which would seem to be the origin of the ¶ placed before certain verses in the Authorised Version.

"The Prophets" also were subdivided into Sabbath Lessons, though not with the same precision or authority. These portions were called Haphtaroth ("dismissals"), because they were read immediately before the close of the service. These were in the ninth century A.D. subdivided by the Masoretes into Verses (Pesukim), the termination of each in the Hebrew MSS. being marked by a colon (:), which is retained in the Prayer-book version of the Psalms to point them for chanting. In the thirteenth century a more systematic division into Capitula or Chapters, ascribed to Stephen Langton, or Hugh de S. Cher, was generally adopted in the Latin Vulgate to facilitate reference to the text. In the sixteenth century the Masoretic division into Verses was combined with this division into Chapters, and passed from the Latin Vulgate into the English translation published at Geneva in 1560.

In our Old Testament the books are conveniently arranged according to their subject-matter, thus: 1. The PENTATEUCH (or Five Books of Moses). 2. The HISTORICAL BOOKS (from Joshua to the end of Esther). 3. The POETICAL or DEVOTIONAL BOOKS (from Job to the Song of Solomon). 4. The PROPHETICAL BOOKS (from Isaiah to Malachi).

1.—THE PENTATEUCH, or five-volume book, is ascribed to Moses by all tradition, Jewish and heathen: and is in other parts of the Old Testament quoted as such, and also by our Lord and His Apostles (Matt. xix. 8; John vii. 19; Acts iii. 22).

In the Old Testament history, whenever mentioned, it is treated as one book, and as an original book of Moses, under the various titles,—"The Law of Moses" (Ezra vii. 6), "The Book of the Law of Moses" (Neh. viii. 1), "The Book of Moses" (Ezra vi. 18), "The Book of the Law of Jehovah by the hand of Moses" (2 Chron. xxxiv. 14), "The Book of the Covenant" (2 Chron. xxxiv. 30), "The Book of the Law of Jehovah" (2 Chron. xvii. 9). This designation extends from the days of Jehoshaphat (B.C. 915) to the time of Jesus the son of Sirach (c. 250—200 B.C.). There can be little doubt that the book so styled is virtually the same as our Pentateuch, and identical with the "Book of the Law" placed by Moses in the ark (Deut xxxi. 26).

THE CREATION. There is no conflict between the Mosaic account of creation and geology. As regards the formation of the material globe, it is merely stated, in general terms, "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth." The distinction must be carefully observed between the words "created" and "made" throughout the first chapter of Genesis. The six days' work relates entirely to the Divine action on the earth's surface, and the objects visible from it at the beginning of the present epoch of humanity: thus—

1. A change from darkness to light.
2. Separation of waters above and below by the intervention of a firmament.
3. A further division of the waters below into seas and earth, followed by growth of vegetable life.
4. Appearance of sun, moon, and stars, visible from the earth's surface.
5. Production of living creatures out of the water and in the air.
6. Production of animals, including man, from the material earth.

The summary account of the Creation in the Fourth Commandment (Exod. xx) refers, in general terms, only to the appearance under the Divine hand of visible phenomena above the earth's surface; but in neither of these accounts is there any allusion to the mode by which formations below the crust of the earth were made.

GENUINENESS OF THE PENTATEUCH. Although some fragments claim a higher antiquity, GENESIS is acknowledged to be the most ancient complete book in existence. It must be viewed, however, in connexion with the four books that follow it, and of which it is an integral part, the scope of the whole being the foundation of a theocracy based upon the idea of a single family. Although there seem to be portions of more ancient narratives embodied by the writer in the book as it now stands (e.g. the story of Lamech and his two wives; a second account of the Creation, chap. ii.; the battle of the five kings against four in the Vale of Siddim; the meeting of Abraham and Melchizedek; &c.), whence some have supposed that the original narrative has been enlarged at various times by three or more subsequent compilers; yet it is believed that the record in its present state is substantially that of Moses, with a few later additions made in the time of the monarchy. Some commentators maintain that two quite distinct narratives have been interwoven together: the one, more ancient, in which the Deity is throughout designated by the general term Elohim (God), while in the other He is called by the more mystic name of Jehovah (The LORD)—the former representing a general Divine influence in the material world, the latter a supernatural, overruling power, creating and directing it, and requiring adoration in return. These two portions are characterised as the Elohistic and Jehovistic; the former teaching natural, the latter revealed religion. There is, however, throughout the Pentateuch a unity, which can only be ascribed satisfactorily to one writer.

In the Book of EXODUS also, some critics have conjectured the existence of two distinct documents (Elohistic and Jehovistic) blended together, though they find it much more difficult to accurately define them. The book, as a whole, is strongly impregnated with the atmosphere of Egypt, as made known to us by modern research. Its language shows a large infusion of Egyptian words; the Ten Plagues are directed, in three groups, against the three primary divinities of ancient Egypt, viz. water, heavenly bodies, and earth,—as also is the Second Commandment; the enactments of the Mosaic Law are based upon Egyptian life: the whole constitution of religious worship is antagonistic to Egyptian mythology (e.g. the sacrifice of sacred animals), and presupposes residence in a camp, and in a wilderness, as the established rule; while words peculiar to such a life remain stamped upon ordinances and accessories of worship throughout the religion of the nation. Thus, the place of worship is always "the Tabernacle," i.e. the tent; excommunication implies being "cast out of the Camp;" the scapegoat carries the sins of the people into the "Wilderness;" the Sabbath becomes a rest from the labour of "Bondage;" and the peculiar rites of the Passover, such as the posture of the eaters, the unleavened bread, and "the haste," possess their significance as memorials of a hasty flight: while the Divine Presence on Mount Sinai is commemorated by the erection at Jerusalem of an artificial mountain by Solomon, on which the figurative presence of the "Most High" is localised, and even the fence, placed round Mount Sinai by Moses, is perpetuated by a trellis at the foot of Mount Moriah. Hence, internal evidence strongly supports the belief that the book was written at the time and under the circumstances professed by its author. It is doubtful, however, whether we are to ascribe a period of 215, or of 400, years to the residence of the Israelites in Egypt, as the passages in the record are ambiguous: but the number of the people, at the time of the Exodus, would suggest the longer period.

In LEVITICUS and NUMBERS, the attempt to define two distinct Elohistic and Jehovistic portions has failed to command support: it is generally allowed that there is but one narrative, in the main; though there may be some minor additions to it of a later date.

The apparent variation of style (from the historical to the hortatory) in the Book of DEUTERONOMY, as well as certain seeming discrepancies between it and the previous books, has raised doubts as to its authorship, some assigning it to Jeremiah, and others to a Jew living in Egypt in the time of Manasseh. The majority of critics, however, uphold the traditional theory that it was the work of Moses, at the close of his life; since the writer evidently had in view the approaching entrance of the Israelites into their promised inheritance. The discrepancies are not irreconcilable, and the enactments which provide for an established form of government, including even a monarchy and permanent settlement in cities, might well be prospective. On the other hand, there are many similarities between it and the rest of the Pentateuch (e.g. the use of peculiar Hebrew words and grammatical forms, the frequent reference to the Jews' slavery in Egypt, to Egyptian laws and customs, &c.) which are strong evidence in favour of its being the work of the same author, to which must be added the direct testimony of the writer himself in the book, and its frequent quotation as the "Law of Moses" in the New Testament. On the whole, the great preponderance of testimony, both from external and internal evidence, favours the view that the entire Pentateuch (with the exception of a few unimportant phrases) is the work of Moses.

GENESIS. The Beginning of the inhabited world in man's epoch. I. The Creation, Fall, and antediluvian history of man, including the First Covenant. II. The Deluge, Second Covenant with Noah, re-peopling of the earth; the Dispersion, and confusion of language. III. The Call and history of Abraham and his sons, to the third generation, ending with the death of Joseph: the entire book thus embracing a period, according to the generally received chronology, of 2,369 years. The general subject is the Creation, the decline of humanity through sin, and its capability of being reclaimed by communion with God its Maker. Hope and faith are kept alive by the example of a chosen few, who through obedience to God become heirs to promised blessings, which are continually postponed, with mercy to those who are sinful, and a deepening of faith in those who are righteous.

EXODUS. The Going out or Departure of the chosen people—descendants of Abraham—from bondage in Egypt to a promised land, illustrating, in the history of a tribe, the general dealings of God with His people, and their pilgrimage through temporal life in a probationary state. There is declension, moral, political, and religious, till the cry of the degenerate, in their conscious misery, rises to heaven. Then Divine help appears, working supernaturally through human means, and deliverance is effected by "shedding of blood," the Passover Lamb being typical of the redeeming blood of the promised Saviour. In brief, the book gives a sketch of the early history of Israel as a nation—(1) enslaved, (2) redeemed, and (3) set apart, through the blending of its religious and political life, and consecrated to the service of God. The Moral Law which it contains is universal and unalterable. It is in fact an authoritative republication of the Law engraved by the Creator on the human heart.

It embraces a period of 215, or 400, years, and includes events from the birth of Moses to the erection of the Tabernacle. The chief of these are:—the early life of Moses, and his call to be the Prophet of Israel; the ten plagues, and deliverance of Israel from Egyptian slavery; the institution of the Passover, and dedication of every firstborn male to God's service; the passage of the Red Sea; miraculous food and drink; victory, by means of prayer, over Amalek; the promulgation of the Moral Law; instructions for making the taber nacle, ark, and other accessories of worship, with the consecration of the family of Aaron to the priesthood, and of their vestments; the stricter obligation of the sabbath, and punishment for making a visible representation of the Deity (e.g. the golden calf).

LEVITICUS. The book of laws and ceremonies regulating the service of the sanctuary by the sacred tribe (Levi), as substitutes for the firstborn male of each family, its natural priest. It is closely connected with Exodus at its beginning, and with Numbers at its close: for, while the order for consecration of priests is given in the former, the ceremony itself is recorded in Leviticus; and the exemption of the Levites from military service, and their special functions, are given in Numbers. But it has a distinctive character in the general exclusion from it of historical narrative (the exceptions being the Consecration of Priests, Death of Nadab and Abihu, Stoning of the Blasphemer). It embraces the history of only one month. Its contents are:—1. Laws for the Altar (for the people and the priests). 2. Consecration of Priests, and death of those offering unbidden incense. 3. Laws of clean and unclean food. 4. Purifications. 5. Leprosy. 6. Day of Atonement. 7. Slaughter of animals. 8. Unlawful marriages and lusts. 9. Precepts on the duties of the people and holiness of the priests. 10. Victims for the Altar. 11. Convocation days. 12. Weekly offerings of oil and bread. 13. Punishment of blasphemer. 14. Sabbatical year and Jubilee. 15. Promises and warnings. 16. Vows.

OFFERINGS. The general name korbān is equivalent to oblation, including everything given to the service of God, e.g. firstfruits, tithes, contributions to the maintenance of the sanctuary, priests, worship, and all kinds of sacrifices.

OFFERINGS FOR THE ALTAR were animal (1. Burnt-offerings, 2. Peace-offerings, 3. Sin-offerings and vegetable (1. Meat- and drink-offerings for the great altar in the Court, 2. Incense and meat-offerings for the altar in the Holy Place). Every burnt-offering and peace-offering was accompanied by a meat-offering and drink-offering, in proportion to the victim, thus:—

	Flour.	Oil.	Wine.
	Ephah.	Hin.	Hin.
With a bullock . . .	$\frac{3}{10}$	$\frac{1}{2}$	$\frac{1}{2}$
With a ram	$\frac{2}{10}$	$\frac{1}{3}$	$\frac{1}{3}$
With a sheep or goat .	$\frac{1}{10}$	$\frac{1}{4}$	$\frac{1}{4}$

These offerings were (1) Public sacrifices, at the cost and on behalf of the "whole congregation") e.g. daily morning and evening sacrifices, and those on festivals); (2) Private sacrifices, enjoined by law on particular occasions, or provided by the voluntary devotion of the worshipper—as thank-offerings. Besides these, there were special sacrifices on the Day of Atonement, Passover, &c. A trespass-offering was a sin-offering, accompanied by a pecuniary fine.

FEASTS. The weekly festival was the sabbath (commemorating rest from creation, and deliverance from bondage in Egypt); the monthly festival was the day of the new moon, on which rest was not enjoined, but additional services. The new moon of the seventh month Tisri, or Feast of Trumpets, began the civil year, and that of Abib the ecclesiastical year. The great festivals were (1) Passover, on the eve of the 14th of Abib, which lasted to the 21st; (2) Pentecost (the fiftieth day after), or feast of weeks, on completion of the harvest; (3) Tabernacles, from the 15th to 23rd of Tisri, commemorating the ingathering of all fruits. The people lived for a week in booths, to remind them of their desert wanderings. The last day was "the great day" (John vii. 37). This feast was preceded by the Day of Atonement. Every seventh year was sabbatical, when the land had rest. Every fiftieth was a jubilee, when slaves were freed, land sold reverted to its original owner, and mortgages were cancelled.

To these were added Purim ("Lots"), 14th and 15th of Adar, in remembrance of the deliverance by Esther; and the Dedication of the Second Temple (25th of Chisleu).

FASTS. The only fast appointed by the Law was the "Day of Atonement," the 10th of Tisri, spoken of in Acts xxvii. 9 as "the Fast." Four annual fasts were observed by the Jews during the Captivity; and special fasts were kept on occasions of national humiliation.

NUMBERS. This book is so named from the two numberings of the people, at the beginning and end of the wanderings. It comprises a period of thirty-eight years and three months, from the completion of the Lawgiving, "the first day of the second month of the second year" of the Exodus, to the first day of the fifth month of the fortieth year. Its contents are: (1) The breaking-up of the encampment at Sinai; arrangement of the army, and the service of the priestly tribe, with an inventory of their charge; the parting service and blessing. (2) The march upon Canaan, and its repulse. (3) Rebellions; confirmation of Moses and Aaron in authority; condemnation of the people to death in the wilderness. (4) Various events in the forty years' wandering. (5) Events of the last year, e.g. the deaths of Miriam and Aaron; Balaam's mission; the corruption of the people by the Midianites, and its consequences; laws of inheritance, and of certain sacrifices, solemnities, and vows; summary of journeys; boundaries of Canaan, and Levitical cities.

DEUTERONOMY, the repetition of the Law, consists mainly of three addresses by Moses to the people who had been born in the wilderness, and had not heard the original promulgation of the Law. To these are added some of the latest acts and words of the lawgiver, viz. the appointment of his successor, his song, and his final blessing, to which was appended (probably by Joshua) the account of his death.

The first address is introductory, reminding the people of their deliverance from bondage, of God's guidance and protection in their wanderings, and their frequent ingratitude, closing with a warning from the past, and an exhortation to obedience in the future, so as to secure the inheritance now within reach. The second is a practical exposition of the whole Law, beginning with the Ten Commandments, more particularly applying the precepts of the First Table: followed by the enforcement of particular regulations in three main groups, viz. (1) laws concerning religion; (2) concerning administration of justice; (3) concerning private and social rights. The third address is the solemn renewal of the covenant, with an impressive recital of the blessings upon observance, and the curses on neglect of the Law. The delivery of these speeches, of the song, and final benediction, together with the closing scene of Moses' life, could not have occupied more than ten days (the first ten of the eleventh month of the fortieth year). Their character is that of a solemn exhortation, their style earnest and impressive, with a review of the past, and a stirring appeal to the future career open before his hearers on the other side of the Jordan. Moses vividly portrays to those who had not seen it the divine delivery of the Law at Sinai. He recalls much that had been forgotten, or remained in abeyance from want of opportunity to exercise it in the wilderness; but all of which would now be the code of laws under which, as a settled people, they must be governed. His hearers are only partially conversant with the Law; hence some things are assumed, others are dealt with in minute detail, and even supplemented by new regulations to complete the Mosaic system (chaps. xii—xxvi).

These later civil institutions are promulgated by God's command, and so have the same Divine sanction as those relating to religious worship. In this book Moses comes forth as a prophet, enunciating some of the most notable predictions in the Old Testament (xviii. 15 foll. and xxviii–xxxii).

2.—THE HISTORICAL BOOKS (from Joshua to Esther inclusive) contain the history of the Israelite people during three great periods of their national life: (1) As a confederation of independent tribes united by religion and blood; (2) as a monarchy, separated after three generations into two perfectly distinct kingdoms; (3) as tributary to foreign invaders.

JOSHUA (Jehovah is salvation), the first of the twelve so-called "Historical Books," embracing a period of twenty-five years, is supposed to have been written by Joshua, whose name it bears. He was the successor of Moses, as the prophet of the Lord and leader of His people, to whom was entrusted the task of settling them in Canaan. It consists of three parts: (1) The conquest of Canaan during the seven years' war, and destruction of its thirty-one kings. (2) Distribution of the country by lot, and settlement of the tabernacle at Shiloh. (3) Final admonitions, and death of Joshua, which must have been added by one of his survivors. The characteristic feature of the book is that "the Lord drove out the nations before them," and that "He fought for Israel." The conquest opens with the miraculous fall of Jericho, after the renewal of circumcision, and the apparition of the "Captain of the Lord's host." Then follows a march into the interior, to the primary altar of Abraham at Shechem, where the covenant is renewed by oath and sacrifices; and next the miraculous victory at Beth-horon, and general panic of the heathen inhabitants. It closes with a general assembly at Shiloh (where the tabernacle was permanently fixed), the allotment of territory to each tribe, and a final renewal of the covenant at Shechem, followed by Joshua's death. The typical aspect of the history is pointed out in the Epistle to the Hebrews, chap. iv.

DATE AND AUTHORSHIP. That the events are recorded by a contemporary is evidenced by such passages as iii. 15, 16; v. 1; the prophetic character of the writer by vi. 26; though some later additions to the original are traceable in x. 13; xix. 47; xxiv. 29—33. The expression used of certain memorials as remaining "up to this day," which occurs fourteen times, does not in any case seem to be inconsistent with the period embraced by the narrative; while it is difficult to imagine that any but a contemporary could have written such passages as vi. 25, and his two addresses (xxiii and xxiv), as well as the various records of his intercourse with God, would appear to have been committed to writing by Joshua himself, who is expressly declared to have written some documents (xxiv. 26). Ewald supposes that the book has undergone five transformations at the hands of successive compilers; but this view has met with little support. Others have tried to discriminate between an Elohistic and Jehovistic narrative; but this hypothesis is difficult to maintain. The authorship has been variously attributed to Joshua (according to the tradition of the Jews and early Christian writers), Phinehas, Eleazar, one of the elders who survived Joshua, Samuel, and Jeremiah; again, some have assigned its date to the time of the Judges, the reign of Josiah, and even to the time after the Babylonish Captivity. All these conjectures present far greater difficulties than the old tradition, that it is the work of Joshua, who followed the example of Moses by writing the annals of his own time; a task which seems to have been divinely committed to him on his first appointment as the assistant of Moses (Exod. xvii. 14).

JUDGES, the second historical book, comprising a period of about 300 years (or 450 years, according to the LXX. chronology, quoted by Paul, Acts xiii. 20), chronicles the gradual decline of Israel, after Joshua's death, into a state of political anarchy and religious apostasy.

DATE AND AUTHORSHIP. Its authorship is uncertain; but Jewish tradition ascribes it to Samuel. The phrase, "up to this day," is thought by modern critics to signify the time of Solomon, though i. 21 seems to refer to a date prior to David's capture of Jebus at the beginning of his reign, while xviii. 14 would seem to mark a date posterior to the Assyrian captivity of Israel. There is little doubt that chaps. i. 6—xvi. form an early record, most probably written by Samuel, and continued by other annalists; and that these documents were combined into one harmonious whole (terminating with 2 Kings), probably by Ezra, or Nehemiah. The text of the whole is, "There was no king in Israel; every man did that which was right in his own eyes." The government may be called a confederation of tribes. But irreligion, and the want of unity, made them a prey to the heathens around, whom they neglected to extirpate. Seven times Israel became subject to a foreign yoke, while thirteen judges assumed, by God's command, or the people's choice (as Abimelech), a temporary dictatorship. Of these some were contemporaries, as Samson and Samuel, and probably Abimelech, Tola, and Jair. This office subsequently became life-long (after Jephthah), and hereditary (in Samuel's time), gradually preparing the way for a monarchy.

It is notable that, from the days of Phinehas to the days of Eli, the priesthood is never mentioned, and that in Eli the office had passed from the family of Eleazar to that of Ithamar, on account, as the Jews say, of the sanction given by the former to Jephthah's unnatural sacrifice. The Books of Joshua and Judges bear the same relation to the books of the Law as the Acts of the Apostles to the Gospels; but the former mark the decline of the Jewish, the latter records the progress of the Christian Church.

RUTH. This is a sequel to the Book of Judges (with which the Jews classed it), and is the link connecting that period with the monarchy. It supplies the genealogy of David, and so carries on the descent of the "promised seed" from Abraham. It comprises a period of ten years, during the judgeship of Deborah and Barak, and is said to have been written by Samuel. It is remarkably rich in examples of faith, patience, industry, tender affection, and of the merciful providence of God, in bringing good out of evil. The pious amiability of Boaz contrasts favourably with the prominent characters among the judges (Abimelech, Jephthah, Samson); while the conversion of the Moabitess, her adoption into the church of God, and her acceptance as "a mother in Israel," put to shame the decline into heathenism of "the chosen people" and the immorality displayed in the closing chapters of the Book of Judges, and anticipate the warning of Christ, "Many shall come from the east and west, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven" (Matt. viii. 11).

As the Books of Joshua and Judges show the dealings of God with tribes confederate and yet mutually independent, so the four succeeding books show His dealings with His people under a monarchy. The nation takes its tone from the king, as the father of the family: according as he walks with God, in the ways of David, he prospers; if he follow the statutes of Omri, or walk in the steps of Jeroboam, he fails, and is dethroned. Thus there are eight kings of Israel in the first ninety years, five of whom meet with violent deaths; while of the six of Judah in the same space, only the last is killed, as a punishment for his alliance with the house of Ahab.

1 AND 2 SAMUEL. The two books bearing Samuel's name are one in the Hebrew Canon, while in the LXX. they are called 1 and 2 Kings. The former of the two is a continuation of the history of the judges, containing the narrative of the office of the last two (Eli and Samuel), who were not warriors, but only civil governors. Samuel is the connecting link by which the judgeship passes on to monarchy. To his personal character, administrative skill, and intellectual ability is due the reformation of the people from unbridled licentious anarchy to a peaceful acquiescence in a monarchy and a respect for justice.

The latter portion of the book contains the history of the reign of Saul, the first king, selected in accordance with the qualities desired by his subjects. He is the personification of the Israelite character; proud, selfish, reserved, obstinately stiffnecked, and profane, he sought to govern absolutely, instead of as the vicegerent of God. But he was never actually sovereign of more than the central part of the country. Indeed he was rather the pastoral chief of amalgamated tribes than the monarch of a kingdom.

DATE AND AUTHORSHIP. There is no evidence, either external or internal, bearing on the authorship of these books, neither is their title indicative of more than the subject-matter of their former portion (like that of the Book of Exodus). Comparing them with the Books of Kings, we judge the author to have written during a time when the Mosaic Law was forgotten, as he betrays no displeasure at its infringement by sacrificing in high places, such as is shown by the writer of the Kings. Therefore their date would seem to be prior to the finding of the Law by Josiah; while the mention of Ziklag being attached to the kingdom of Judah (1 Sam. xxvii. 6) marks a period subsequent to the secession of the Ten Tribes. The compilation of these annals must therefore be assigned to a period between the accession of Rehoboam and that of Josiah (from B.C. 976 to B.C. 640); and the purity of the language accords with this supposition, though these books may not have assumed precisely their present form and arrangement until the days of Nehemiah (2 Macc. ii. 13).

1 AND 2 KINGS. These two books are united in one in the ancient Hebrew copies. The present division is taken from the LXX. and Vulgate. They give the history of the kingdoms of Israel and Judah from the death of David to the Captivity. The history of the two kingdoms is intermingled until the captivity of Israel, after which that of Judah is continued for 130 years longer. The whole is a conflict between faith and infidelity; the "sons of God" and the "sons of men;" the worship of Jehovah (the Supreme eternal Source of life) and Baal (the personification of natural causes). Israel declines from God, her kings follow Jeroboam, "who made Israel to sin." She becomes outcast, and her record is wiped out of the Book of Life, just as is that of the family of Cain and the apostate descendants of Noah and of Abraham; while Judah is stayed by a few faithful kings (as Asa, Hezekiah, Josiah), repents of her unfaithfulness during her exile in Babylon, and is restored. Both books contain several prophecies, and are quoted by our Lord and the writers of the New Testament as historical (see Luke iv. 25—27; James v. 17). Their authorship is uncertain. It is probable that annals of their own times were written by several of the prophets, and that a continuous history of these kingdoms was compiled out of them by Jeremiah or Ezra. The number of provincialisms in the text points to a late origin, and there is a great similarity of style between them and the Book of Jeremiah (whose authorship Jewish tradition favours). There is likewise a very marked resemblance between the later portion of 2 Kings (in the incidents of which Jeremiah was a participator) and the corresponding narratives in the book which bears his name, and in which some of the events are described more fully (cp. 2 Kin. xxv. 22, and Jer. xliii. 7); while the writer appears to have remained in Judæa during the Captivity, and the history terminates at the precise point where Jeremiah is carried into Egypt and is lost sight of. But the vividness of certain scenes (such as the biographies of Elijah and Elisha, the scene of Ahab consulting Micaiah, and the career of Jehu) seems to betoken an eye-witness, whose record has been introduced unaltered by the compiler. These books embrace a period of 427 years.

1 AND 2 CHRONICLES. These are united into one book in the Hebrew, "The Diaries," from whence our title arises. In the LXX. they are called "Things Omitted" (Paralipomena), or "Supplement." They contain much of the matter of the previous Books of Kings, but supply additional information. The genealogical tables are valuable, since they record the unbroken line of the chosen people for about 3,500 years.

The authority of these books has been unsuccessfully assailed by those critics who wish to maintain that the origin of the Pentateuch belongs to the period subsequent to the Captivity. Jewish tradition and Christian writers agree in ascribing their compilation to Ezra, who obtained his material from various annals of the monarchy. The cause of their compilation is naturally suggested by the first difficulties which would present themselves to the leaders of those who returned from captivity, in allotting the various portions of territory to the families entitled to them according to the Mosaic Law. Again, the maintenance of the Temple service, and of the payment of tithes, &c., required strict legal proof of hereditary descent on the part of the officiating Priests and Levites. These two great political questions necessitated the compilation of authoritative genealogical tables. To this work Ezra and Nehemiah seem to have earnestly set themselves. In their hands, moreover, the restoration of the Temple and its worship became the great feature in the new constitution. They felt the vital importance of restoring a spirit of patriotism in the people, and of confidence in the favour of God, notwithstanding the punishment He had inflicted upon them by captivity. For this purpose, nothing could be more effectual than a continuous history of the nation, from David downwards, representing the Divine favour as dependent upon the faithfulness of rulers and people to the original covenant, and Divine punishment as the natural result of unfaithfulness. The Book of Chronicles (for it is properly only one) draws the picture which would most stimulate hope and patriotism. It gives in order the establishment of the Temple ritual, with its course of priests and officers, under David; its further development under Solomon; its restoration under Jehoshaphat, Hezekiah, and Josiah; and the reappearance of Divine favour at the final restoration of Church and nation after the Captivity. Thus the Chronicles are the beginning of the ecclesiastical history which continues in an unbroken thread to the end of the Book of Nehemiah, and of which the following is a summary:—

I. (Chaps. i—viii). Genealogical tables, and settlements of the various tribes.
II. (Chap. ix). The disturbance of these by the Babylonish Captivity, and their partial restoration on their return. (Cp. Neh. xi. 3—22.)
III. Introduction to the main history, viz. the end of Saul's reign, with a complete genealogy, copied from one drawn up in the reign of Hezekiah.
IV. (1 Chron. xi—xxix. 28). History of David.
V. (2 Chron. i—ix). Reign of Solomon.
VI. (2 Chron. x—xxxvi. 21). History of the kings of Judah and Israel.
VII. (2 Chron. xxxvi. 22—Ezra i. 4). Proclamation of Cyrus.
VIII. (Ezra iv. 2). First caravan of Jews returns to Jerusalem.
IX. (Ezra iii. 1—7). Restoration of sacrifices.

X. (Ezra iii. 8—13). Foundation of second Temple laid.
XI. (Ezra iv. 1—24). Interruption of building of Temple by Samaritan interference.
XII. (Ezra v—vi. 12). Recommencement of building of Temple under Darius Hystaspis.
XIII. (Ezra vi. 13—22). Completion of the Temple.
XIV. (Ezra vii, viii). Second caravan of Jews.
XV. (Ezra ix, x; Neh. viii). Governorship of Ezra.
XVI. (Neh. i, ii). Rebuilding of the walls under Nehemiah, and the opposition of Sanballat (from i—vii. 4).
XVII. (Neh. ix—xii). Nehemiah's first administration.
XVIII. (Neh. xiii). Nehemiah's second administration.

PECULIARITIES. The following passages are peculiar to the Book of Chronicles, and afford evidence of its aim:—1 Chron. xv—xxvii; xxii—xxix; 2 Chron. xiii—xv; xxiv, xxvi, xxix—xxxi, and xxxv.

DATE AND AUTHORSHIP. Internal evidence favours the supposition that Ezra was the author of the Chronicles, since the style and the Chaldaisms strongly resemble those of the Book of Ezra.

The writer seems to have had no personal knowledge of the events which happened in Jerusalem after the commencement of the Captivity, since he entirely omits the details which close 2 Kings; but the phraseology, which accords with that of the Book of Ezra, favours the notion that he was resident in Babylon, while the whole history terminates with Ezra's death. The sources of this compilation are various tribal genealogical tables and registers, the records of certain seers (e.g. Gad, Nathan, Iddo, Shemaiah), and also the "Books of the Kings of Israel and Judah," and public registers (Neh. xii. 23).

EZRA. Ezra was the son of Seraiah, and was probably born at Babylon. He was a "Scribe" (Ezra vii. 6), who went up to Jerusalem with the second body of returned captives. He speaks of himself as the author of the book which bears his name (vii. 27, 28; viii. 1, &c.). It consists of two portions, with a considerable interval between the two. The first gives the return of the captives in the time of Cyrus (B.C. 536), and the rebuilding of the Temple, interrupted by the Samaritans, but renewed at the preaching of Haggai and Zechariah. Some portions of this book are in Chaldee. The second part relates the second immigration of exiles in the reign of Artaxerxes Longimanus (B.C. 457), with Ezra himself, and his reformation of the people. The whole period extends over seventy-nine years (from 536 to 457).

NEHEMIAH. This was anciently united with the Book of Ezra, and in the Vulgate it is called 2 Esdras. It carries on the history from about twelve years after the close of Ezra's book to the last jubilee (B.C. 445—413), covering a period of thirty-two years. Zerubbabel had rebuilt the Temple, but not the city walls of Jerusalem, which were restored in fifty-two days under Nehemiah's direction. He was full of zeal, and gave up his lucrative post of cupbearer to the King of Persia, that he might join his fellow-countrymen in their difficulties. He reformed their civil and religious condition, enforcing economy and justice, attracting a large number of settlers to the city, restoring the Temple services, and re-enacting the Mosaic Covenant. This closes the Old Testament History. Nehemiah himself, after twelve years' sojourn in Judæa, returned to his post in the Persian Court.

ESTHER. The book called by Esther's name contains an episode in the history of those Israelites who did not return from captivity, and it shows their moral decline. Having chosen to remain in a heathen land, Mordecai and his family accommodate themselves to their adopted nationality till their lives are imperilled. His kinswoman Esther being constrained to compete for a position in the harem of a heathen monarch, Mordecai charges her to conceal her nationality and religion for temporal aggrandisement. Although God's providence never forsakes His people, and in answer to their prayers deliverance is wrought, His name remains secret among them. The contrast throughout between the tone of Mordecai and Daniel under similar circumstances, and the inferiority of the former to his contemporaries Ezra and Nehemiah, are very marked. The incident is supposed to have its historical position between the 6th and 7th chapters of Ezra, and Ahasuerus is conjectured to have been Artaxerxes; though some see in him a stronger resemblance to the effeminate Xerxes, and place the events which this book records in the later years of his reign.

It is impossible to identify Esther with any queen mentioned in profane history, and it is most probable that she was a favourite concubine, to whom that title was accorded. The author of the book is unknown, but was most probably Mordecai, as no one else could well possess such minute knowledge of the names of Haman's family, as also of that of Esther and the domestic details of the palace of Shushan, as is shown in this narrative. It has been attributed to Ezra, who may have brought it with him from Babylon to Jerusalem, and added it to the Canon. It was written in Hebrew, though additions were made to it in Greek by the LXX. (See NOTES ON THE APOCRYPHA, p. 28).

The feast of Purim remains to this day as an evidence of the truth of the story; and the book has been always esteemed Canonical both by Jews and by Christians.

3.—THE POETICAL BOOKS (including Job to Song of Solomon) were written at various times, some being of earlier, others of later date than the historical books. They are classed together, partly because they are in Hebrew verse, but mainly because they formed the devotional books of the Jewish Church.

JOB. The antiquity of this book is proved by its style; but there is much diversity of opinion respecting its date. The long life of Job, the patriarchal customs and form of worship, the absence of allusion to the Mosaic Law, favour the opinion that Job was coeval with Abraham: while the coincidence of names with some of the descendants of Ishmael and Esau, and supposed allusions to the destruction of Sodom (xv. 34; xviii. 15), point to a date nearer the Exodus. The scientific and physical knowledge displayed in it, and references to artificial instruments of advanced civilisation (xli. 1, 7, 18), have led some to assign it to the time of Solomon.

As Job is classed with other holy men (Ezek. xiv. 14; James v. 11), he was a real person. The place of his residence was probably in the N. E. of Arabia Deserta.

SUPPOSED DATE. External evidence. The unanimous tradition of the ancient Jews ascribes the book to the Patriarchal age, and regards it as substantially based on historical incidents. The Talmudists, while agreeing as to its date, regard it as founded upon fact; while others, of a later date, have treated it as a parable or a philosophical fiction. Modern critics, of different schools, unite in the view that it is a theological discussion of very high merit, founded upon a historical basis, displaying the opinions of opposite schools on an unsettled question, of the connexion between human suffering and guilt, and whether there is any higher motive for religion than selfishness. While agreement is nearly uniform that the historical incident belongs to the Patriarchal age, opinions differ as to the date of the composition of the book. Some place it before the Mosaic Dispensation, others in the time of Solomon, and others in a period after the Babylonish Captivity. Modern research has thrown some light on the question. (1) The Assyrian tablets bear witness to astronomical knowledge, in the cities of the Euphrates, as far advanced as that displayed by the Book of Job, at an earlier date than B.C. 1750. (2) Assyrian monuments prove that Chaldæan invasions were not uncommon at as early a period. Also the animals and monsters (except the leviathan) used as illustrations by Job are precisely those found on Assyrian monuments, but were not for the most part familiar to the Jews of Palestine. The leviathan (or crocodile), though peculiar to Egypt, would be known to the inhabitants of Arabia Petræa, the mines of which were extensively worked by Egyptians long before the Exodus.

Internal evidence. The manners and customs portrayed in this book are universally allowed to be those of the Patriarchal epoch, though not at its earliest stage, since many offices, formerly discharged by the children of the family, are here delegated to servants. The language approximates more closely to Arabic than that of any other Hebrew work, and is replete with Chaldaisms, which belong to an early, and not to a late, stage of literature. The composition generally is archaic in grandeur and obscurity, and recalls the oldest portions of the Pentateuch, of the Psalms, of Proverbs (between which and the Book of Job an intimate relation has been observed by critics of more than one school), and the Song of Deborah. If we compare it with the poetical compositions of Moses (e.g. Exod. xv, Deut. xxxii, and Psalm xc), whole phrases will be found to be identical, which favours the supposition that Moses either wrote the book, or, finding the original narrative (either written or oral) during his forty years' residence in Midian, gave to it its present form, adding its introductory and concluding portions in prose. Modern critics differ much with respect to this book. They are tolerably unanimous in allowing the main portion (i.e. the poetical part), with the exception of Elihu's speech, to be the work of one author, but differ about the two prose portions. The great weight of authority, however, favours the view that these portions bear a stronger resemblance to the Pentateuch than to any other writings; that they belong to the same age, and breathe the same spirit as the rest of the book, and only differ from it as prose differs from poetry. Elihu's speech is a necessary connecting link between the dialogue of Job and his friends and the final address of God. Objections grounded on the opinion that the doctrinal teaching is in advance of the Mosaic dispensation have been completely answered.

Authorship. Some ancient Jewish writers ascribe the authorship to Job himself, which opinion has been followed by some subsequent commentators. He has been even identified with Jobab the Edomite (Gen. x. 29); others suppose Moses to have been the author; others, Solomon; others, one of the later prophets; others, a resident in Southern Judæa, on the borders of the Idumæan Desert, in the time of the monarchy anterior to Amos, by whom Job is largely quoted.

It consists of three parts:—(1) The Introduction, a prose narrative of the cause and extent of Job's sufferings, and his patient endurance. (2) The Colloquies between Job and his comforters, in poetry, the theme of which is the cause of human suffering. His friends affirm it to be sin, and exhort Job to repentance. He denies it, appeals to facts, and complains of the unkindness of his friends. This portion consists of three series: (a) Job's complaint (ch. iii), followed by the speeches of Eliphaz, Bildad, and Zophar, each being successively answered by Job (chaps. iv—xiv). (b) A further speech of each of these three, with Job's answers thereto (xv—xxi). (c) A speech of Eliphaz and Bildad, with the answer to each (xxii—xxxi). (3) The Argument of Elihu (poetical), that afflictions are remedial and for the sufferer's good; followed by a reproof to Job for his self-justification, and a vindication of God's government (xxxii—xxxvii). (4) The Address of the Almighty, revealing His power and wisdom; concluding with Job's confession and penitence (xxxviii—xlii. 6). (5) A prose Conclusion, narrating the close of Job's life in peace and prosperity (xlii. 7—17).

PSALMS. This compilation has no counterpart in the New Testament; it belongs to both Dispensations. It speaks of Christ, and Christ speaks in it. The arrangement is not chronological, and is commonly assigned to Ezra and Nehemiah. The Psalter forms one book, called in the New Testament "The Book of Psalms." Its composition extends over a thousand years of the national life, from Moses to Malachi, in which Hebrew history is set to music.

The Psalms are divided into five parts:—Part I (i—xli) is the composition of David. Part II (xlii—lxxii) is Levitic, compiled for the Temple worship in the time of Hezekiah, and twenty-one psalms are David's (li—lxxi). Part III (lxxiii—lxxxix) was compiled for the same purpose in the time of Josiah. Part IV (xc—cvi) was compiled during the Captivity. Part V (cvii—cl) is miscellaneous; seventeen are Davidic, fifteen are Levitic, two penitential, and one Mosaic. Psalm cxix. is divided into sections of eight verses. In the Hebrew every verse of each section begins with the letter of the alphabet inscribed over it, which is evidently intended to help the memory in reciting it, as the Psalm was composed by Ezra to be sung on the homeward march of the captives.

The Psalter, then, may be compared to an Oratorio, in five parts:—

I. Decline of Man after the Fall. It commences with a Prologue or Overture (Pss. i. and ii), followed by the insurrection of Absalom; and concludes (Ps. xli) with that of Adonijah, quoted by our Lord as typical of the conspiracy of Judas against Him. The Prologue is ushered in with a Beatitude, and the Final Chorus closes with a Doxology and double Amen.

II. Revival of the Church, prefigured by David's rising from the bed of sickness, on which he was languishing (Ps. xli), and reviving the monarchy in the person of Solomon, whom he proclaims to be king in his stead; his bidding him to build a new temple, &c. The scheme is the same as before. A Prologue, ushered in by a Beatitude (Ps. xli. closing the one and introducing the other), followed by two Psalms of sorrow on David's flight from Absalom, and ending with a Beatitude and double Amen.

III. A Plaintive Recitative. The Church is in danger, owing to the degeneracy of Solomon's son; and the land is pillaged by the King of Egypt—again typical of the apostasy from Christ in times of peace and prosperity. It concludes (Ps. lxxxix) with the peaceful re-assurance of God, in an angelic soprano, "Once have I sworn by my holiness, that I will not lie unto David," followed by a Doxology and Chorus.

IV. The Antiphon to the Recitative, comprising—1. A Prologue, viz. The Prayer of Moses. 2. A Thanksgiving, in hopeful confidence of victory. 3. A Double Deliverance, from Egypt and Babylon, i.e. entrance and return to the Promised Inheritance. 4. Doxology.

V. Finale of Triumphant Thanksgiving, figured by the return from captivity, consisting of 1. Prologue: The helpless wandering of fallen man. 2. The Return to the sanctuary of God (fifteen songs of degrees). 3. Restoration, unfolded in the Dedication Hymn, Song of Ezra, Alternative Thanksgiving (cxxxvi) and Mourning (cxxxvii). 4. Anticipating Extension of the Church to the Gentiles. 5. Concluding Chorus, comprising five Invitatory Psalms to the whole Universe to join in one mighty Chorus of Praise, rising for ever to the throne of God.

The Bible Version of the Psalms was made direct from the Hebrew in 1610. It is far more accurate, though less rhythmical, than the English Prayer Book version. The latter comes from Cranmer's Bible (1539): it is pointed for chanting, and admirably adapted for that purpose; but it is often more like a paraphrase than a translation.

There is no other Book of Praise so pregnant with expression of the heart's emotions under all the vicissitudes of life, or so adapted to all climes and ages as to be the universal medium of praise for all nations of the world. No country but Palestine, varying as it does from the arid desert to the mountains capped with snow, could have furnished such a combination of subjects for poetical imagery: its vines and fruits; its valleys thick with corn and shining with lilies; its mountains, torrents, rivers, lakes; its wild and domestic animals, and its beasts of prey — all are pictured in the Psalms with a noble simplicity to which we find no parallel elsewhere.

For purposes of devotion it has been used as much by Christians as by Jews. It is quoted seventy times in the New Testament. It is also valuable as supplying additional fragments of history unrecorded in other books.

V.	107—150	Moses, Ezra, The Prophets

HEADINGS. There are only fifty Psalms without some heading, and these are mainly in Part V, composed by Ezra and Nehemiah, who probably arranged the book in its present form, and may have omitted their own names. The headings were already ancient in the time of the LXX. but their authority has been much disputed.

To many of David's Psalms there are "Dedications," or "Inscriptions:" e.g. "To the chief Musician on Neginoth upon Sheminith" (vi). Some are supposed to contain musical directions, thus:—

Ps. v....Nechiloth, "wind instruments," marks the nature of the accompaniment.

Ps. vi....Neginoth, "stringed instruments," marks the nature of the accompaniment.

Ps. vi....Sheminith, "upon the eighth," or octave, is to be a bass solo.

Ps. vii...Shiggaion, "wandering, erratic," refers to a gentle, running accompaniment.

Ps. viii..Gittith, "from Gath," denotes either a tune or a musical instrument on which the accompaniment is to be played, brought by David from Gath, and, probably, jubilant.

Ps. ix...Muth-labben, "a dirge," probably some well-known tune; or to be sung by "male trebles," i.e. boys.

Ps. ix.16. Higgaion, "meditation," either marks a pause, the commencement of a recitative, or the change to a minor key.

Ps. xvi..Michtam, "engraven in gold," seems to mark its popularity, or its value as an outpouring of thankfulness.

Ps. xxii. Aijeleth Shahar, "the hind of the morning," may refer either to some tune, or, more probably, to the use of this psalm at the hour of the morning sacrifice.

Ps.xxxii.Maskil, "an instruction," seems to refer to the subject-matter, or to its being "Recitative."

Ps. xlv..Shoshannim, "lilies," or "six strings," may either be the name of a sweet tune, or the accompanying instrument with six strings.

Ps. xlvi. Alamoth, "virgins," i.e. for "treble voices;" cp. 1 Chron. xv. 20.

Ps. liii...Machalath, "lute," either the accompaniment, or a lively tune.

Ps. lvi...Jonath-elem-rechokim, "mute dove among strangers," i.e. either a tune so called—a dirge—or referring to the subject-matter, David in exile.

Ps. lvii.—lix, lxxv. Al-taschith, "destroy thou not."

Ps. cxx..Ma'aloth, "ascents" or "steps" ("degrees," A. V.), the pilgrims' song of those returning from captivity; or to be sung on the steps of the inner temple court.

Selah, "eternally, for ever." According to some, forte; according to others, piano. In the LXX. regarded as a musical or rhythmical note, the key-note: or a symphony; or a pause; or Da Capo; or a blast of trumpets. It occurs seventy-one times in the Psalms, and three times in Habakkuk.

To the chief Musician is prefixed to fifty-three. It is variously interpreted: either that the music was composed by the chief Musician, to whom David dedicated the Psalm; or, that for "to" we should read "by," and understand by "the chief Musician" (i.e. David himself), the composer of the words.

Why boastest thou thyself in mischief	52
Why do the heathen rage	2
Why standest thou afar off, O Lord	10

PROVERBS. The Hebrew title of this book is Mishlê ("by-words," "proverbs," "similitudes"); in the LXX. it is called Παροιμιαι ("Proverbs"), and similarly in the Vulgate Liber Proverbiorum.

It is a manual of practical rules of life, as the Psalms are a manual of daily devotion; the former guiding the actions, the latter the thoughts. It is a book of daily lessons for all ages and states of men and women. "Wisdom" is religion; and "folly" is irreligion.

It may be divided as follows:—1. Introduction,—the value of wisdom (i—ix). 2. The Proverbs (strictly so called) of Solomon (x—xxii. 16). 3. Another introduction, on the study of wisdom (xxii. 17—xxiv). 4. A second volume of true Proverbs, collected by those who were set by Hezekiah to restore the Temple worship, among whom were Isaiah and Hosea (xxv—xxix). 5. An Appendix, containing the instructions of Agur to his pupils Ithiel and Ucal, and of the mother of Lemuel to her son (xxx, xxxi).

It is generally allowed that the main portion (x—xxii. 16) is the work of Solomon, consisting of Proverbs composed or collected by himself, and that the other portions have been collected and added to it subsequently, the original title being preserved for the whole of the compilation, just as was done for the Psalms.

DATE AND AUTHORSHIP. The date of this final arrangement is uncertain, but it was most probably in the time of Hezekiah. Modern critics are divided in their opinion whether the first part of the book (i—ix) belongs to the seventh or ninth century B.C., and the arguments on either side are alike inconclusive. It is also a matter of dispute whether it is earlier or later than the Song of Solomon and the Book of Job, many passages in the latter bearing such a striking resemblance to the Proverbs as to leave no doubt that the writer of the one book was familiar with the other. The Jews attributed the Song of Solomon to the early youth, the Proverbs to the mature age, and Ecclesiastes to the declining years of Solomon, while others have assigned them all to the last portion of his life. There has never been any doubt of the Canonicity of the book, except on the part of some writers among the Jews themselves.

ECCLESIASTES ("The Preacher"), called in Hebrew Koheleth, is generally supposed to have been written by Solomon at the close of his life, after his lapse (1 Kin. xi. 1—13), and to contain the expression of his penitence. He holds himself up as a warning to others: from its title, some suggest that he delivered it in public. It is a narrative of the attempts of a worldling in various ways to find happiness. He alternates between study, pleasure, sensuality, refinement, luxury, misanthropy, construction, mechanical skill, book-making. All are unsatisfying, and leave a void; the conclusion being that everything is vain and empty but the fear of God, and that subservience to Him is the only perfect freedom. "Wisdom" is here used in the modern sense, viz. possession of knowledge.

The Canonicity of this book is acknowledged by Jews and early Christian writers; but the former did not rank it among the poetical books, the greater part of it being prose.

Both the age and the authorship of this book are controverted. By the intermixture of the Hebrew with Aramaic words it is thought to belong to the same period as the Books of Ezra and Nehemiah, with which its subject-matter seems to accord; e.g. the expression of misery under a tyrannical government, sudden vicissitudes of fortune, the tone of despondency, the moral and religious declension, and the condition of literature,—all seem to indicate a state of things more like that subsequent to the return from the Captivity than that of the golden age of Solomon. The attempts, however, to fix its date have, so far, manifested very little unanimity.

SONG OF SOLOMON, or CANTICLES. This poem is said to be the only remaining one of the 1,005 songs composed by Solomon (in the Hebrew idiom it is called The Song of Songs, or the best of them all); and Jewish and Christian tradition both agree in this. It has been thought to have been a Marriage Ode composed by him on his nuptials with the daughter of Pharaoh, or with some native of Palestine (espoused some years later), of noble extraction, but inferior to her husband (ii. 1, 6; vii. 1); and its language is held to be figurative of the union between Christ and His Spouse, the Church.

It is a poem in which there are two characters, a male (Shelomoh, Peaceable), and a female, called by the same name with a feminine termination (Shulammith). There are treble and bass solos, which occasionally glide into a duet (ii. 7; iii. 5; viii. 4), terminating in a chorus of virgins (iii. 6—11; v. 9; vi. 1, 13; viii. 5, 8, 9). The parts of the two principal characters are not distinguished in our translation, as they are in the Hebrew, by the use of masculine and feminine pronouns and adjectives; but they may be thus marked: Shulammith begins a treble solo (i. 2—6), followed by a dialogue or duet (of about a verse each), to ii. 3, terminating in the duet (ii. 6, 7). Then Shulammith sings a solo (ii. 8—13), answered by Shelomoh (ii. 14, 15), and he again by her (iii. 1—4), gliding into the duet (iii. 5), and the chorus of virgins (from ver. 6 to the end of that chapter.

Chap. iv. commences with a sonnet from Shulammith in praise of her lover, answered by him, singing her praises in turn. The same compliments are repeated with little variation by Shelomoh (chap. vii), in praise of his spouse. The two intervening chapters (v and vi) seem to be sung by Shulammith and the chorus, and chap. viii. by them all chorally.

Ewald, with much reason, has conjectured that it is not the composition of Solomon, nor yet a marriage ode; but that it had its origin in the loving cry of the faithful Church still remaining in the kingdom of the ten tribes, when rent away from the house of David. Thus, "Solomon" is the head of the Jewish Church, personified in the Temple, the centre of devotion and love of the faithful spouse now excluded from it, but whose heart still yearns towards it. The compulsory attendance on the worship at Dan and Beth-el is well portrayed by—"My mother's children were angry with me; they made me the keeper of the vineyards; but mine own vineyard (God's Church) have I not kept." And again, as the worship of the calves was the beginning of Baalism, well might the faithful Israelite Church, forced to a false worship, hide its face and cry, "Look not upon me, because I am black; because the Sun hath looked upon me."

This view is sustained by the imagery used by the two speakers one of the other: that applied to the man being such as is applicable to the physical features of Judea; that to the woman such as belongs rather to the northern kingdom. Again, the neck of Shelomoh is like the "tower of David" (iv. 4); he lives amidst the daughters of Jerusalem, and among the roes, harts, and hinds of the field, "leaping upon the mountains" (ii. 7, 8); while Shulammith lives under Lebanon, "a dove in the clefts of the rock, in the secret stairs" (ii. 14); her eyes are like fishpools in Heshbon, her nose as the tower of Lebanon, her head like Carmel (vii. 4, 5). All names of places used in the imagery of her by Shelomoh, or by her of herself, are taken from the ten tribes, even extending to those beyond the Jordan.

DATE AND AUTHORSHIP. With the exception of a few Talmudists (who ascribe it to the time of Hezekiah), there is a general consent of all critics, down to the last century, that it is a genuine work of Solomon, though the date at which it was written is disputed. Kennicott placed it in the time of Ezra and Nehemiah, on account of certain Chaldaisms in the Hebrew text, which, according to Gesenius, are provincialisms peculiar to the northern part of Palestine, existing in the age of Solomon, to which period he attributes the composition. There seems nothing whatever in the subject-matter which could identify it with the post-Babylonish period. Its first verse attributes it to Solomon.

The more probable time of its composition would seem to be that of Rehoboam, and it would appear as if it were an eirenikon (overture of peace) between the two hostile kingdoms of Israel and Judah, reminding them that they were brethren (compare iii. 11; v. 16; viii. 2, 5). The mention in juxtaposition of the two rival royal cities in the time of Jeroboam and Rehoboam, viz. Tirzah and Jerusalem (vi. 4); of the "three-score valiant men of Israel," expert in war, coming out of the wilderness (iii. 6—8); and of "the company of two armies," with the appeal to Shulammith to return (vi. 10), all seem to point to the conclusion of hostilities recorded in 1 Kin. xii. 23, 24, or after the chastisement of Jeroboam by Abijah, (2 Chron. xiii).

Shelomoh would seem to be a personification of "Salem" (Jerusalem), and this ode would thus portray the yearning of the bereaved Israelite Church towards the holy Temple on Mount Zion after the separation of the ten tribes. This more fitly typifies the love between the Church and Christ than an "Epithalamium" on the marriage of Solomon with a heathen princess; while the terms of endearment lose all their grossness when applied to two nations with their distinctive physical features,—a view which is strengthened by the constant transition (in the original Hebrew) from the singular to the plural (or collective) pronouns.

The Canonicity of this book has never been doubted, the evidence in its favour being as strong as that in support of the other books: but, among the Jews, no one under thirty years of age was allowed to read it.

4.—THE PROPHETICAL BOOKS. Jonah, Joel, Amos, Hosea, Isaiah, Micah, Nahum, Zephaniah, Obadiah, prophesied before the Captivity; Jeremiah, Habakkuk, Ezekiel, Daniel, during it; and Haggai, Zechariah, Malachi, after the Restoration, and in the chronological order given here. The arrangement of these books in our Bible is ruled chiefly by the matter; the four greater books being placed first without regard to the date of their composition.

ISAIAH (Salvation of Jehovah), the son of Amoz (not the same name as Amos), prophesied about "Judah and Jerusalem in the days of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah." His tribe and family are uncertain, but he is believed to have been of the seed-royal of Judah. Under Uzziah and Jotham religion declined, luxury increased; under Ahaz idolatry was rampant, and the Temple closed. Isaiah warned and reproved in vain, till Hezekiah listened to his voice, and made him his adviser. He is said to have been sawn asunder in the reign of Manasseh, on whose accession, however, he must have been nearly ninety years of age.

The first verse seems to be the heading of the whole book, which consists of a series of visions, followed by a few miscellaneous prophecies and historical facts. These visions are placed in chronological order, but only one of them is strictly "a vision" (i.e. a waking dream), the rest being subjective rather than objective pictures of future events. It is difficult to assign any of them to the reign of Jotham, except, perhaps, some of the burdens; but those of the reigns of Uzziah, Ahaz, and Hezekiah are indicated by the writer himself. The first portion of the book relates chiefly to the Jewish nation and its enemies, with predictions about Assyria (then in its zenith), Babylon (in its infancy as a power), Moab, Egypt (the great rival of Assyria), Philistia, Syria, Edom, and Tyre (the great mercantile power), and a few historical chapters concerning Hezekiah. The second portion embraces a forecast of the whole period between the Captivity and the close of the Christian Dispensation, the return from Babylon being used to prefigure the Advent of the Messiah and the redemption of the people. The prophecies regarding the Messiah's birth, passion, glory, rejection by the Jews, and acceptance by the Gentiles, are so exact as to have earned Isaiah the name of the "Gospel Prophet."

PRINCIPAL SUBJECTS OF PROPHECY:—

I. The Captivities and Restoration of Judah and Israel (xxxix. 6, 7).
II. The ruin and desolation of Babylon, Tyre, Damascus, Egypt, &c., and the destruction of Syria and Israel (vii. 12; xlvii. 7, 15).
III. The conquests and conduct of Cyrus, who is mentioned by name, with his liberation of the Jews, nearly 200 years before his birth (xliv. 28; xlvi. 1—5).
IV. Prophecies respecting the Messiah:—
  1. His Forerunner (xl. 3).
  2. His Birth (vii. 14).
  3. His Family (xi. 10).
  4. His Name and Kingdom (ix. 6, 7).
  5. His Rejection by the Jews (viii. 14).
  6. His Acceptance by the Gentiles (xlix. 6).
  7. His Miracles (xxxv. 5, 6).

Many eminent German critics, of the last and present century, have called in question the authenticity of the last twenty-seven chapters, on the ground that their standpoint is the Babylonish Captivity, from whence the writer looks forward to succeeding events, and forewarns his people of what seems to be coming, and hence sketches out the career of the Messiah. They think it impossible for a prophet to mention Cyrus by name 200 years before his birth. The whole force of this objection rests upon the denial of all true prophetic inspiration. It has been ably refuted by other German critics, an excellent résumé of whose arguments will be found in Keil's Einleitung. It is difficult to imagine that such a writing in such an age should have been issued anonymously, and it must be borne in mind that the integrity of the whole book has been universally admitted by all Jews and Christians of former centuries. Moreover, forty-seven of the sixty-six chapters are quoted, directly or indirectly, in the New Testament, and in twenty-one cases Isaiah is named as the author of the prophecy. It must be conceded therefore that external evidence is wholly against the objection.

JEREMIAH (Appointed by Jehovah) was the son of Hilkiah, a priest of Anathoth (a small village close to Jerusalem). He began to prophesy in the thirteenth year of Josiah's reign, about seventy years after Isaiah's death, and continued to do so all through the troubled times of the Babylonian invasion. His utterances were regarded as of evil omen by the rulers of Jerusalem, and he was subjected to cruel persecution. He saw the city besieged and taken, his warnings neglected but fulfilled, his fellow-citizens carried captive, and Jerusalem a heap of ruins; and in an adjoining cave he wrote his Lamentations over it. A remnant rallied round him after the murder of Gedaliah, and were forbidden by God, through his mouth, to flee into Egypt; but they accused him of falsehood, and, disregarding the Divine command, carried him with them into that country (xliii), where, according to Jerome, he was put to death, having prophesied for about forty years.

His prophecies are not in chronological order, but seem to have been re-arranged according to their subjects, viz.: (1) Warnings to the Jews. (2) Survey of all nations, with an historical appendix. (3) Prediction of brighter days to come, with a similar appendix. (4) Prophecies regarding Egypt. The concluding chapters (from li. 34) are supposed to have been compiled from the later portions of 2 Kings, and may have been added by Ezra. Jeremiah was contemporary with Zephaniah, Habakkuk, Ezekiel, and Daniel. He foretold the precise date of the Captivity, the fate of Zedekiah, the Return of the Jews, the future decay of Babylon, and the fall of many other nations. He is said to have buried the ark; and he predicted the abrogation of the Law, the inauguration of a spiritual worship, the blessing of the Atonement, the call of the Gentiles through the Gospel, and the final acceptance of the Jews.

Bunsen and Ewald consider that the prophecies seem to be most naturally grouped together by the recurrence of the formula, "The word of the Lord came to Jeremiah," as follows: 1. (Chap. i): An introduction, probably prefixed to the whole at the final revision. 2. (ii—xxi): Probably the roll written by Baruch (xxxvi. 32), after the roll read in the ears of Jehoiakim had been burnt by him. 3. (xxii—xxv): Shorter prophecies delivered against the kings of Judah and false prophets. 4. (xxv—xxviii): Two great prophecies of the fall of Jerusalem. 5. (xxix—xxxi): The message of comfort for the exiles in Babylon. 6. (xxxii—xliv): The history of the last two years before the capture of Jerusalem, and of Jeremiah's work during that and the subsequent period. 7. (xlvi—li): The prophecies against foreign nations, ending with the great predictions against Babylon. 8. (lii): The supplementary narrative, which is also a preface to the Lamentations.

The LXX. translation contains so many differences of reading, as well as variations in the arrangement of the chapters, that it would seem to have been made from some other recension of the Hebrew than any now extant; or else, the translators endeavoured to make the meaning more plain, and the arrangement more methodical. The genuineness of the book has never been seriously questioned; neither can its date be doubted. Gesenius conjectures that more than thirty Psalms (v, vi, xiv, xxii—xli, lii—lv, lix—lxxi) were composed by Jeremiah; if so, they are a valuable record of the hymnology of that period.

LAMENTATIONS. An appendix to the preceding, in the shape of a pathetic ode, expresses Jeremiah's grief for the destruction of Jerusalem and its Temple, and the miseries of slavery and famine, inculcating the benefit of chastisement. It is full of pathetic tenderness.

Chaps. i, ii, and iv each consist of twenty-two verses, beginning with the successive letters of the Hebrew alphabet. Chap. v. contains the same number of verses, not, however, alphabetically arranged; while chap. iii. has three verses to each letter of the alphabet, every verse in each trio beginning with the same letter. The book, however, is not one poem divided into five chapters, but consists of five distinct poems. Its original Hebrew title was Ekah (How), which is its first word, and was a common prefix to a song of wailing. The acrostic arrangement was probably intended to assist the memory.

DATE AND AUTHORSHIP. The external evidence rests entirely on a preface in the LXX.: "And it came to pass, that after Israel was led captive, and Jerusalem was laid waste, Jeremiah sat weeping, and lamented with this lamentation over Jerusalem:" which is followed by Josephus and others. The internal evidence connects it in style and subject-matter so closely with the book of Jeremiah's prophecies, as to leave no doubt as to the authorship. Some have supposed it to be the lamentation over the death of Josiah (2 Chron. xxxv. 25), mentioned by Josephus as extant in his time (Antiq. x. 5); but this conjecture does not accord with the tone of these poems, which evidently portray Jerusalem in ruins, and leave no doubt that they were composed after its destruction by Nebuchadnezzar.

Its Canonicity has never been doubted; but it is regarded as the work of an inspired prophet, rather than as a prophetic inspiration. It has been variously placed among the sacred writings: either between Ruth and Ecclesiastes, among the five Megiloth ("rolls"), as in the Hebrew, or grouped with Jeremiah's writings, but separated from the prophetical book by that of Baruch, as in the LXX.

EZEKIEL (God will strengthen), son of Buzi, was a priest carried captive with other nobles by Nebuchadnezzar (B.C. 599), before the destruction of Jerusalem. He was settled with a Jewish colony on the banks of the Chebar (Khabûr), 200 miles N. of Babylon, where he saw visions. He lived for only twenty-seven years after, and did not begin to prophesy till the fifth year of his exile.

His prophecies may be divided into two parts. First, those spoken before the destruction of Jerusalem, to disabuse the people of all false hope of succour from Egypt, instilling into them the certainty of God's vengeance, and exhorting them to sincere repentance. The Second part is full of consolation, exciting hopes of future restoration on their true repentance, and the final glory of God's people in a renovated land and a new Jerusalem, with the outpouring of God's blessings upon them, and the future resurrection of the flesh. Between these two parts is an intervening portion, denouncing God's judgment on the seven heathen nations around them. This was written between the commencement of Nebuchadnezzar's siege of Jerusalem and the news of its fall.

This book contains many visions, parables, and proverbs. The illustrations are often taken from buildings and their ornaments, showing the writer to have been more familiar with a city than with rural life. He mentions Daniel by name (xxviii. 3); and as they were in exile together, they were probably well known to each other.

SUMMARY. 1. Ezekiel's call (i—iii. 15). 2. The general carrying out of the commission (iii. 16—vii). 3. The rejection of the people, because of their idolatrous worship (viii—xi). 4. The sins of the age rebuked in detail (xii—xix). 5. The nature of the judgment, and the guilt which caused it (xx—xxiii). 6. The meaning of the now commencing punishment (xxiv). 7. God's judgment denounced on seven heathen nations (xxv—xxxii). 8. Prophecies, after the destruction of Jerusalem, concerning the future condition of Israel (xxxiii—xxxix). 9. The glorious consummation (xl—xlviii).

Hebrew tradition asserts that Jeremiah and Ezekiel exchanged writings in their lifetime, so that those of the former were read in Babylon, and those of the latter in Jerusalem. There are many similarities in the two books which favour this supposition,—especially as the character of the two writers is so different that a resemblance in their writings would seem to be due to a mutual interchange of thoughts.

CANONICITY. The great obscurity of the book (from its allegorical form), and the apparent discrepancy between it and the Pentateuch (cp. xviii. 20, and Ex. xx. 5), led the Jews to place it among "the Treasures," which no one might read before the age of thirty; and, for the same reason, the Sanhedrin hesitated to give it a place among the Canonical books of the prophets for public reading in the synagogue. But on no other ground has its Canonicity been disputed, nor has its genuineness been seriously impugned.

There are no direct quotations from it in the New Testament, though in the Revelation there are several allusions and parallel passages which show that it was known to the writer.

DANIEL (God's Judge) was one of the princes of the royal family of Judah. He was made a eunuch in the palace of the King of Babylon, and rose to be chief of the wise men, and "ruler over the whole province of Babylon." Carried captive at the age of from twelve to eighteen, in the fourth year of Jehoiakim (eight years before Ezekiel), he prophesied during the whole period of the Captivity, and even two years after the Return. He did not accompany the Jews back to Jerusalem, but died in exile when more than ninety years of age. B.C. 606 he interpreted Nebuchadnezzar's dream, which brought him into notice. Twenty-three years later, the Three Children were, in his absence, saved from the fiery furnace. Ten years afterwards he interpreted the king's second dream, and acted as viceroy during the seven years of that monarch's madness. He lived in retirement during the reign of Belshazzar, who preferred younger counsellors, till the writing on the wall called him forth (B.C. 538). Afterwards he was promoted to the highest post of government by Darius, which he retained under Cyrus (536), thus serving under three dynasties—the Chaldean, the Median, and the Persian.

His book consists of two distinct volumes, the prophecies of the latter being synchronous with some of the historical events narrated in the former; e.g. the first vision occurred in the first year of Belshazzar (B.C. 555); the second in 553; the third in the first year of Darius (538); the last in the third of Cyrus (534). The historical part (chaps. ii. 4—vii) is in Chaldee; the prophetical in Hebrew. In the former Daniel is spoken of in the third person, in the latter in the first; but he is believed to have been the author of both portions. Our Lord speaks of him as a prophet (Matt. xxiv. 15). An allusion is made to him in Heb. xi. 33, 34; and his language is adopted in the Revelation of John the Divine, which is the counterpart of his book in the New Testament.

Chap. ii. predicts the course of the Five Great Empires of the world, which should succeed each other in supremacy—viz. the Babylonian, Persian, Grecian, Roman, and Christian. In chap. vii. the four worldly empires, under the figure of four beasts, are viewed in their religious aspect. In chap. viii. is predicted the struggle between the Persian and Grecian powers, and the rise of the corrupting influence of Antiochus Epiphanes ("the little horn"), which prepared the way for the final overthrow of the Jews by the Romans. Then follow the precise prophecies regarding the Messiah. In seven weeks (forty-nine years) the city would be rebuilt; in sixty-two weeks (434 years) Christ would begin His ministry, and in the middle of one week (three and a half years) He would be cut off. Chap. x. foretells the opposition of the Persian power to the restoration of the Jews; while chap. xi. more minutely predicts the history of the four Persian kings, that of Alexander and his successors, till the conquest of Syria by Rome, followed by a forecast of the growth of the supremacy of Christ's kingdom to the end of the world.

This book is the first of a series of apocalyptic writings, which culminate in the Revelation of John the Divine. It has exercised far greater influence on Christian theology than any other writing of the Old Testament, depicting, as it does, not merely the Advent of the Messiah, but the effect and influence of His human existence upon the whole future of the human race. Hence, Daniel's writings are not forewarnings of coming events, or divine threats of punishment, neither are they strictly prophetic; but they have a far wider range, disclosing the philosophy of history, both sacred and profane, revealing to the Jews the great mission destined for them in the regeneration of mankind. Thus, with Ezekiel, the latter portion of the Book of Daniel forms the connecting link between the prophecies of the Jewish dispensation and the more universal revelation of Christ and His followers.

This traditional interpretation (which dates back as far as the Second Book of Esdras and the Epistle of Barnabas) is rejected by some modern commentators, because it is thought to lose sight of the cyclic development of history; so that the Divine utterance, which has its first fulfilment in one period, receives a further and more complete one in the corresponding part of some other period. According to them, the four empires are, the Babylonian, Median, Persian, and Greek; while the fifth (the Christian), striking the feet of the composite image, crushed the foundations of them all (viz. heathen mythology), and prepared the way for its own supremacy over all future dominions. Each of these has its antitype in the Christian era—Babylon in Rome, Media in Byzantium, Persia, with its divided power, in the Teutonic races, while the great Northern nations may hereafter rival the conquests of Alexander;—all these being eventually superseded in the triumph of Christ's second Kingdom, as the former empires were by His first Advent. In this way the Book of Daniel is both a prophecy and a revelation.

DATE AND AUTHORSHIP. No doubt was expressed as to the authorship of Daniel, or as to the reality of the events narrated in the book, until the fourth century A.D., when Porphyry denied the truth of the prophecies concerning Antiochus Epiphanes (in whose reign he supposed the work to have been written), while affirming the historical accuracy of the preceding ones. A considerable number of modern German critics have rejected the whole book as spurious, on the ground that the earlier chapters record miracles surpassing belief, and that the prophetic portion represents historic events in such minute detail as to preclude the possibility of its being written before those events. These objections are founded on a disbelief in miraculous power and in prophetic inspiration; and those who advanced them assign the composition of the book to the period between B.C. 170 and 164. But it is impossible to believe that an impostor would have written what professed to be one continuous book partly in Chaldee and partly in Hebrew, intermingled with Greek words. The tone of the whole is thoroughly Eastern, and the Jewish tradition is most reasonable, that each historical event was recorded at the time it happened, and each vision also, by Daniel himself; that these documents were conveyed, with other sacred works, from Babylon to Jerusalem, at the time of "the Return," and that they (as well as the Visions of Ezekiel) were put together in their later form by the "Great Synagogue." Dr. Pusey says, "that neither its language, nor its historical references, nor its doctrines imply any later date than that of Daniel himself; but that, contrariwise, the character of its Hebrew exactly fits with the period of Daniel, that of its Chaldee excludes any later period: that the minute, fearless touches, involving details of customs, state institutions, history, belong to a contemporary," &c.

CANONICITY. This was never doubted until the last two centuries, though the exceptional nature of the book caused it to be isolated by the Jewish canonists, who hesitated to give it a place among the prophets, but arranged it with the Babylonish documents between Esther and Nehemiah. Its popularity in early times was so great that large additions and alterations were introduced into the LXX. version, which became entirely discredited, and was superseded by that of Theodotion. The latter, as well as the Vulgate, retained the principal additions, which are relegated to the Apocrypha in the English Bible; and the old LXX. was long totally lost, and only discovered and published in the last century.

JONAH (Dove), son of Amittai (true), the author and subject of the book called by his name, was born at Gath-hepher, in Zebulun, two miles from Sephorim. He is the same prophet who is sent to Jeroboam II (2 Kings xiv. 25), in answer to the bitter cry of affliction that rose from Israel. The deliverance then worked by God brought no return of allegiance to Him. Jonah is next sent with a message of warning to their threatening invaders, the Assyrians. The contrast between the Gentile sailors and heathen Ninevites and the prophet is so greatly in favour of the former, as to stamp the narrative with truthfulness. The writer leaves us with his impetuous will unbroken (though rebuked) and unexplained, while he closes his book with God's words of tender mercy. The clue to his unwillingness and murmuring may have been his foreknowledge that the nation, so spared, was destined to be God's instrument for the punishment of his native country. The King of Nineveh was the Pul of Scripture.

THE GENUINENESS of the book is proved by the character of the language and the archaic idioms which pervade it; and the second chapter shows the writer to be imbued with a knowledge of the Psalms, which he adapts to his own needs, but does not quote.

It is also corroborated by the accuracy of its historical and geographical details, and by our Lord's own affirmation of its truth and of its typical significance. But some German critics, who disbelieve in miracles, regard it as fabulous or parabolic, and ascribe its composition to the time of Josiah. It has, however, been regarded as Canonical both by Jews and Christians, and is ranked among the prophetical books because of its typical reference to the Resurrection of the Messiah.

HOSEA, JOEL, AMOS, were contemporaries. It is most probable that Joel prophesied to Judah at the same time that Amos forewarned Israel, and that these two slightly preceded Hosea, who, like Amos, was sent to the Israelites.

HOSEA (Salvation) prophesied for sixty years during the reigns of the last six kings of Israel (Jeroboam II to Hoshea). He began to prophesy before Isaiah, with whom he was contemporary. The idolatry of Jeroboam had produced all kinds of vice; the kings were profligate; the priests had introduced shameful rites throughout the land; God was forgotten; the rulers looked to Assyria or to Egypt for help in their misfortunes, and Hosea compares their defection to the unfaithfulness of a wife to her marriage vows. His illustrations are taken from rural and domestic pursuits (e.g. snaring of birds, sowing, reaping, threshing, and baking of bread). He gives us some insight into the modes of life of that day, e.g. the women were decked with earrings and jewels; the feasts and sabbaths were "days of mirth;" the people sacrificed on mountain tops, burnt incense on hills, "under oaks, and poplars, and elms;" while "troops of robbers wait for a man." This book is quoted by our Lord, by the Evangelist Matthew, and the apostles Peter and Paul.

It may be divided into two parts: (1) A symbolical representation (i—iii) of the adoption of the people, their rebellion and rejection, the conversion of the Gentiles, and the final restoration of Israel. (2) Prophetic discourses, illustrated by images of the most vivid character.

JOEL (Jehovah is God) was of the tribe of Reuben, and the son of Pethuel, and lived not later than the time of Uzziah, for he does not mention Assyria by name among the foes of Judah. The Jews say that he lived in the time of the drought (2 Kings viii. 1) of Elisha; but we should probably understand that mentioned by Amos (iv. 7). The book begins with a warning of an impending visitation of locusts and drought, regarded as a figurative picture of threatened invasions, the "northern army" being that of Assyria, at that time unknown to them. The prophet exhorts the people of Judah to repentance, fasting, and prayer, to avert these calamities: promising a blessing in their stead, and the outpouring of the Spirit on all flesh, with a warning of the destruction of Jerusalem as typical of the final judgment in the Valley of Jehoshaphat; the foundation of a new city, and the inauguration of Messiah's kingdom in peace and prosperity. This book is quoted by Peter (Acts ii. 16—21), and Paul (Rom. x. 13).

DATE. Both the style and subject-matter confirm the Hebrew tradition that Joel was the earliest of the prophets of Judah, since he foretells, in general language only, the future evils which were to come upon them from the Northern invasion, which was evidently still distant, since the prophecy is vague and there is an absence of particularity. Some modern critics have conjectured that he prophesied in the reign of Hezekiah, others in that of Manasseh, others in that of Josiah. The LXX. places the book after that of Amos and Micah.

AMOS (Burden) prophesied to the ten tribes within the twenty-five years during which Uzziah and Jeroboam II were contemporary (B.C. 809—784), "two years before the earthquake" (see Zech. xiv. 5). He was, till sent by God to prophesy at Beth-el against the worship of the calves, a shepherd of Tekoa in Judah, and a dresser of sycamore trees. But he must also have preached at Samaria, since he rebukes the vices of a capital —extreme luxury, revelry, debauchery—and contrasts them with the excessive poverty and oppression of the poor. Israel was at the height of its prosperity (under Jeroboam II the poor were oppressed, luxury abounded, and God was forgotten). He preached against the nations around the two kingdoms (Syria, Philistia, Tyre, Edom, Ammon, and Moab). He then describes the state of Israel and Judah, and especially charges Ephraim with ingratitude and obduracy. Next follow symbolical visions of successive punishments on Israel, culminating in ruin; but beyond that rises a hope of restored glory in the kingdom of the Messiah, in which the Gentiles will participate. In chap. vii. the idolatrous priest Amaziah complains to Jeroboam, who orders Amos to quit his kingdom. From this incident we have Beth-el depicted to us as a summer residence of the king, with its chief Temple of the Calves, and its hierarchy of royal chaplains (vii. 13), and the result of Amos' words of woe, that they had roused the people from one end of the land to the other. His illustrations are from agricultural pursuits: e.g. "a cart full of sheaves," "corn sifted in a sieve," the "latter-growth after the king's mowings," "every cow at the breach that is before her," &c.

The book presupposes an acquaintance with the Law of Moses, and implies that the proper form of worship was in accordance with it. It also bears strong evidence that the writer was familiar with the Book of Job, who, on that account, has been thought by some to have lived near Tekoa (see JOB). As the book is not a series of distinct prophecies, but one connected whole, there is no doubt that it was written in its present form by Amos after his return from Beth-el to Tekoa, though it probably reproduced, in more logical form, the substance of his preaching while at Beth-el.

SUMMARY. 1. (i.—ii. 3): He denounces the sins of the nations bordering on Israel and Judah. 2. (ii. 4—vi. 14): He describes the state of those two kingdoms, especially the former. 3. (vii. 1—ix. 10): He reflects on the previous prophecy, relates his visit to Beth-el, and sketches the impending punishment of Israel, which he predicted to Amaziah. 4. (ix. 11—15): He depicts the Advent of the Messiah, and the final restoration of His people.

MICAH (Who is like unto Jehovah?) was a native of Moresheth-gath, east of Eleutheropolis. He follows the three previous prophets, and Isaiah (who survived him), reiterating their warnings. He died in the days of Hezekiah (Jer. xxvi. 18, 19). He is referred to as a prophet by Jeremiah; his language is quoted by Zephaniah (iii. 19), and Ezekiel (xxii. 27), and by our Lord (Matt. x. 35). He depicts the ruin of both kingdoms; portrays the future and better destinies of the people; shows the mercy and justice of God in contrast with the ingratitude of His people; and foretells the invasions of Shalmaneser and Sennacherib, the dispersion of Israel, the cessation of prophecy, the destruction of Jerusalem and of Assyria, the birthplace of Christ, His Divine nature, and the universality of His Kingdom.

According to the superscription, he prophesied during the reigns of Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, i.e. for a period of about fifty years, since Jotham came to the throne B.C. 756 and Hezekiah died B.C. 697. Hebrew tradition asserts that he transmitted from Isaiah, to Joel, Nahum, and Habakkuk, the mysteries of the Kabbala. One prophecy (iii. 12) belongs to Hezekiah's reign, and probably preceded the Great Passover (Jer. xxvi. 18).

SUMMARY. Although the prophecies were probably delivered at different times, they have been cast into one complete whole in their present form, no doubt by the prophet himself. They are divided into three sections, each marked by a formula, "Hear ye," each beginning with denunciation and ending with a promise.

Section I. The Advent of Jehovah for judgment of the idolatry of Israel and Judah. 1. (i—ii. 13): Forewarning of impending judgment. 2. Its cause—the unfaithfulness of prophets. 3. The threatened punishment; viz. the scourge of an Assyrian invasion. 4. Promise of restoration.

Section II. Judgment on Jerusalem. 1. Rebuke of the rulers of the people (iii. 14). 2. Rebuke of false prophets (iii. 6). 3. Punishment in the desolation of Mount Sion (iii. 9—12). 4. Restoration of Zion, of its Temple, and of the people, with a gathering-in of all nations under the sovereignty of the Messiah (iv—v. 15). [Ewald divides this portion into four strophes.]

Section III. Dialogue between Jehovah and His people, in justification of His government (ch. vi).

NAHUM (Consolation) was a native of Elkosh, whose site is unknown, but it was traditionally a little village in Galilee. He is thought to have prophesied after the captivity of the ten tribes, and between the two invasions of Sennacherib, whom Hezekiah had bribed with the treasure of the Temple. He comes as a consoler from Jehovah, foretelling the death of Sennacherib, and the overthrow of Assyria; but his book is chiefly the sequel to that of Jonah; the latter having warned Nineveh of impending punishment, which God remitted on its repentance, Nahum now repeats the denunciations.

Jonah concluded with the declaration of God's mercy, "slow to anger," and "repenting of evil." Nahum begins by announcing the certainty of His judgment. Nineveh had sunk back into its old sins of violence, robbery, and bloodshed, with blasphemy and hostility against God. Nahum pronounces its sentence. Its destruction was near, and would be swift and complete. There are three very distinct predictions: (1) The sudden destruction of Sennacherib's army (i. 12), and his death in the house of his god (i. 14). (2) The inevitable capture of Nineveh by the sudden irruption of the river in the midst of the siege (ii. 6). (3) Its utter desolation (iii). In Nahum's time it was the largest and most opulent city in the world. It was captured by Cyaxares (about B.C. 606), and utterly destroyed, so that its very site was unknown a century or two after its fall. Its ruins have been explored by Botta, Layard, and others during the present century, and numerous Assyrian antiquities have been brought to Europe.

DATE AND AUTHORSHIP. Some commentators, both ancient and modern, have assigned Alkush, on the Tigris, as the place of his birth, considering him to be the son of an Israelite captive, and the vivid picture of Nineveh to have been drawn by him from personal observation; while they also affirm that the interspersion of Assyrian words in his book points to that country as the scene of his prophecies. Others deny that internal evidence favours any other than a Palestinian origin of the work, which accords with the greatest weight of external evidence. The time of his prophecy is no less controverted. Some make him contemporary with Hosea, Amos, and Jonah (in the reign of Joash); others, with Zechariah, Haggai, and Malachi; and, while some German critics place him in the time of Ahaz, Hezekiah, Manasseh, or Josiah, Josephus distinctly states (Antiq. ix. 11) that he prophesied in the reign of Jotham.

ZEPHANIAH (Jehovah hath guarded), whose pedigree, traced by himself (chap. i. 1), is generally allowed to connect him with king Hezekiah, prophesied at the beginning of Josiah's reign (B.C. 642—611). For fifty years prophecy was silent, during most of which time the wicked reign of Manasseh hurried on the judgments of God. The book commences with a general warning against Judah, and the idolatrous worship of Baal and Moloch, followed by judgments threatening Philistia, Moab, Ammon, Ethiopia, and Nineveh, and concluding with special reproofs to Jerusalem, illuminated by the promise of restoration to glory in the latter days. There is much similarity of expression between this book and that of Jeremiah.

SUMMARY. I. The judgment on Judæa, and its causes (chap. i). II. A call to repentance, with a promise of restoration and return to peace (ii). III. Reproof of Jerusalem, and the vice of its people (iii.1—7). IV. Promises of restoration of the people, and destruction of their enemies (iii. 8—20).

HABAKKUK (Embrace) was a younger contemporary of Jeremiah, and prophesied in Judah during the first half of the reign of Jehoiakim, when the invasion of Nebuchadnezzar was imminent. He did not accompany the captives, but, like Jeremiah, he lamented the iniquities of his country in the midst of its ruins. Habakkuk foretells the destruction of the Chaldæans, portraying their pride and self-confidence; expostulates with God for destroying His own people by such wicked instruments; and on a re-assurance of the final triumph of faith, he pours forth a sublime song of praise for the power and mercy of Jehovah, with a prayer for the redemption of His people, and confidence in His mercy. This book is quoted in Acts xiii. 41; Rom. i. 17; Gal. iii. 11; Heb. x. 37.

The subscription, "To the chief singer on my stringed instruments," shows that it was used as a psalm, in which the prophet took a part, and was incorporated into the Temple service. Hence Habakkuk must have been a Levite. The whole is a colloquy between him and God. It opens with a plaintive recitative of "the faithful," struggling under the painful spectacle of the good among God's people suffering from the oppression of the evil, interspersed with God's answer of judgment awaiting them from the Chaldees. This is followed by the prophet's appeal for the righteous who will suffer with the wicked, which swells into a vivid picture of the Chaldæan scourge sweeping irresistibly before him: and then there is a brief silence of expectation for the reply, which (chap. ii) reveals the judgment upon Chaldæa. Then rises the note of prayer, which introduces the great hymn of faith, recounting the miraculous deliverances of old as earnests of future ones, and closing with the vision of all nature desolate, and God's enemies prostrate, but faith exultant in the God of salvation.

DATE. The Rabbis fix the time of this prophecy in the reign of Manasseh, with which its subject seems to accord; but modern German critics prefer that of Josiah, while others have made Habakkuk contemporary with Ezekiel and Daniel in Babylonia, and with Haggai and Zechariah in Judæa.

OBADIAH (Worshipper of Jehovah) prophesied, it has been conjectured, before the destruction of Jerusalem (B.C. 588), and the conquest of Edom (583). As Nahum had foretold the downfall of Assyria, and Habakkuk that of Chaldæa, so Obadiah predicts that of the implacable foe of Israel, Edom, warning the Edomites not to rejoice in the day of their brother's calamity (for the Hebrew tenses are future, not past as in our translation). He foretells the utter annihilation of Edom, and contrasts it with the future restoration of Israel, which should also possess the land of Edom and Philistia, and enjoy the promises of her offspring, the Messiah.

Verses 1 to 8 are extremely similar to a passage in Jeremiah (xlix. 14 foll.). This similarity has caused a doubt which of the two prophets repeated the denunciations of the other; and therefore the exact date of this book is rendered uncertain, some advocating its priority to that of Jeremiah, others ascribing it to a later date. Dr. Pusey maintains that the Hebrew future determines the question in favour of the priority of the Book of Obadiah. Those who take the opposite view conjecture that the occasion of this prophecy was the hostility shown by the sons of Esau to their brethren the Israelites at the time of the Babylonish invasion. They seem to have rejoiced in the downfall of Jerusalem, and to have cut off those Jews who attempted to fly through Idumæa into Egypt. Hence arose the prayer of the Jewish captives in Babylon (Ps. cxxxvii. 7), and the answer to it in the denunciations of Obadiah, who predicts the Divine retribution on Edom, and the future glory of Israel in the occupation of Idumæa. This prophecy was partially fulfilled by Nebuchadnezzar, and further by the entire subjugation of Edom by John Hyrcanus, which thenceforth vanishes from history; but its completion, in the possession of Idumæa by the Israelites, must still be anticipated after the final return of that people to their promised inheritance; and therefore this book is the favourite study of the Jews to this day.

SUMMARY. 1. The Edomites fancied themselves secure in the fastnesses of their rocks (ver. 3). 2. The spoiler should utterly destroy them (vers. 4—16). 3. The chastisement inflicted on the Jews should be but temporary; and, after their return from captivity, they should possess Edom and Philistia, and at length rejoice in the glorious reign of the Messiah (17—21).

The Prophets after the Restoration are HAGGAI, ZECHARIAH, MALACHI. Jewish tradition identifies them with the three men with Daniel when he saw the vision (Dan. x. 7). After the Captivity they were members, it is said, of the "Great Synagogue" of 120 elders.

HAGGAI (Festive) was probably born at Babylon, and accompanied Zerubbabel to Jerusalem; though some consider that he had seen the glory of the old Temple before its destruction (see ii. 3), and that he was one of the very aged exiles who laid the foundation of the new Temple in tears (Ezra iii. 12). He was inspired by God to rouse the people to support Zerubbabel and Joshua (the High Priest) in building the Temple, after the work had been suspended for fourteen years in consequence of the counter-edict obtained by the Samaritans from Artaxerxes. When the decree of Cyrus was confirmed by Darius, the people were in a lethargic state, preferring their own temporal prosperity to the restoration of God's house, till drought and mildew wrung penitence from them. The prophecy is short and condensed. Haggai reproves their lethargy, and promises a blessing upon the work. In twenty-four days they recommence the building. The youthful Zechariah is moved to second Haggai's work, but, after one brief prophecy, is silenced. After four weeks they become despondent, and compare the new Temple with the old; but Haggai foretells greater glory for the former. Two months later he again rebukes their slowness, and promises Divine favour. He finally appeals to Zerubbabel, as heir of the house of David, and predicts the stability of the Kingdom of God amidst the ruin of temporal sovereignties. He only prophesied for four months. He is quoted in Heb. xii. 26.

Haggai and Zechariah are associated in the LXX. in the titles of Psalms cxxv, cxxvi, cxlv—cxlviii; and they are mentioned in 1 Esdras vi. 1; vii. 3.

ZECHARIAH (Whom Jehovah remembers), the son of Berechiah, and grandson of Iddo, was probably of the tribe of Levi, born in Babylon, and likewise came to Jerusalem with Zerubbabel. He began to prophesy two months after Haggai (i. 1), and continued during two years, encouraging the Jews to prosecute the erection of the Temple. He also foreshadowed the history of the people and of the Christian Church. The book is full of allusions to the Advent of the Messiah, and is frequently quoted in the New Testament. It consists of three parts: (1) Nine visions of the glory of the kingdom and worship of the Messiah (i—vi). (2) A colloquy between the prophet and a deputation from Babylon, regarding the fasts of penitence for the destruction of the Temple, and his exhortation to convert them into feasts of restoration (vii, viii). (3) The history of the Jews and of the Church to the final judgment (ix—xiv).

SUMMARY. Section I. The nine visions, viz. 1. (i. 7—17): A rider on a red horse, among the myrtle-trees, symbolising a general peace over the whole land, and the cessation of opposition to the building of the Temple. 2. (i. 18—21): Four horns (i.e. four enemies of the Jews), and four carpenters, by whom they are broken. 3. (ii. 1—9): A man with a measuring-line, enlarging the boundaries of Jerusalem; i.e. her increase, enclosing the Gentiles. 4. (iii): Joshua (the High Priest), changing filthy garments for new ones, signifies the restoration of Judah, and advent of "The Branch." 5. (iv): A golden lamp, fed by two olive-trees; i.e. the rebuilding of the Temple, and future glorification of the Church by the unction of the Holy Spirit. 6. (v. 1–4): A flying roll; i.e. vengeance on the ungodly. 7. (v. 5–11): A woman, pressed into an ephah by leaden weight, and borne eastward; i.e. repression and banishment of idolatry. 8. (vi. 1–8): Four chariots issuing from two brazen mountains; i.e. the course of Divine Providence. 9. (vi. 9–15): Crowning of Joshua; i.e. the regal and priestly office of "The Branch."

Section II. Colloquy between the prophet and exiles regarding the fasts.

1. (vii). The nature of a true fast.

2. (viii). On conversion of fasts into feasts.

Section III. The future destiny of the Jewish Church and people. 1. (ix. 1–7): Peace under Alexander's rule. 2. (ix. 12–17): Revival of power under the Maccabees. 3. (xi–xii. 12): A reverse (caused by the rejection of Messiah—punished by the destruction of Jerusalem). 4. (xii. 3–14): A period of penitence and hope. 5 (xiv): Return of the Messiah to Jerusalem in triumph over His enemies, and the inauguration of theocratic glory.

DATE. The style of the book, and the frequent Chaldaisms, establish the lateness of its composition. The difference between the earlier and later portions has led some modern critics to doubt the genuineness of the last six chapters, but their conjectures have been satisfactorily refuted.

MALACHI (Messenger of Jehovah), the last of the prophets, was contemporary with Nehemiah. He prophesied about B.C. 420.

According to one tradition, he was born at Sopha in Zebulon, after the Captivity, died young, and was buried there. According to another, "Malachi" was not a name, but an office, and some go so far as to declare that Haggai, Malachi, and John the Baptist were angels in human form. Hence, one Hebrew Targum identifies the writer of this book with Ezra, another with Zerubbabel, a third with Nehemiah. Internal evidence is conclusive in favour of the writer living after the death of Ezra and the second immigration of captives, since the abuses noted in the book are exactly those which Nehemiah reformed. The new Temple was already built, and its services fully re-established. Malachi reproves the profanity of the priests; foretells the sudden appearance of the Messiah to purify that Temple and its congregation; he rebukes the frequency of mixed marriages and divorces; threatens Israel with rejection for their impiety, and the adoption of the Gentiles; and closes with a prediction of the harbinger of the Sun of Righteousness, and a warning against infringement of the law of God.

The style is prosaic and rhetorical, rather than poetic, and more closely resembles a written philosophical discourse than the oracles of the Hebrew prophets. In the LXX. and Vulgate it consists of four chapters, as in the A.V.; but in the Hebrew, chapters iii. and iv. form but one. It is quoted as Scripture in the New Testament (Mark i. 2; ix. 11, 12; Luke i. 17; Rom. ix. 13).

The prophecy naturally divides itself into three sections: I. (i. 2—ii. 9): Jehovah is represented as the loving father and ruler of His people. It may be subdivided thus: 1. (i. 1—8): Jehovah asserts and proves His love to His people by reference to the punishment of Edom. 2. (i. 6—ii. 9): Rebuke of the priests, as the leaders of spiritual defection. II. (ii. 10—16): The prophet's reproof of mixed marriages and divorces, portrayed by the deserted wives weeping at the altar. III. The sudden appearance in the Temple of the Lord as the Judge, preceded by His forerunner. This section may be thus subdivided: 1. (ii. 17—iii. 5): A threat of punishment. 2. (iii. 6–12): A call to repentance. 3. (iii. 13—iv. 6): Reproof of distrust in God; forewarning of the final separation of good and bad; of the final judgment; and advent of the Messiah, heralded by Elijah. Thus prophecy closes with the announcement of the Messiah's coming, and prepares the people for the appearance of His precursor, John the Baptist, in the spirit and power of Elias (Matt. xi. 14; xvii. 10–13).

VI. SUMMARY OF THE APOCRYPHAL BOOKS.

These books form part of the sacred literature held in high esteem by the Alexandrian Jews, and appended by them to the LXX. translation of the Old Testament. They are for the most part, if not wholly, the product of the era subsequent to the commencement of the Captivity; part having their origin in Babylonia, during or after the Captivity, part belonging to the last three centuries B.C., when prophecy, oracles, and direct revelation had ceased. They form the historical link between the Old and New Testament, and have also a linguistic value in connexion with the Hellenistic phraseology of the latter. They differ from the former in the marked absence of prophetic teaching, of Divine revelation, and of religious poetry; while they point (as in the Book of Wisdom) to a spiritual kingdom which shall be eternal. The account there given of the Exodus suggests the existence of traditionary narratives (besides that which is contained in the Pentateuch), from which certain additions found in the New Testament (e.g. in Stephen's speech) were derived. The LXX. had been formed on a Hebraic mould, so that Hebraisms were sure to manifest themselves; but in the Apocrypha (much of which was originally written in Greek) we find the same Hebraic cast of thought and expression. Thus the Hellenistic phraseology of the New Testament was not a new thing, even when applied to original composition, but had become habitual.

As to their Canonical authority, Josephus seems to reject it. The early Christians differed in opinion respecting them, but received them as part of the sacred literature. Melito, referring to the Hebrew Canon, separated them from the authoritative and Divine records. Jerome called them "apocryphal" (hidden, secret, and so spurious), affirming that "the Church doth read them for example of life and instruction of manners; but yet doth it not apply them to establish any doctrine."

In the Western Church they gradually rose in esteem, until the Council of Trent affirmed the Canonicity of the major part; but they are treated by the more critical Roman divines as "deutero-canonical."

It is not generally supposed that the books were written by those whose names they bear, but rather that the names of men illustrious in Hebrew history (e.g. Ezra and Solomon, whose writings bore most resemblance to them), were affixed to them by the writers. They are valuable historically, as supplying us with the struggles of the Jews under the Syrian Kings, of which the records elsewhere are scanty.

THE BOOKS OF ESDRAS, although quoted largely by Josephus, by Athanasius, and some other early Christian writers, do not seem to have been ever regarded as strictly "Canonical."

THE FIRST BOOK appears to be a compilation of narratives by different authors, the original part of the document being confined to chapters iii—v. 6. Chapter i. is a repetition of the last two chapters of the Second Book of Chronicles, with some abridgments and variations of text. The rest of the book is a transcript of portions of Ezra and Nehemiah, with the apparent intention of narrating the legend about Zerubbabel, and of explaining the great obscurities of the Book of Ezra; but it is impossible to reconcile the various parts either with Holy Scripture or with one another, and therefore the latter portion of the book is thought by many not to be the work of a single author. Only Greek and Latin versions of the book are known to exist.

THE SECOND BOOK. The more ancient title was the "Revelation of Ezra," but it is more commonly known as the "Fourth Book of Ezra." The original text seems to have been in Greek, from which Arabic, Ethiopic, and Latin translations have been made; and the English version has been entirely taken from the Latin. This text contains certain interpolations (chaps. i, ii; xv, xvi), which seem to be of Christian origin, and omits a long passage after chap. vii. 35, on the "intermediate state" and "intercession of departed souls," probably rejected on dogmatic grounds. From internal evidence it would seem to have been written in Egypt, by a Jew, between B.C. 100 and A.D. 100. It consists of angelic revelations and a series of visions, teaching some of the mysteries of the moral world, and the final triumph of the righteous.

Revelation I. On the unsearchableness of God's purposes, and the signs of the last age.

II. On the progress of the plan of Providence, and the growth of evil.

III. Answers objections to the narrow limits prescribed for the hope of regeneration; and foretells the second advent of the Messiah.

Vision I. A woman (Sion) lamenting the death of her only son (i.e. the city of Solomon) on his bridal day; but her sorrow is turned into joy at the appearance of a newly-built city.

II. An eagle (Rome) rising from the sea, spreads its wings over the earth, undergoes various transformations, is rebuked by a lion (Messiah), and is burnt up.

III. A Man (Messiah), flying on the clouds, destroys by the blast of His mouth the opposing powers of the world, gathers the lost tribes of Israel, and gives them the city of Sion.

The last chapter records the appearance of the Lord in a burning bush, who gives to Ezra the books of the Law which had been burnt; and Ezra dictates to the scribes the twenty-four Canonical books, and seventy books of secret mysteries.

THE BOOK OF ESTHER consists of certain interpolated passages found in the Septuagint Version of Esther, which are not in the original Hebrew copy. They fill up the narrative, and supply the Name of God as the Prime Mover in the events, which Name nowhere occurs in the original. These interpolated passages are supposed to have been inserted at a later date by the Alexandrine Jews. Jerome removed them from the text, and placed them, with some explanations, among the uncanonical books; but his notes have been swept away, and these disconnected fragments printed consecutively, as if they formed a complete continuation of the Canonical book.

THE BOOK OF WISDOM. The original seems to be in Greek, and is contained in the chief biblical MSS.; but there is an ancient Latin version older than the time of Jerome, and translations in Armenian, Syriac, and Arabic (of which the last two are paraphrastic).

It consists of two main parts: I. (Chaps. i—ix): The praise of wisdom in its moral and intellectual aspects: 1st, as the source of immortality in contradiction to the theory of sensualists; 2nd, as the practical guide of moral and intellectual life. II. (Chaps. x—xix): The doctrine of wisdom in its historical aspect: 1. An illustration of the influence of wisdom in the reward of the virtuous and the punishment of the vicious, both in the case of individuals (from Adam to Moses), and of nations (e.g. the Egyptians and Canaanites); followed by (chaps. xv—xix) a contrast between the fortunes of idolatrous and religious people. The harmony pervading the whole book contradicts the opinion that it is a compilation from several authors who wrote at different times, though some have attributed the former part to Solomon, and the latter to a subsequent translator of his work. It possesses the highest literary excellence, and is comparable for sublimity of thought, rhetorical power, and command of language with some of the finest productions of classical antiquity.

Its diction, as well as its doctrine, points to a Greek original, unfettered by Hebrew idioms. The doctrine of the creation of the world from uncreated matter, the pre-existence of souls, the pervading influence of the Divine Spirit throughout the universe, the absence of the Christian doctrine of the resurrection of the body, and of any reference to the regeneration of humanity by the Messiah, while immortality is vividly depicted as the reward and consequence of wisdom, all point to Alexandria as the place of its composition, and to a period anterior to Christianity, in which Hebrew thought and Greek philosophy of various schools had become fused together.

Its date is variously conjectured, from B.C. 150—B.C. 50; but its style and diction seem to point to an earlier date than that of Philo, to whom it has been ascribed. Passages in Paul's writings suggest his acquaintance with this book, but no quotation from it is found earlier than the second century A.D., when it seems to be treated as inspired Scripture. With Proverbs and Ecclesiastes it forms a sacred trilogy, in which the doctrine of Wisdom is developed, as an eternal existence with the Creator, acting on created matter, as the source of life, and continuing in the land of spirits; thus laying the foundation for the Christian doctrine of the existence and influence of the Divine Word and Holy Spirit. All the questions connected with this book are fully examined by the Rev. W. J. Deane, in his edition recently published (Clarendon Press, 1881).

ECCLESIASTICUS is so called in the Vulgate and A. V. from its local name in the African Church, gained from its practical use as a Church Lectionary or "Reading Book." Its more general name is that of "The Wisdom" or "The Proverbs of Jesus the Son of Sirach." Both internal evidence and the testimony of Jerome sufficiently attest the existence of a Hebrew original (now lost), which was subsequently translated, with some additions, by the grandson of the author, resident in Alexandria, in the reign of Euergetes (see the Prologues). The date of this translation is rendered uncertain from there being two monarchs bearing that title, viz. Ptolemy III and Ptolemy VII; and this uncertainty is not corrected by the mention among Hebrew worthies of "Simon, the son of Onias" (chap. l. 1), since this appellation would apply equally to Simon I and Simon II.

The book was not placed by the Hebrews among the Canonical Scriptures, nor is it so classed by Jerome; but it is quoted as such, and even attributed to Solomon, by many Christian writers after the second century. The text followed in the LXX, Vulgate, and A.V. is based on the translation above mentioned, but the order of its various portions is not uniform. It consists of a number of proverbs and wise sayings of ancient Hebrews, collected together by the compiler, who has appended to them additions of his own.

Its whole tone is Palestinian, without any trace of Greek philosophy. God is the Creator, Preserver, and Governor of the universe; the hope of restoration rests upon the future advent of Elias, and that of a resurrection seems fading away; religion has degenerated into minute external ritual observances; righteousness is imprisoned in innumerable legal enactments; and there is a tone of despondency underlying the exhortations to cheerfulness and resignation, which seems to point to a period between the termination of the "Great Synagogue" and the rise of the Maccabees.

THE BOOK OF BARUCH. This book, which bears the name of the companion of Jeremiah, was not regarded by the Jews as Canonical. No reference is made to it in the New Testament, or by the Apostolic Fathers; but subsequent Christian writers refer to it as the work of Jeremiah. No Hebrew version of it is known, and all others seem to be derived from a Greek original. It consists of two parts, the style and diction of the former being Hebraistic, and of the latter Hellenistic, which suggests that the former had a Hebrew original, and was probably written during the Persian period, while the latter was written in Greek, at Alexandria, about the time of the War of Liberation.

From the unity of the book, as it now stands, the writer of the second portion would seem at the same time to have translated the former; but the Epistle of Jeremiah (chap. vi) is considered to be the work of a later writer, not earlier than the first century B.C.

It is the only book in the Apocrypha formed on the model of the ancient prophets.

The first part (chaps. i—iii. 8) consists of an introduction, followed by a confession and prayer. The second part (chap. iii. 9 to the end) contains a rebuke of Israel for their sins, with a lamentation of Jerusalem over her children, followed (by an abrupt transition) by a triumphant apostrophe to Jerusalem, foretelling the return of her children and their abiding glory.

APOCRYPHAL ADDITIONS TO DANIEL. These three fragments are not found in the original text of the Book of Daniel, but have their origin in the LXX. version, and seem to embody certain popular traditions embellishing historical facts.

1. THE SONG OF THE THREE CHILDREN supplements the narrative in Daniel iii, and gives a supposed prayer of Azarias for deliverance from the fiery furnace, an account of the means by which the Three Children were saved, followed by a hymn of thanksgiving, sung by them in the fire, and which has been used in Christian worship, under the name of the "Benedicite," ever since the fourth century A.D. The prayer and also the hymn seem to have been similarly used in the Jewish Church after the Captivity.

2. THE HISTORY OF SUSANNA does not claim to form part of the Book of Daniel, but only to be an appendix to it. It is doubtless founded on an historical fact of Daniel's early career in Babylon, which has been embodied in a narrative for moral purposes, and seems to have an echo in an incident in our Saviour's life. By Christian writers it is made to bear an allegorical form, Susanna representing the Church, tempted to infidelity by Jewish and Pagan adversaries, and crying to God for help.

3. BEL AND THE DRAGON, called in the LXX. "Part of the Prophecy of Habakkuk," forms a preface to the plot against Daniel to cast him into the den of lions, and supplies the motive, which seems wanting in the original narrative. With this, however, it incidentally coincides in one important feature, viz. a threatened revolt of the princes against Darius unless he ratifies their decree, which is likewise alluded to in the Book of Daniel, and appears in striking contrast to the autrocatic power of that king's predecessors.

THE PRAYER OF MANASSES. The original prayer of the penitent king of Judah existed when the Book of Chronicles was written (2 Chron. xxxiii. 18), but has been long lost. This version is found in some copies of the LXX, and in the "Apostolic Constitutions," with a legend of his miraculous deliverance from captivity. Its date and authorship are both uncertain; but it is thought, from internal evidence, to have been written by a Jew, well acquainted with the LXX. only; and the doctrine of repentance, therein displayed, suggests a date approximating to the Christian era.

TOBIT. The standard text is that of the LXX, from which all other known versions are derived; but the style and subject of the narrative would suggest a Hebrew or Chaldee original. It has the appearance of an Oriental story, employed as a medium of moral and religious instruction, rather than of an embellished historical event; but its general agreement with fact seems not to have been doubted until modern times, although no corroboration of any portion of the narrative is to be found in any historical work. The influence of good and evil spirits on human affairs, here portrayed, belongs to the belief of a period later than the Babylonish Captivity.

From internal evidence the writer seems certainly to have been a Jew, resident in the East (probably at Babylon), while the kingdom of Media was still standing, and the complete restoration of Jerusalem not yet effected. The date, therefore, must be fixed between Nehemiah and Alexander the Great, most probably about B.C. 350.

The book has been more highly esteemed by Christians than by Jews. It presents a most vivid and pleasing picture of domestic life, and the influence of religion upon it, among the captive Jews, and in this respect it bears a strong affinity to the historical part of the Book of Job.

JUDITH. Of existing texts, both a Greek and a Latin version seem to have equal claims to be regarded as genuine, since neither is a translation of the other, but they differ materially in words and expressions, and especially in names and numbers. Jerome mentions a Chaldee version, with which he had compared the others; and there would seem to have been some earlier original, most probably in Syro-Chaldaic. The geographical and historical references in the book are so irreconcilable with known facts that there is little doubt that the book is an historical fiction, intended to revive a spirit of heroism in the Jews of Palestine, when it had been completely crushed out by a long period of oppression. It would seem as if the invasion of Judæa by Antiochus Epiphanes (B.C. 168), and the atrocities committed by Athenæus at Jerusalem, with the heroic resistance offered by the unknown mother and her seven sons, who all suffered martyrdom (2 Macc. vii. 27, &c.), suggested this story, to stimulate others to follow their example, and that to it is due the patriotism which resulted in their deliverance under the Maccabees. It is probable that the leading characters were taken from historical personages of the period, disguised under fictitious names, though some have regarded them as purely allegorical.

MACCABEES. There are four books bearing this title, but only the first and second have been regarded as worthy of a place among the sacred writings, because they supply the Hebrew history of the second century B.C., written after the model of the Books of Chronicles, though not under Divine inspiration. The origin of the name is doubtful, some attributing it to the initial letters of the war-cry (see page 36), others to the final letters of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and others again deriving it from Makkâbâh, "a hammer."

THE FIRST BOOK OF MACCABEES. Both ancient testimony and internal evidence point to a Hebrew original, written in Palestine, most probably between B.C. 120 and 100; but the English version is taken from a Greek translation, made at Alexandria (by some unknown hand), and annexed to the LXX. It consists of an introduction, containing a brief sketch of Alexander's conquest, followed by the invasion and oppression of Antiochus Epiphanes, culminating in his attempt to extirpate Hebrew nationality and worship. The main body of the work narrates the struggle for independence, beginning with Mattathias, and ending with Simon. It comprises a period of 33 years (B.C. 168—135). After an enumeration of the Maccabæan family, it relates the exploits of Mattathias and his five sons, by whom the struggle is carried on to a successful issue. The history divides itself into three distinct epochs, each stamped with the individuality of its leader—first, Judas; second, Jonathan; third, Simon—each of whom fell a victim to his patriotism.

THE SECOND BOOK OF MACCABEES seems to be a compilation, made from some extant materials furnished to the compiler at Alexandria. The main portion of the book is derived from a previous work, called the "Five Books of Jason, of Cyrene" (probably the son of Eleazar). From internal evidence these books appear to have been written, in Greek, between B.C. 125 and A.D. 70. The source from which the first two chapters are taken is very doubtful; and, from the extravagance of the legends contained in them, they are not believed to be authentic, but to be the work of the unknown compiler, who is supposed to have written his book at Alexandria about the end of the second century B.C.

It is the main source from which the history anterior to the Maccabees is derived, comprising a period of 25 years from B.C. 185 (?)—161, so that a portion of the narrative is chronologically anterior to 1 Maccabees, another is contemporaneous with it, and a third is supplementary. It may be thus divided: 1. The two introductory chapters, addressed by the Council at Jerusalem to the Jews at Alexandria. 2. The history of Heliodorus (chap. iii). 3. The beginning and course of the great persecution (chaps. iv—vii). 4. The fortunes of Judas to the restoration of the Temple service (chaps. viii—x. 9). 5. Reign of Antiochus Eupator (chaps. x. 10—xiii). 6. From the treachery of Alcimus to the final triumph of Judas (chaps. xiv and xv).

The main feature of the book is its high religious tone. In it are depicted the Divine influence over human events, retributive justice, the connexion between the visible and spiritual world, and the doctrine of a future resurrection. Holding these opinions, the compiler seems to have used historical events in support of them rather than to have adhered to strict accuracy of detail; hence there are many discrepancies between this book and 1 Maccabees which are otherwise inexplicable.

VII. CHRONOLOGY OF THE OLD TESTAMENT,

ACCORDING TO USHER.

1. HISTORICAL SUMMARY FROM ADAM TO CHRIST.

AT the Fall of man the promise of a restorer of the race was given, and was afterwards at intervals renewed; but it was open to the whole of mankind, "the seed of the woman," until the time of Abraham, when it was restricted to his family; "in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." Abraham, called by God to leave his native place Ur (at that time the capital of Chaldæa), retires to Haran, with his father and the rest of his family. On his father's death, five years later, he is again bidden to travel to the south-west, passes through Damascus, and reaches Shechem (in the centre of the land, in the pass between Ebal and Gerizim), where God meets him and makes a covenant with him. Pursuing his journey he stops at Beth-el, where God renews the covenant. He still goes southward till he reaches Egypt, whence he is bidden to return; and he retraces his steps to Beth-el, where Lot leaves him, after which God promises him the whole land. He then removes southward to Mamre, where Ishmael is born, circumcision instituted, Isaac promised by the angel, and the destruction of Sodom revealed. After that event Abraham removed to Beer-sheba, where he lived the last seventy-five years of his life. Here Isaac was born and spent all his days. Jacob, at seventy-seven years of age, fled to Padan-Aram, returning after twenty years; settled at Shechem, removed to Beer-sheba, and was driven by famine into Egypt, where his descendants remained 215 years. Moses, by God's command, led them to the wilderness of Sinai, where they received from God a code of laws—social, political, and religious—and a complete constitution, with civil and ecclesiastical officers. After forty years' wandering in the wilderness, they entered Canaan, conquering on their way the aboriginal inhabitants east of Jordan, but sparing those akin to them. The extermination of the Canaanites in Palestine was miraculous, but incomplete because of the lethargy of the invaders. The succeeding 400 years of occupation was a period of listless anarchy, both priests and people being faithless to the theocracy, content with the indolent enjoyment of an exuberant land, of which the surviving remnants of the Canaanites (Philistines) and the kindred tribes of Hebrews (Amalekites, Edomites, Moabites, Midianites) tried to dispossess them. This warfare continued, until David subjugated the latter and made the former peaceful subjects, and Israel obtained full inheritance of the promise from the River of Egypt to the Euphrates, a sovereignty which lasted till the end of Solomon's reign.

A civil rupture rent the kingdom in twain. Ten tribes revolting sought to consolidate a separate sovereignty by establishing a rival worship, of which the two great shrines were at Dan and Beth-el. This rapidly declined into Baalism, which attained its zenith under Ahab, and was punished first by incursions of the Syrians, and afterwards by the invasion of the Assyrians, who carried the people captive, and colonised the country with a mixed idolatrous race, who mingled their native worship with that of Israel. From these sprang the "Samaritans," who intermarried with some of the Jews, borrowed their rites, accepted the Pentateuch, and set up a false temple on Gerizim. The two tribes, 133 years later, were carried captive by the Babylonians; but after seventy years (B.C. 536), a portion of them returned, and rebuilt Jerusalem and the Temple, the government being vested in a Persian Satrap resident at Damascus.

As the faith of Abraham had been rewarded by the inheritance of Canaan, the unfaithfulness of his descendants had forfeited it, and they were all sent back to that heathen land "between the rivers," from which their progenitor was divinely called; from which exile ten tribes never returned, but the remnant (principally of the tribe of Judah) came back, cured of idolatry, and looking hopefully for the restoration of their kingdom and the birth of the Promised Seed.

As the early undivided monarchy produced the devotional books of Holy Scripture, the later monarchy brought forth the earlier, and the Captivity the later prophets, with warnings from the past, and encouragement for the future; but the glorious picture which they drew of the Messiah's kingdom raised a mistaken conception of a temporal sovereignty, which the oppression of successive tyrants (between the Captivity and the birth of Christ) was intended to correct. The fiery trial through which the people passed, and the new life which it evoked, are recorded in the Books of the Maccabees; while the moral decline of those who remained in exile, and their substitution of superstition for religion, are painfully exhibited in the Book of Esther, and those apocryphal narratives, which are valuable literary and historical documents, but have been rejected from the Canon of Holy Scripture.

XIII. BRIEF HISTORICAL SUMMARY OF THE INTERVAL BETWEEN THE OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS, TAKEN CHIEFLY FROM

JOSEPHUS AND THE BOOKS OF MACCABEES.

EZRA and Nehemiah left a settled form of government in Palestine, the centre of which was Jerusalem. Here was established a council of elders and priests, who formed an ecclesiastical court, interpreting the Law, and enforcing its observance. These were called the "Great Synagogue." They were to the new settlement after the Captivity what the "elders that overlived Joshua" (Josh. xxiv. 31) were to the Israelites who came out of Egypt.

It was the Jewish theory that the Law was given in a twofold form, viz. the written and the oral; the former consisting of brief official enactments, the latter entering into more copious details. With the former code, immutably formalised by God, they said the latter was orally taught to Moses on Mount Sinai by the same Divine Author, as the authoritative interpretation thereof, with the command to commit the one to writing, but to transmit the other only by word of mouth. This oral law was repeated by Moses to Joshua, who handed it on to the elders who succeeded him, and they to the prophets, who, in their turn, passed it from one to another till it reached Jeremiah, who, through the medium of Baruch, conveyed it to Ezra, and he to the Great Synagogue, which Nehemiah also supplied with a library of all the sacred books he could collect (2 Macc. ii. 13). This body of elders lasted about 150 years, when it expired in its last survivor, the High Priest Simon the Just, B.C. 291. They are said to have numbered 120. To them the Jews owe the 613 Precepts; and this oral tradition may be considered the groundwork of the Talmud. It is to this "Great Synagogue" and its oral tradition that our Lord refers in the Sermon on the Mount, in the words, "it was said by them of old time" (Matt. v. 27), and elsewhere in His allusions to "the traditions of the elders."

Ezra and Nehemiah also set up synagogues in country towns, as places of worship on the sabbath, and as schools of instruction and theological discussion during the week. Attached to each was a body of "Rulers," who were both civil magistrates and ecclesiastical presbyters. Palestine was subject to Persia at this time, and formed part of a province under the Satrap of Syria, but these elders were allowed to administer the government with the high priest as their responsible head.

According to Jewish tradition, related by Josephus (Antiq. xi. 8. 1. ff.), and repeated in the Talmud, in later Jewish writers, and in the Chronicles of Abulfeda, and supported in some of its main features by historical facts (such as the freedom of Palestine from tribute during the Sabbatical years, &c.), Alexander the Great visited Jerusalem (B.C. 331) to punish the Jews for their refusal to transfer their allegiance to him, when summoned to do so during his siege of Tyre. After the reduction of Tyre and Gaza he is said to have approached Jerusalem with hostile intent; but Jaddua the high priest, in conformity with a dream, awaited his approach, clad in his priestly robes of hyacinth and gold, and accompanied by a train of priests and citizens arrayed in white. Alexander, moved by the novel spectacle, did reverence to the high priest and kissed the sacred inscription on his mitre, alleging that he had seen in a dream that same venerable form, who had promised him success in his Eastern campaign. To this incident are said to be due the peculiar privileges accorded by Alexander to the Jews in Palestine, Babylonia, and Media, which they continued to enjoy under his successors, and which were afterwards confirmed and enlarged by the Romans. After subduing Egypt, and building Alexandria, he invited a number of Jews to settle there, granting them many privileges and immunities.

Alexander's conquests broke down the barriers separating one kingdom from another, and especially those between the Asiatic and European states. Men learned to understand each other's thoughts, while Greek literature and intelligence spread over the East, and the Greek language became almost universal. After the battle of Ipsus (B.C. 301) Palestine was a kind of neutral territory between the rival empires of Syria and Egypt; and while from time to time the prey of each, its strategic importance enabled it to make favourable terms with whichever empire it acknowledged to be supreme. Internally it was able to resist the revolution which Greek supremacy effected. Ezra's Constitution was fully developed, a powerful hierarchy had substituted the idea of a Church for that of a nation, and the Jew mixed with other peoples and lived in other lands without losing any of his allegiance to his own Deity or to his peculiar customs. As a whole, the Jewish nation realised their mission as the teachers of religion to the world, and were ready to fulfil it. The opportunity and power to do so were furnished by Alexander's conquests. While they learnt independence from the example of Greece, and soon became divided into sects (analogous to the typical forms of Greek philosophy), this freedom of thought was modified, in their case, by the contemplative temper of the East. Henceforward Alexandria exercised a greater influence on Judaism, in its relation to other nations, than did Jerusalem, since that city was the point of contact between Eastern and Western thought. Ptolemy Soter's invasion of Judæa (B.C. 320) led to a further settlement of Jews at Alexandria (partly as captives, partly as colonists). Under his successor, Ptolemy Philadelphus (B.C. 285), learning was fostered, and an alliance was attempted between Jewish revelation and Greek philosophy, each reacting on the other. The most important result of this was the translation of the Hebrew Scriptures into Greek (the LXX.), which became known all over the world, and thus prepared the way for the universal spread of Christianity. So Egypt disciplined and educated anew these appointed teachers of religion. It first impressed upon a nation the firm unity of a family, and then, in due time, re-connected a mature people with the world from which it had been called out.

The same patronage was extended to the Jews, throughout his reign, by Ptolemy Euergetes, who conformed to the Mosaic rites by sacrificing at Jerusalem, and conferred privileges on the high priest which rendered him an almost independent tributary prince.

Thus there were two great centres of Judaism existing contemporaneously, and each exercising a distinctive influence, viz. (1) the gradually-decaying Jerusalem, the home of the Pharisee, and the capital of the Hebrew proper, whose ritual was that of Moses, and whose sacred and only literature was the Hebrew Scriptures and commentaries thereon; and (2) Alexandria, the capital of the Hellenist, or Greek-speaking Jew, who mingled Greek culture and independence with Jewish autonomy and Oriental contemplation and allegory. The latter infused a new spirit into Judaism, which became divided into two great parties, known, in Gospel times, as "Pharisees" and "Sadducees;" the former representing the extreme phase of Hebraism, and the latter the corresponding ultra-development of Hellenism.

A third element was introduced by the followers of Antiochus Epiphanes, who brought in a mixture of Greek and Roman paganism, and sought to break down the pure morality of Hebraism by the introduction of heathen licence. His father, Antiochus the Great, had alternately won and lost the Syrian provinces, in a succession of conflicts (from B.C. 223 to 198) with the Ptolemies. He was eventually successful, in combination with Philip III of Macedon. He was hailed by the Jews as their deliverer from subjection to Egypt, and confirmed the privileges they had previously enjoyed under Alexander and his successors.

Under Antiochus Epiphanes (B.C. 173), the Hellenising party were in the majority at Jerusalem, and the high priesthood was obtained by purchase from Antiochus, who made use of his money and a victorious army to buy over the unscrupulous and to massacre the faithful, until he established heathenism in the Holy City, proscribed the use of the Mosaic ritual, and promulgated those infamous "Decrees" which led to the revival of the ancient patriotism under the Maccabees. He erected the statue of Jupiter on the altar of burnt-offering, committed all books of Scripture to the flames, and prohibited the worship of God.

During these struggles, the high priests played a conspicuous but not a very honourable part, being too often the creatures of whatever civil power chanced, for the time, to be in the ascendant.

Succession of High Priests. Those of the first century were of no political importance. Their names are Eliashib, Joiada, Jonathan or Johanan, and Jaddua (whose brother Manasseh married a Samaritan wife, for which he was banished from Jerusalem, whereupon he set up a spurious form of Jewish ritual in a temple built under his direction on Mount Gerizim; see John iv. 20). According to Josephus, it was this Jaddua who met Alexander the Great at Mizpeh. Onias I, son of Jaddua, succeeded his father about the time of the death of Alexander the Great. He was succeeded by Simon I (said by Josephus to have been named "the Just," though this title is applied by others to Simon II), who was the last teacher of the "Great Synagogue," and closes the list of the righteous in Ecclesiasticus (ch. 50). He was followed by his brothers Eleazar and Manasseh, in succession; after whom came Onias II, son of Simon I (B.C. 240), whose avarice, and consequent refusal to pay the tribute, paved the way for the subsequent rupture with Egypt, which was temporarily averted by Joseph, who farmed the tribute from Ptolemy. Onias II was succeeded by his son, Simon II (supposed by some to be "Simon the Just"), who was followed by Onias III (B.C. 198), through whose prayers the intended spoliation of the Temple by Antiochus is said to have been averted. He was treacherously supplanted by his brother Jason (B.C. 175), who bought the office from Antiochus Epiphanes. But that monarch shortly after sold the office a second time to Menelaus (Onias IV), Jason's brother, by whom the rightful high priest (Onias III) was murdered, for which crime Menelaus was executed by command of Antiochus. These internal dissensions were the cause of a secession of the most faithful Jews, under the lawful high priest (Onias V, son of Onias III), to Alexandria, where he sought to give to the Hellenistic Jews a unity which was no longer possible in Judæa; and the Mosaic ritual and polity were, for a time, transferred to the colony near Heliopolis (called Onias, after its founder) and its temple. The precise site of this temple is supposed to be Tel-el-Yahood, or Tel-el-Yahoodeeyeh, twelve miles N.E. of Heliopolis, between Cairo and Zagazig.

In this period the prophecies of Daniel (viii. 20—25) were fulfilled. The one horn of the "he goat" was Alexander the Great, and the "four horns" which sprang up when it was broken were his four generals, among whom his kingdom was divided (Cassander, Lysimachus, Ptolemy, and Seleucus); and the "little horn" (vii. 8) was Antiochus Epiphanes, by whom the daily sacrifice was taken away for 2,300 days, and whose conquest of Egypt was stopped by ambassadors from Rome (the Fourth Empire) landing at Alexandria (xi. 31, 32) and requiring him to withdraw from that country.

The determination of Antiochus to stamp out Judaism produced a recoil. It culminated in the attempt of Antiochus to force the Jews publicly to eat the flesh of swine sacrificed on God's altar in honour of Jupiter. One aged scribe refused, and was followed by a mother and her seven sons, who all suffered martyrdom with the extremities of torture. In the city of Modin, Mattathias, a priest of the Asmonæan family, slew with his own hand a Jew, who was about to offer idolatrous sacrifice, and the royal officer who presided. Aided by his five sons, he rallied the faithful round him, threw down the heathen altar, fled to the mountains, and raised the standard of liberty, on which were inscribed M. K. B. I., the initials of their Hebrew war-cry, Mi-Kamoka Bâelim, Jehovah, "Who is like unto thee, O Lord, among the gods?" (Exod. xv. 11), from which the insurgents got the name of Maccabees, whence the eldest son and successor of Mattathias is known in history as Judas Maccabæus. Under him they were victorious. Antiochus, stricken by God, died of a loathsome disease. The Maccabees recovered Jerusalem, purified the Temple, and restored its worship, holding for eight days (in December, B.C. 165) the first "Feast of Dedication," which continued to be annually observed in our Lord's time (John x. 22).

MACCABÆAN PERIOD. The Maccabæan family continued to hold the main sway over the people, who retained their local customs, but were obliged to make terms with the Romans, under whose protection they enjoyed considerable freedom. Although the Israelites were scattered over many countries, Jerusalem was still their religious and political centre, in its Temple alone were sacrifices offered, and to it flowed in the poll-tax of half a shekel from Jews all over the world. The Roman Government acknowledged and confirmed their independent local administration, as a peculiar imperium in imperio, by the following decrees:—

(B.C. 47.) Julius Cæsar (for services in the Alexandrine war) gave to Hyrcanus and his heirs (1) all rights accorded to the high priest by law or courtesy; (2) the privilege of being Patroni of all Jews that were aggrieved: hence all Jews throughout the world had a direct appeal to Cæsar through the high priest, whose ambassadors had everywhere a free passage; (3) exemption from all tribute every seventh year, "because they neither sow nor reap;" (4) peculiar liberty to "meet and assemble together, and comport themselves according to the custom of their fathers and their own laws."

(B.C. 44.) On the death of Cæsar and Hyrcanus, all the edicts of the former, whether recorded in the Treasury or not, were confirmed by the Senate, in the Consulate of Dolabella and Antony. Thus the Jews, wherever they lived, were exempt from taxation at certain times, and free from military service; were allowed to maintain their peculiar customs, and looked to their high priest in Jerusalem as their ecclesiastical and civil superior in all that related to religious or ceremonial observances. But, for maintenance of order and general political government, a Roman official (procurator), supported by a military organisation, presided over all Syria. This official at first was one allied to both interests, and to whom was delegated the nomination to the high priesthood, viz. Herod the Great (B.C. 37), an Idumæan by birth, but descended from a Philistine slave. With the aid of Roman troops he deposed the last Asmonæan prince, Antigonus, married his niece Mariamne (grand-daughter of Hyrcanus the high priest), and became a nominal sovereign, subject to Rome. A heathen at heart, a savage in character, a brute in passions, and a fawning slave to the Imperial Court, he made use of his position to betray his country to the Romans by fostering immorality, cultivating alien customs, sapping religious faith, encouraging mutual distrust, corrupting the priesthood, and massacring the nobles. He rebuilt the Temple on the most gorgeous scale, intending it to be the proud monument of his dynasty; but it was really the whitened sepulchre that concealed the foul impurity of his family and the loathsome corruption into which he had plunged his people.

The loss of political liberty drove the Jewish spirit to an inward self-exaltation and spiritual pride, with a senile fondness for dwelling on the glories of the past. The Jews turned to minute interpretation of and refinements on the Law, to exaggerated expectations of fulfilment of prophecy, and literal attention to trivial acts of worship. Pharisees, Scribes, and Lawyers were more in esteem than Priests and Levites, and the teaching was rhetorical and disputatious, rather than dogmatic and authoritative. Hence arose the two great rival schools of Gospel times, the Pharisees and Sadducees (see pp. 63, 64).

The literature of this period is confined to the Books of Apocrypha, the merit of which is unequal. Highest in rank are the two treatises "Wisdom" and "Ecclesiasticus," which possess high literary and moral excellence. Next are "Baruch," "The Song of the Three Children," "The Prayer of Manasses;" then the historical books; and last, the Babylonian stories, which show the decline of faith and increase of superstition among those Jews who remained in Babylon.

The New Testament.

XIV. GENUINENESS AND INTEGRITY OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.

ITS GENUINENESS. EXTERNAL EVIDENCE. The existence and authority of the several books in the New Testament are attested by quotations in a series of Christian writers which begins with the immediate successors of the Apostles. Clement of Rome, for example, refers expressly to 1 Corinthians as the work of Paul. Polycarp, who had heard John, does not quote the sacred writers by name, but his Epistle contains many references to their writings. His pupil Irenæus quotes almost every book of the New Testament, and often names the writers. So do Tertullian and Clement of Alexandria in the next generation. Origen not only bears testimony by quotation, but speaks definitely on the subject of authorship. He mentions that the genuineness of 2 Peter and 2 and 3 John was not unquestioned; and, with regard to the Epistle to the Hebrews, he attributes the thoughts to Paul and the actual authorship to some unknown writer. Eusebius discusses in his Ecclesiastical History the question of the Canon. He affirms the four Gospels, the Acts of the Apostles, the fourteen Epistles of Paul, 1 John, and 1 Peter, to be universally esteemed genuine. He states that the Epistles of James and Jude, 2 Peter, and 2 and 3 John, were read publicly in most churches, but were not universally accepted. Of the Revelation he speaks with some uncertainty. We possess in the Latin Fragment, first published by Muratori in 1740, something like a full list of the New Testament Scriptures from a writer who describes himself as contemporary with Pius, Bishop of Rome c. A.D. 150. A similar list may be made out from the Syriac Version, which can hardly be later than the second century. In that Version, 2 Peter,

2 and 3 John, Jude, and the Revelation are wanting. In the fourth century complete lists are abundant, and they agree for the most part with our present Canon. The great Athanasius enumerates unhesitatingly all the Scriptures of the New Testament as we have them now: and so do the Latin Fathers Augustine and Jerome. Vestiges of the questions mentioned by Eusebius may be traced one or two centuries later in the East: in the West there is no trace of them after Jerome's time.

ITS INTEGRITY. EARLY COPIES. There is no MS. of the New Testament, or of any part of it, extant which was written within the first three centuries. Of the MSS. which were written in the fourth century or later, some (as was the case with the four first named below) contained the whole of the New Testament and of the Greek Version of the Old; some contained the whole of the New Testament without the Old; the great majority contained portions only of the New Testament, such as the Gospels, the Pauline Epistles, the Catholic Epistles, and so on. The New Testament was translated into Latin and into Syriac as early as the second century, but of these Versions there are no copies extant which were written so early as the oldest of the Greek MSS. Of the Greek MSS. the most important are the following:—

(1) SINAITIC, known to critics as ℵ (Cent. iv), in the St. Petersburg Library; found by Tischendorf in the convent of St. Catherine on Mount Sinai in 1859. The New Testament is entire; and is followed by the Epistle of Barnabas, and part of the "Shepherd" of Hermas.

(2) ALEXANDRINE, known as A (Cent. v), in the British Museum; given by Cyril Lucar, Patriarch of Constantinople, to Charles I in 1628. Some parts of the New Testament are missing (Matt. i. 1—xxv. 6; John vi. 50—viii. 52; 2 Cor. iv. 13—xii. 6). At the end stands the First Epistle of Clement, and part of the Second.

(3) VATICAN, known as B (Cent. iv), in the Vatican Library. The First and Second Epistles to Timothy and the Epistles to Titus and Philemon are wanting: Heb. ix. 14 to the end, and Revelation, have been supplied by a modern hand (Cent. xv).

(4) EPHREM'S, known as C (Cent. v), a palimpsest, in the Paris Library. It contains fragments of the LXX, and of almost every book in the New Testament. The original writing was effaced in the twelfth century, and Greek translations from Ephrem Syrus' works were written over it.

(5) BEZA'S, known as D (Cent. vi), in the Cambridge Library; found by Beza in the monastery of St. Irenæus at Lyons in 1562, and presented by him to the University of Cambridge. It is a Græco-Latin MS. of the Gospels and Acts, with a small fragment of 3 John.

(6) CLERMONT, known as D_2 (Cent. vi), in the Paris Library; once in Beza's possession. It is a Græco-Latin MS. of Paul's Epistles.

(7) LAUDIAN, known as E (Cent. vi), in the Bodleian Library. It is a Græco-Latin MS. of the Acts.

(8) PARISIAN, known as L (Cent. viii), in the Paris Library; one of the most important of the later Uncial MSS. It contains the four Gospels (except Matt. iv. 22—v. 14; xxviii. 17—20; Mark x. 19—29; John xxi. 15—25). It agrees in a remarkable manner with the quotations found in Origen and with the Vatican MS.

Approximate number of extant Greek MSS.:—

Uncial.—Gospels, 34; Acts and Catholic Epistles, 10; Paul's Epistles, 14; Revelation, 4.

Cursive.—Gospels, 629; Acts and Catholic Epistles, 232; Paul's Epistles, 288; Revelation, 105.

The NEW TESTAMENT is the Sacred Scripture of the Last Dispensation, in which a NEW COVENANT is made between God and man, whereby all mankind are offered the privileges of (1) adoption as sons of God, (2) incorporation into Christ's Church, (3) inheritance in the kingdom of heaven. As no preference is given to any particular family or people, but these privileges are freely offered to all, the offer, the incorporated society who accept it, the faith (or terms of membership), are all said to be Catholic, or universal, i.e. open to all, not necessarily accepted by all. This offer is called the Gospel, the Preacher of which is Christ; and He is also the Head of the Society, which is called the Church, or "Body of the Lord."

The BOOKS of the NEW TESTAMENT have, to some extent, their counterpart in the OLD. Thus, the FOUR GOSPELS correspond with the PENTATEUCH, as they contain an account of the Origin and Law of the Covenant; the ACTS of the APOSTLES with the HISTORICAL BOOKS (especially Joshua and Judges); the twenty-one EPISTLES with the PROPHETS; and REVELATION with the concluding portions of DANIEL and EZEKIEL.

XV. SUMMARY OF THE BOOKS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.

DIVISIONS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT:—

1. Constitutional and Historical.
   (1.) THE FOUR GOSPELS: two by Apostles, two by missionary Evangelists.
   (2.) THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES, forming the link of connexion between the historical and didactic portions.
2. Didactic.
   (1.) The PAULINE EPISTLES, viz.:
      a. Doctrinal: addressed to Churches, viz. Romans, Corinthians, Galatians, Ephesians, Philippians, Colossians, Thessalonians, Hebrews.
      b. Pastoral: addressed to Timothy and Titus.
      c. Special: addressed to an individual (Philemon).
   (2.) CATHOLIC EPISTLES, addressed to the Church at large:
      a. One of James.
      b. Two of Peter.
      c. Three of John.
      d. One of Jude.
3. Prophetic. The Revelation of John the Divine.

1. HISTORICAL.

(1.) THE FOUR GOSPELS. The Gospels (Εὐαγγέλιον, Evangelium) contain the "Good Tidings" of salvation through Jesus Christ. The first three give a general view of our Lord's Life and Teaching, and so are called "Synoptical:" the fourth is supplementary and doctrinal. They are not four Gospels, but one Gospel under four aspects, as presented to the minds of four different writers, supposed to have been prefigured by the four cherubim seen by Ezekiel in his vision (chap. i): Matthew as a MAN; Mark as a LION; Luke as an OX; John as an EAGLE. The first emphasises the historical import of the Life of Christ; the second His Royal dignity, the third His Sacrificial character; the fourth His Divinity.

MATTHEW gives the human descent of our Lord from Abraham, as evidence of His being the promised seed, in whom all nations should be blessed. Thus Christ completes the Old Testament history and covenant. He is the one Antitype in whom all has been fulfilled; in Him the Old Testament passes into the New; the prohibitions of the Law into the encouragements of the Gospel; Sinai into the Mount of Beatitudes; the prophetic into the teaching office; priesthood into redemption by suffering; kingship into the supremacy of Almighty grace restoring a fallen world.

The writer was the son of Alphæus, and a Hebrew. Before his conversion he was named Levi, and was a publican and collector of the tolls and customs of persons and goods crossing the lake at Capernaum. He wrote his Gospel mainly for his fellow-countrymen. Papias, in the first half of the second century, says that he wrote it in Hebrew, and the same statement is found in other Fathers. It is possible that he put forth two editions, one in Hebrew and one in Greek; the former, perhaps, about 42, the latter about 69 A.D.

Its arrangement is not chronological, but in groups, in which Jesus, the offspring of Abraham, fulfils the promises of the Old Testament. His doctrine and life are the fulfilment of types, prophecies, and hopes, but are disappointing to false aspirations of degenerate Judaism. The conflict, provoked by this disappointment, apparently terminates against Him; really it completes His triumph and establishes His kingdom, since His death reconciles the world to God, which is the basis of His new constitution. Thus, fulfilling the old covenant, He transforms the typical into the eternal theocracy, and He is the true Christ,—eternal Prophet, Priest, and King.

The true character of the Messiah is attested:—

1. By His lineal descent, and Divine revelation at His birth (i—iv).

2. By the manifestation of His triple office (Prophet, Priest, and King), in conflict with the popular ideas (v—xvi).

3. By unfolding the true nature of His kingdom and its future history, in contrast with that of the ancient world (xvi—xx).

4. By His self-sacrifice and humiliation (xxi—xxiv).

5. By prophetic revelations of the judgment on the Jewish nation and on the world (xxiv, xxv).

6. By His sacerdotal presentation of Himself as the atoning sacrifice (xxvi, xxvii).

7. By His glorification at the right hand of power (xxviii).

This Gospel is peculiarly characterised by repeated reference to the Law and Prophets (i. 23; ii. 6, 15, 18; iii. 3; iv. 15; viii. 17, &c.); by careful enunciation of such teaching as would awaken Jews, and correct their false views; and by warnings of national calamities.

MARK, who bore also the Hebrew name John, was son of Mary, whose house at Jerusalem became the refuge and earliest church of the Christian community. He was nephew of Barnabas, and the attendant of Barnabas and Paul on their first mission; but returned home from Perga (Acts xiii. 5, 13), afterwards attaching himself to Barnabas, though subsequently reconciled to Paul (Col. iv. 10). He is the reputed founder of the Alexandrine Church. He was attached to Peter (1 Pet. v. 13), from whom he obtained some materials for his Gospel. This is affirmed by Papias and other Fathers. It has been thought that he had the Gospel of Matthew before him; but other explanations may account for the close resemblance between the two. At all events he frequently supplied new graphic touches to the narrative from some independent source: e. g. Christ is among "wild beasts;" the fig-tree dried up "from the roots;" Jesus is asleep "on a pillow" (i. 13; xi. 20; iv. 38). His theme is "Judah is a young lion" (Gen. xlix. 9; Hos. xi. 10); and he depicts the Saviour as the conqueror of all Satanic powers, with a brevity and vividness which add force to the heroic character portrayed. Hence he gives only a few burning words of controversy and denunciation, not the longer discourses of our Lord; event succeeds event in rapid succession; he accumulates negatives; his favourite word is "immediately;" his tenses are present; and he supplies often the very vernacular words used in the occurrences (iii. 17, 22; v. 41). The Messiah seems to rouse every emotion of the soul,—amazement, fear, confidence, hope, joy—and adapts His Divine power to temper each. The rapidity and completeness of His achievements, the pervading influence of His Name throughout the world, His victory over death, and exaltation to the throne of glory, are the grand characteristics of the Divine Redeemer. These are heightened and relieved by regular intervals of pause and rest, preparatory to fresh campaigns; for Mark narrates only the three years' ministry of our Lord.

I. Preparation; Christ's appearance by the side of the Baptist (i. 1—13). II. His conflicts in Galilee after His baptism (i. 13—ix). III. His victories in Perœa (x). IV. His conflicts in Judæa (x—xv). V. His Resurrection and Ascension.

LUKE was probably of Gentile extraction (Col. iv. 10—14), a native of Antioch, and a faithful colleague of Paul. His superior education is proved by the literary excellence of his writings (viz. the Gospel and the Acts of the Apostles, which are but two volumes of one work). His preface, in pure Greek, betokens a careful study of documentary and other evidence. He speaks of attempts made by "many" others to write a Life of Christ. Though it is the same Gospel, it is narrated with peculiar independence, containing additional matter, greater accuracy in preserving the chronological order of events, and in complying with the requirements of history. Luke tested tradition by documentary records (e.g. i. 5; ii. 2; iii. 1); by comparing the oral testimony of living witnesses (i. 2, 3); and only when he had "perfect understanding of all things from the very first," ventured to compile a "Life of Christ" as a perfect man, restoring human nature, and offering Himself a sacrifice for all mankind. To him we are indebted for the history of the birth and childhood of Jesus and the Baptist, for the liturgical hymns, and the scene in the synagogue at Nazareth (vi), which were probably communicated by the Virgin Mary. The physician shows himself in the particular details of diseases; the artist in the vivid pictures of life-like scenes; the companion of Paul in the extension of the Gospel to Gentiles (iv. 16—30), and in the favour shown by Jesus to "publicans and sinners" (vii. 36—50; xxiii. 39—43). Hence His genealogy is traced up to Adam, the progenitor of the whole race.

I. The miraculous birth of Jesus and His forerunner: His manifestation in childhood, and growth to manhood (i and ii). II. The testimony to His Messiahship (iii and iv). III. His ministry in Galilee (iv—xvii). IV. His Passion, Resurrection, and Ascension (xviii—xxiv).

JOHN, brother of James and son of Zebedee, was one of the earliest and also the youngest of our Lord's disciples, honoured with the distinction "whom Jesus loved." His Gospel was written at the close of the first century or beginning of the second, long after the others had become well known throughout Christendom. He had all of them before him; he supplied what they had omitted, corrected false impressions produced by reading them, and gave the cue for their deeper interpretation. He indirectly refers to and corroborates much that they have recorded, but abstains from traversing the same ground. He only narrates one miracle which is common to all the Gospels (the feeding of the 5,000), but gives us four others peculiar to him—the change of water into wine; the healing of the impotent man, and of one born blind; and the raising of Lazarus. While the events narrated by the Synoptists are mainly those which took place in Galilee, John's Gospel is almost wholly occupied with Christ's ministry in Judæa, and one-third of it is devoted to the sayings and doings of the last twenty-four hours of His life. He omits all the Parables given by the Synoptists.

Generally, his Gospel is rather a compilation of distinct dissertations than a continuous narrative. It connects the Redemption of mankind with the Creation by the same Source of Life. Its subject is "The Eternal Word made Flesh," (1) as pre-existent, (2) as incarnate, (3) as revealing the Father, (4) as connecting humanity with Divinity through His own incarnation by means of spiritual agency. Hence the transmission of this spiritual influence through material substances is evidenced by the first miracle (ii); expounded to Nicodemus (iii); allegorised to the Samaritan woman (iv); exemplified in the impotent man (v); symbolised and emphasised in the feeding of the 5,000, and subsequent discourse (vi). The Revelation of the Father is developed by miracle and parable in vii—x; His life-giving power communicated to human nature temporarily and eternally by spiritual agency in xi—xiii; the perpetual transmission of that power from Himself to mankind through His apostles, and their commission to execute their functions, in xiv—xxi. Many additional scenes in His Passion, and especially Pilate's efforts to release Him, are furnished only by John. His reckoning of time is in accordance with the division of the day at midnight, which is identical with our own.

(2.) ACTS OF THE APOSTLES. This book, according to internal and external evidence, was written by Luke, and forms the sequel to his Gospel. It is the history of the foundation and spread of the Christian Church—the former under Peter (i—xii), the latter under Paul (xiii—xxviii). It was founded on the Day of Pentecost; its first sons were Jews; hence it appeared only a Jewish sect in Judæa, and the former part of the book is occupied with its establishment there, with arguments in its favour, and with challenges to disprove the fundamental fact of Christ's Resurrection. Its first development into an organised community, with official staff, provoked the first persecution and martyrdom, which precipitated its extension to Samaria and Syria, and caused a new and more independent centre of operations to be planted at Antioch, whence under Paul (the first converted persecutor) it spread to Asia Minor, Greece, Rome, and various parts of the Gentile world. The motive influence was the direct impulse of the Holy Spirit, not any preconceived plan of the Apostolic body (ii. 4; xi. 17; xv. 6, 7, 9).

ANALYSIS. A. The Acts of Peter:—Birth of the Christian Church, and Extension to Samaria, comprising (1) Foundation and Progress of the Church in Jerusalem and Judæa (i—viii): (2) First Persecution, and Extension to Samaria and to the Gentile family of Cornelius (viii—xi. 18); (3) Second Persecution, and Foundation of the Church at Antioch (xi. 19—xiii. 3).

B. The Acts of Paul:—Extension of the Church to the Gentiles.

(1) Paul's Call, and first Apostolic journey (xiii. 4—xv. 5); (2) Council of Jerusalem, fixing terms of admission (xv); (3) Second Apostolic journey (xv. 36—xviii. 22); (4) Third Apostolic journey (xviii. 23—xxi. 17); (5) Paul's imprisonment at Cæsarea, and voyage to Rome (xxi. 18—xxviii). So the progress is recorded from a small Jewish sect to the universal Church. In this book all the Articles of the Apostles' Creed may be found, chiefly in Peter's speeches (i—v).

2. DIDACTIC.

(1.) THE PAULINE EPISTLES. These are not in their chronological order; probably the earliest is 1 Thessalonians, and the latest that to the Hebrews. The subscriptions are destitute of authority.

a. DOCTRINAL.

ROMANS. This Epistle is a summary of God's dealings with mankind, from the first adoption of one portion to closer connexion with Him, i.e. to sonship and inheritance of a promise. This election of a particular family is illustrated by a master-potter selecting out of his bed of clay one portion for his choicest fabrics, meet vessels for the master's highest use: the particular clay was selected because of its freedom from flaw, and the rest rejected because tainted with flaws; but not rejected absolutely, since it has a position in the household, useful, but less honoured. The absence of flaw is lack of worldliness or sinfulness; its excellence is the possession of unquestioning faith—a special capacity for receiving the Divine impress, to be moulded at God's will, and so to convey to others, by precept and example, the Divine standard of perfection and the revelation of the truth. This was the peculiar quality seen by the Omniscient in the character of Abraham, which led to his call and adoption. Hence he became "the Father of the Faithful" and "the Friend of God." But it was a quality not transmitted by bodily generation; nor were the privileges accorded to Abraham, and promised to his seed, an inheritance descending by hereditary right, but resumed by God, the Giver, at each decease, and re-awarded at His decision, who "looketh on the heart." Hence "they are not all Israel, which are of Israel: neither, because they are the seed of Abraham, are they all children" of God; i.e. "they which are the children of the flesh, these are not the children of God" (ix. 6—8). Acceptance by God is the reward of faith; by it Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, were adopted; from want of it, Ishmael, Esau, and the three eldest sons of Jacob were rejected, and finally the whole Jewish nation, the Gentiles being received instead through faith. Because of unbelief the former were broken off, and the latter stand by faith.

SUMMARY. I. Sinfulness of the human race: (a) of the heathen (i); (b) of the Jews (ii); (c) Comparison of Jews and Gentiles. II. The Plan of Salvation explained (a) in theory (iii); (b) by illustration (iv, v). III. Its value: (a) union with Christ (vi); (b) as servants of Christ (vi); (c) supplying defects of the Law (vii). IV. Justification by Faith: (a) the Christian's duty and privilege; (b) cause of rejection of some, election of others, of Abraham's seed; (c) blindness and final rejection of the Jews. V. Development of truth (xii—xv). VI. Personal communications (xv, xvi).

It was probably written from Corinth, A.D. 58, and sent by Phœbe (xvi. 1, 2).

1 AND 2 CORINTHIANS. Two Epistles are addressed to this Church, which included not only the Corinthians, but those who lived in the adjacent towns of Achaia (the upper portion of the Morea, along the coast of the Gulf of Lepanto). Paul passed eighteen months at Corinth during his second missionary tour, visiting the neighbouring cities, and establishing Churches in them. Corinth was the great centre of commercial traffic on the overland route from Rome to the East; and also between Upper and Lower Greece. It possessed the only good harbour in that quarter, and, as it was the shortest and safest route, small vessels were dragged across the isthmus, larger ones transhipped their cargoes, and hence all the trade of the Mediterranean flowed through it, so that "a perpetual fair was held there from year's end to year's end;" to which were added the great annual gatherings of Greeks at the "Isthmian Games" (to which Paul alludes, 1 Cor. ix. 24—27). Hence it was proverbial for wealth, luxury, and profligacy. Its population, and that of Achaia, was mainly foreign, formed of colonists from Cæsar's army and of manumitted slaves (e.g. Tertius, Quartus, Achaicus, Fortunatus, &c.), settlers from Asia Minor, returned exiles from the islands, and at this time a large influx of Jews lately expelled from Rome (Acts xviii. 2).

Paul's preaching in the synagogue was acceptable till he boldly testified that Jesus was the Messiah; when persecution set in, he was ejected from the community, and brought before the Roman governor. Yet he formed a Church. His disciples were mostly of the lower orders, partly Jews, but mainly Roman freedmen and heathen Greeks, who became enthusiastic admirers of the Apostle. Here he wrote the second or both of his two Epistles to the Thessalonians, and one to the Romans; immediately after which he returned to Ephesus, and was succeeded in his mission by Apollos, who likewise made many converts. Apollos was imperfectly instructed in Christianity, but was well versed in the Jewish Scriptures, and very eloquent. There arose two factions,—one Jewish, clinging with Pharisaic attachment to the Law; the other Gentile, prone to push evangelical freedom to licence; professing the right faith, but claiming to indulge in absolute licentiousness. They joined freely in heathen sacrificial feasts; degraded the Holy Communion into a festive banquet; women threw off the usual eastern veil of modest attire; and the Greek love of intellectual speculation and discussion ran riot on sacred subjects, till appeals on Christian disputes were brought before heathen tribunals, and even heathen morality was scandalised by incestuous intercourse.

THE FIRST EPISTLE. Amid such corruption, during three years, factions attained a formidable height. Paul was defamed by the Jewish party, and rumours of alarming disputes reached him, followed by a letter full of enquiries on matters of morality and doctrine, brought by a deputation of freedmen. Paul had already despatched rather Timotheus. He now writes the First Epistle to the Corinthians from Ephesus (A.D. 57), instead of going to them as he intended. Perhaps he deemed it his duty to stay for the great Pan-Ionian Festival to Diana, held that year at Ephesus.

SUMMARY. I. Reproof of the Factions, contrasting human and Divine wisdom, his own simple preaching with the assumption of his followers, and the proper relation of teachers and disciples (i—iv. 20). II. Intercourse with Heathens: (a) Incest; (b) Law-suits; (c) Church discipline (iv. 21—vi. 20). III. Answer to the Letter of the Corinthian Church: (a) Marriage; (b) Heathen feasts; (c) Public worship. 1. Male and female head-dress; 2. The Lord's Supper; 3. Exercise of spiritual gifts; 4. Unity and uniformity (vii—xiv. 40). IV. Resurrection of the Dead: the future state the aim and end of Christian life (xv). Conclusion: of a personal nature.

THE SECOND EPISTLE. This was called for by the effect of the first. In the interval occurred the riot at Ephesus (headed by Demetrius), and Paul's expulsion. Timothy and Titus had both been sent to Corinth, and at Troas he waited their return in vain, till he was bowed down with anxiety and evil foreboding. Titus at last brought sufficiently cheering accounts: the Church, as a whole, had bowed to its "father's" reproofs; the incestuous man had been expelled and brought to repentance; the Gentile licence had been restrained; confidence between the Church and its founder had been restored; but the Judaisers had been reinforced by men bearing "letters of commendation" from some higher authority, and were now arrogant in their supremacy. This Epistle expresses two conflicting emotions: 1. Thankfulness for the removal of evils; 2. Indignation at the arrogance of his opponents.

The former Epistle is a careful and systematic intellectual treatise; the latter is unstudied, expressing the natural feelings of a warm heart.

SUMMARY. I. Its Occasion; A narrative of events, and assurance of his confidence (i, ii). II. His Apostolic Mission: (a) Its source (iii, iv); (b) Its difficulties (iv. 7—v. 10); (c) Its motive (v. 11—vi. 10). III. Intercourse with heathens (vi. 14—vii. 1). IV. Collection for fellow-Christians (viii, ix). V. His self-vindication (x—xiii).

GALATIANS. This Epistle is one of a set on doctrinal subjects, which should be read together—viz. those to Romans, Galatians, and Hebrews,—since they clearly define the relation of Jews and Gentiles to the Church of Christ, and form one whole treatise, each alone being incomplete. It has affinity also with those to the Corinthians, as it vindicates the writer against the defamation of Judaisers.

Galatia was inhabited by hordes of northern Gauls, who poured down into Asia (B.C. 300), conquered it, and settled there, but, being enervated by luxurious food and climate, were gradually driven inland to the central mountain fastnesses of Asia Minor. The people at first were barbarian, then mingling with Greeks, became tempered by Greek civilisation, and were finally subjugated by the Romans (B.C. 189). Enriched by the constant traffic of Armenian caravans to the Hellespont, many Jews settled there for trading purposes; and the inhabitants were a mixture of Scythian, Greek, Roman, and Hebrew. Paul traversed the country on his second journey. He was detained there by illness (Gal. iv. 13, 14), and converted many Jews and Greeks (iii. 27, 28). He visited it again on his third journey (Acts xviii. 23). Originally worshippers of those who were no gods (iv. 8), they were converted to Judaism (iv. 9), then by Paul to Christianity (iii. 1, 2), and again relapsed into Judaism under teachers who came forward after his visit (iv. 21—31). The Epistle was written from Ephesus, about A.D. 57, to prevent this lapse into Judaism. It resembles that to the Romans in the contrast therein presented between "the righteousness of the Law" and Justification by Faith.

SUMMARY. I. Narrative. The Apostle's own conversion, and conflict against Judaism (i, ii). II. Argument, based on Old Testament history, showing how the Law was preparatory to the Gospel (iii, iv). III. Practical Exhortation, to use the liberty of the Gospel for the cultivation of true godliness.

EPHESIANS. The inscription of this letter to the Ephesians is doubtful, and it is thought to have been either a circular, of which copies were sent to many adjacent Churches, or to have been intended for communication to several (see Col. iv. 16). Ephesus was to Asia, as Corinth to Greece, the great port to which flowed the commerce of East and West. Its inhabitants were equally noted for licentious and luxurious life, and for cultivation of magical arts and fanatical worship of Diana (the personification of exuberant natural production). Her temple was one of the wonders of the world for its magnificent structure and extravagant enrichment. It was the great Pan-Ionian treasury, and the centre of worship and nationality, as that of Solomon was to the Jews; but a three years' sojourn there by the Apostle broke its power, till the annual festival brought about a temporary reaction (Acts xix).

This Epistle was probably written about A.D. 62, when Paul was a prisoner at Rome. It was not evoked by any relapse or special errors, but was written to establish those who had left heathenism, contrasting their present higher life with their previous degradation. Its summary of Christian revelation as the foundation of spiritual life is couched in language both fervent and sublime.

SUMMARY. I. Doctrinal. (a) Thanksgiving for their call; (b) Enumeration of Christian privileges (i, ii); (c) The mystical union between Christ and His Church, drawn out first by revelation, and then by prayer.

II. Practical. An exhortation to make their life conformable to their profession: (a) By the unity with which the Spirit of Christ brings them to Him, casting out all feelings leading to discord; (b) By the purity of Christ, whose example they must follow; (c) By the example of His obedience, the mutual forbearance of all in their respective relations of life.

PHILIPPIANS. Philippi, a chief city in Macedonia, north of the Archipelago, was the scene of the last struggle of the Roman republic against despotism, where Brutus and Cassius, defeated by Augustus and Antony, committed suicide. Hence it became a Roman "colony," with full rights of citizenship, governed by Roman magistrates and laws,—in short, Rome in miniature. The Jews were few, and had no synagogue, but were allowed a small chapel outside the gate, in a secluded spot by the river's bank. Here Paul and Silas converted Lydia, came into contact with heathen Paganism (the worship of evil spirits), and were scourged and imprisoned, which led to the jailer's conversion and the founding of a faithful Christian community.

The Epistle was written during Paul's first imprisonment at Rome (Acts xxviii), in answer to expressions of sympathy and a substantial gift sent by Epaphroditus, who had a dangerous illness at Rome. It is a letter of grateful affection mingled with personal sorrow; of joy on their behalf, of gloom at the ingratitude of others; of anxiety also as to his own future, caused probably by the increased rigour of his incarceration.

SUMMARY. I. Prayer for their advancement in grace (i. 1—12). II. Effects of his imprisonment, and his future prospects (i. 13—30). III. Exhortation to follow the example of Christ (ii. 1—18). IV. Personal matters (ii. 19—30). V. Warnings against Judaisers (iii). VI. Personal appeals (iv. 1—7). VII. Final exhortation and commendation (iv. 8—23).

COLOSSIANS. Nothing is known of the foundation of the Church at Colossæ, a chief city of Phrygia; but the Christians there were in danger of relapse, from a tendency to asceticism, Judaism, and angel-worship. Paul sets before them the majesty and all-sufficiency of Christ, as the source of all spiritual blessings. Christian perfection is attained by the practical realisation of this truth influencing the daily life. The attention is fixed upon the Person of Jesus Christ, whose sacrifice completes the typical offerings of Judaism, and crucifies the old man with his affections and lusts, while the Resurrection unfolds a new life in Him, elevating the soul above earthly objects more effectually than by mere mortification of the flesh quenching the emotions of the heart, according to Stoic philosophy. The Epistle was probably written about A.D. 62, during Paul's imprisonment at Rome.

SUMMARY. I. Thanksgiving for their faith, hope, and charity, with a prayer for their spiritual progress (i. 1—15). II. The supremacy and glorious pre-existence of Christ through all eternity, and His reconciliation of humanity to God the Father by His own Resurrection and Ascension to the right hand of power (i. 16—29). III. A stimulus to advance in the knowledge of Christ by the Apostle's own example and eager desire for their perfection, and by reference to the privileges of membership with Christ; and a warning against false teaching which endangered them (ii). IV. Moral and spiritual effects of their participation in Christ's Resurrection, both generally and in various social relations (iii). V. Concluding address to the whole Church, and special salutations and messages from individuals (iv).

1 AND 2 THESSALONIANS. These Epistles were addressed to a Church in Northern Greece, where Paul on his second journey had suffered persecution (Acts xvii. 1—10). Thessalonica (Saloniki), anciently called Therma, but re-named after the sister of Alexander the Great by her husband Cassander, who restored it, was the chief metropolis of Macedonia (a region extending N. to the Danube, E. to the Black Sea, W. to the Adriatic, S. to Achaia). The most populous city of that division of Europe, and its greatest port, it was to the West what Ephesus was to the East, and Corinth to Southern Greece. Situated on the seamargin of a vast plain, watered by numerous rivers, half-way between the Adriatic and the Hellespont, at the entrance of the pass into the Macedonian plains, a busy commercial centre, with a constant tide of traffic ebbing and flowing, abroad by sea, inland by the two arms of Roman road, it was a fit centre of evangelisation, as "from thence the word of the Lord sounded forth [as from a trumpet] not only in Macedonia and Achaia, but also in every place" (1 Thess. i. 8). Here was the chief colony and chief synagogue of the Jews (even at the present day Saloniki has a Jewish population of 80,000 souls). Here Paul and Silas showed their unhealed stripes inflicted at Philippi (1 Thess. ii. 2), and for three sabbaths preached Jesus as the promised Messiah (Acts xvii. 2, 3). The Jews, falling in controversy, resorted to violence, set the city in an uproar, assailed Jason's house, where the Apostle was staying, and dragged Jason before the rulers.

THE FIRST EPISTLE. From the First Epistle, written probably from Corinth, A.D. 52, we learn:—The Apostle's primary success and unflinching courage in preaching; not flattering, but warning; not self-asserting, but displaying a blameless example; entreating, exhorting, rebuking; his self-support by manual labour. His converts were principally from idolatry (i. 9), but partly Jewish proselytes, some of whom were women of rank and influence (Acts xvii. 4).

SUMMARY. I. Paul's gratitude for their eager acceptance of the Gospel, and fidelity in maintaining it; encouraging them under persecution by his own example. II. Practical exhortations: (a) against their besetting sin; (b) encouraging the cultivation of Christian virtues (iv, v). III. Consolation to those bereft of friends, by unfolding the glories of speedy resurrection, and transformation to a glorified body.

THE SECOND EPISTLE. This Epistle was probably written, like the former, from Corinth, after Paul received an answer to the first, to correct an erroneous impression gained from the vividness of his picture of the resurrection (viz. that it was near at hand), which led to a neglect of practical duties.

SUMMARY. I. Affectionate commendations, and exhortations to perseverance. II. Answer to false anticipations of the Second Advent. III. Appeal for their prayers, and practical precepts for their guidance.

HEBREWS. The greatest weight of testimony favours the opinion that Paul was the author (though probably Luke was the writer) of this Epistle. It was probably composed by the former when in very strict custody, either at Cæsarea, or at Rome (A.D. 62—64), just before his martyrdom (2 Tim. iv. 6), when denied writing materials; and dictated by him to Luke, who then committed it to writing from memory. Some think we have only a Greek translation of an original Hebrew text. It was addressed especially to the Aramaic Christians of Palestine, now exposed to severe persecution from their fellow-countrymen, who adhered to the expected return of visible glory to Israel. Brought up in fond reminiscence of the glories of the past, they seemed in Christianity to be receding from their peculiar privileges of intercommunion with God, as a favoured people. Angels, Moses, the High Priest, were superseded by Jesus, the peasant of Nazareth; the Sabbath by the Lord's Day, the Old Covenant by the New; while temple and sacrifices were obsolete. What, they asked, did Christianity give in their place? And the writer answers, CHRIST; i.e. God for their Mediator and Intercessor: superior to Angels, because nearer to the Father; to Moses, because a Son, not a servant: more sympathising than the High Priest, and more powerful in intercession, because He pleads His own blood. The Sabbath is but a type of the Rest in heaven, the New Covenant is the fulfilment of the Old. Christ's atonement is perfect and eternal, and Heaven itself the true Jerusalem, of which the Church is the temple, whose worshippers are all advanced into the Holy of Holies.

Thus the exceptional ministration of angels is superseded by the continuous ministration of man.

The legislative ministration of Moses is perfected by the Divine Lawgiver.

The typical sacrifice of the High Priest is replaced by a real sacrifice of a Priest of a higher order.

The indirect communion with God is supplanted by the direct union of God and man in Christ, and the communion of the Head with His body, the Church.

This Epistle completes the trilogy of which those to the Romans and Galatians form part.

SUMMARY. A. Doctrinal. Showing the superiority of the Christian to the Jewish Dispensation (i—x. 18). I. Because its Author is superior (a) to ANGELS, and in Him humanity is exalted above them (i—ii. 18): (b) to MOSES, because of (1) His position—He is the Builder, Son, Master, of the house; Moses merely part of, a servant in it; (2) His assured inheritance, viz. perfect eternal rest in heaven, instead of imperfect transitory rest in Canaan (iii—iv. 13): (c) to the AARONIC High Priest, (1) as to His office; (2) as to His nature; (3) as to His vocation (iv—v. 10). A digression of practical exhortation (v. 11—vi. 20): (d) to the PRIMÆVAL HIGH PRIEST of superior dispensation (vii. 1—28). II. Because the Old Covenant was imperfect, being incapable of making its members perfect. Comparison of the typical and real sacrifice of atonement, illustrated by the service of the sanctuary, compared with that of the Christian Sacrifice (viii. 1—x. 18). B. Practical. (a) Warning against relapse into Judaism; (b) encouraging to peace and holiness; (c) inculcating practical duties; (d) Conclusion. Special advice to individuals (probably catechumens).

b. PASTORAL.

1 AND 2 TIMOTHY. Timothy was the son of a Greek father and a Jewish mother (Eunice), and was converted and circumcised by Paul at Lystra (Acts xvi. 3).

THE FIRST EPISTLE was probably written immediately after Paul's release from his first imprisonment, to counteract the Judaising influence so strongly at work everywhere against Paul's more liberal views of Christianity; and also to guide and encourage Timothy in the duties of his office, laying down rules of Church organisation for all times.

SUMMARY. I. Controversial (i). Recalling the charge committed to Timothy, and Paul's claim to his allegiance; contrasting the truth with the false teaching of Judaisers. II. Practical (ii. 1—vi. 2). (a) Injunctions as to public worship generally, regarding both men and women; (b) Qualifications of ministers, and demeanour of their wives and families; (c) Special advice to Timothy himself (iv); (d) Directions respecting communities of widows, and presbyters (v); (e) Of servants. III. Doctrinal (vi. 3—21). Special exhortation to Timothy to peace, holiness, self-denial, steadfastness, humility, and to the promotion of almsgiving.

THE SECOND EPISTLE. This Epistle was written (A.D. 66) from Rome, in the interval between one trial of the Apostle before the Emperor, and that at which he was condemned to death (iv. 16, 17). He viewed his case as desperate (iv. 16), and his martyrdom as imminent (iv. 6—8); and he entreats Timothy to come to him at once (iv. 9, 21), to be with him at his last trial. It has all the tone of a farewell letter to a dear friend; full of love (i. 1—5), encouragement (i. 6—ii. 15), warning (ii. 16—iii. 9), adjuration (iv. 1—5), concluding with personal matters (iv. 6—22).

The Epistle furnishes a noble view of the consolation afforded by Christianity in the midst of suffering, and face to face with death. It alludes to a few otherwise unknown incidents of the life of Paul, between his two imprisonments; also of Timothy; viz. the falling away from Paul of some Asiatic converts of note (i. 15); the injury done him by Alexander, mentioned in Acts xix. 33; the lapse of Demas (iv. 10); his reconciliation with Mark (iv. 11); another visit to Corinth and Miletus (iv. 20), and probably to Troas (iv. 13); Timothy's presence with him on his first journey (iii. 11); the names of his grandmother and mother, and his consecration by Paul (i. 5, 6).

TITUS, a Greek by birth, is addressed by Paul as "mine own son after the common faith." He was the first Christian convert who was not circumcised, and was taken by Paul to Jerusalem to try the matter, when the Council decided against its necessity (Gal. ii. 3; Acts xv). It is not known when the Church in Crete was founded, but it is probable that it was after Paul's first imprisonment, on his way to Asia, and that he then left Titus in charge of it. His position was one of peculiar difficulty: the people had sunk into gross immorality, instability, and lying. Paul advises his deputy upon the course he should take. The Epistle resembles the first to Timothy, was probably written about the same time, and gives a condensed code of instruction on doctrine, morals, and discipline.

SUMMARY. I. Apostolic salutation. II. Church Organisation: (a) Qualifications of elders, &c.; (b) Suppression of false teachers (i); (c) The Christian character of aged men and women, the young of both sexes, and servants (ii). III. Personal advice to Titus (iii).

c. SPECIAL (to an individual).

PHILEMON was an inhabitant of Colosse, of some considerable distinction, and a convert of St. Paul (ver. 19). He was a "fellow-labourer," probably only as a zealous layman, though some have thought the expression implies that he was ordained. His slave, Onesimus, had run away from him to Rome, having, perhaps, been guilty of misappropriation of his master's goods (ver. 18). Falling into Paul's hands, he was converted to Christianity, reclaimed to his duty, and sent back to his master with this letter of reconciliation. It is remarkable for its delicacy, generosity, and justice. The Apostle maintains civil rights (even of slavery), confessing that Onesimus, though under the liberty of the Gospel, is still the slave of Philemon, and justly liable to punishment for desertion. The damage caused by his absconding Paul takes upon himself, playfully using his name "Onesimus" (profitable, both to thee and to me) as a means of urging his suit for pardon. As the returning slave was the bearer also of the Epistle to the Colossians, it was probably written at the same time (A.D. 62), near the close of Paul's first imprisonment at Rome.

(2.) CATHOLIC EPISTLES.

JAMES the Less, brother, or near relation, of our Lord, an apostle, had the oversight of the Church at Jerusalem (Acts xv. 13), where he remained until his martyrdom (A.D. 62). This Epistle, generally attributed to him, shows evident tokens of a degeneracy in the tone of Jewish Christians, to whom it is addressed, stimulating them to the exercise of higher principles. It reproves the prevailing vices of the writer's countrymen—hypocrisy, presumption, censoriousness, love of riches; and insists that true faith necessitates good works. It is remarkable for its eminently practical nature, the homeliness and aptness of its illustration, and the bold, plain-spoken rebukes of the wealthy oppressors of the poor. It was probably written near the close of James's life, and is addressed to the whole "twelve tribes."

SUMMARY. I. On sincerity, and patience in afflictions (i. 1—15). II. Against hypocrisy and self-deceit (i. 16—27). III. Against adulation of the rich, and contempt of the poor; against false charity and spurious faith (ii). IV. On the duty of ruling the tongue, and cultivating peace. V. Warning against the corruption of the world, and the attempt to serve both God and mammon, by the consideration of the uncertainty of life (iv). VI. Against covetousness, impatience, oaths; with encouragement to mutual confession of faults, intercession, and holiness.

1 PETER. Simon Peter, son of Jonas, a fisherman at Bethsaida, was one of the foremost apostles, by whom three thousand were converted on the Day of Pentecost (Acts ii), and the first Gentile family admitted by baptism into Christianity (Acts x. 47, 48). He is said to have preached to the Jews scattered throughout Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia, i.e. the countries of Asia adjacent to the Black Sea, to whom he addressed this Epistle from Babylon, probably about A.D. 63. Its general design was to comfort them under afflictions.

SUMMARY. I. The necessity, use, and transitory nature of earthly trials (i. 1—12). II. An exhortation to lead a holy life, and to follow the example of Christ, who died to purchase their glorification

(i. 13—ii. 10). III. Practical advice as to their duty in various relations of life, e.g. as citizens, slaves, husbands, wives, &c. (ii. 13—iii. 8). IV. An exhortation generally to unanimity, peaceableness, sanctification; with a warning of the Second Advent, enforced by a reference to the previous judgments of God on those who neglected the preaching of Noah (iii. 9—iv. 19). V. Practical exhortation to pastors on their duties.

2 PETER. This Epistle was written when he apprehended his death (i. 14), and not long after the former Epistle, probably A.D. 65. It is also addressed, no doubt, to the same persons. It is valuable, as containing the last words to his converts of one of the original Twelve, and for certain personal traits, such as the mention of the Transfiguration by an eye-witness (i. 17, 18), and the commendation of Paul and his Epistles (iii. 15, 16).

SUMMARY. I. An exhortation to persevere in faith and good works, by an assurance of the reality of the glorification of Christ as the perfect man, accepted by God, and the Messiah of prophecy (i). II. Warning of the certainty of punishment on impenitent sinners, by reference to past history, e.g. the Flood, and the overthrow of Sodom (ii. 1—10). III. Warning against false teachers, by the example of Balaam (ii. 11—22). IV. The certainty of the Second Advent, and its warning (a) to the godly, (b) to the wicked (iii).

1 JOHN. The tract called the First Epistle of John seems rather to partake of the nature of a doctrinal discourse, addressed to believers generally, but more particularly to Gentiles in Asia Minor, probably in the neighbourhood of its chief city, Ephesus.

Its date is uncertain. Some place it before the destruction of Jerusalem, others towards the end of the first century, thinking that it bears marks of combating the Gnostic heresy. Its aim seems to be to establish the true doctrine concerning the Person of Christ, as to His Divine and human nature, and that true communion with Him necessitates a holy life. The chief grace inculcated in this and the two following Epistles is love.

SUMMARY. I. The true nature of fellowship with God, who is Light and Love, requiring purity and holiness (i—ii. 29). II. The blessings and duties of sonship. The privilege of adoption demands the corresponding duty of conformity to Christ, the true Son (iii—iv. 6). III. The essential bond of fellowship and sonship is love, both to the Father and to one another (iv. 7—v. 18).

2 JOHN. This Epistle contains only thirteen verses, eight of which are found in substance in the First. It was probably written about the same time, but it is addressed "to the Elect Lady" (thought by some to mean the Church), and "her children;" or to "the Lady Electa," a person so called for her eminent piety. They are exhorted to persevere in love, faith, and godliness, and to beware of false teachers.

3 JOHN. A short address, of a similar kind, to "the well-beloved Gaius," of whom nothing certain is known, though he is supposed to be identical with the Gaius named in Rom. xvi. 23 and 1 Cor. i. 14. He is commended for his hospitality and piety; warned against the ambition and malice of Diotrephes (one in authority); and his friendly offices are besought for Demetrius.

JUDE, "brother of James," is supposed to be the Apostle (surnamed Thaddæus and Lebbæus), and a near relation of our Lord (Matt. x. 3; xiii. 55; Luke vi. 16).

This Epistle is remarkable for the quotation of an otherwise unrecorded saying of Enoch (ver. 14), and a tradition of a dispute between Michael the archangel and Satan regarding the body of Moses (ver. 9). Its date, place, and occasion are unknown; but it seems to denounce the same false teachers as those rebuked in 2 Pet. ii. and in very similar language; warning them by the example of the fallen angels, of Cain, the impenitent in the times of Noah, of the wicked cities of the plain, of Korah, and Balaam; affirming the certainty of the future judgment and punishment of the wicked.

3. PROPHETIC.

REVELATION (Apocalypse) of John the Divine. This is the only prophetic book of the New Testament, and much of it remains still unfulfilled. It closes the Canon of Scripture, and the revelation of God to man. There is satisfactory evidence of its genuineness. Justin Martyr, living sixty years after its supposed date, ascribes it to John; Papias acknowledges its inspiration; Irenæus (disciple of Polycarp, who was John's own disciple) testifies to the Apostle's authorship, and that he had himself received the explanation of one passage in it from those who had conversed with the Apostle about it. To these may be added Clement of Alexandria, Theophilus, Tertullian, Origen, Cyprian, Jerome, Athanasius, &c.

John, after a vain attempt had been made to martyr him, was banished by Domitian to Patmos; but on the Emperor's death (A.D. 96) he returned, under a general amnesty, to Ephesus, and resumed the supervision of the Church there. While in exile he saw and recorded these visions, in the introductory chapters of which incidental evidence is furnished that a considerable interval must have elapsed between the foundation of the Asiatic Churches and the composition of this book: e.g. they are reproached for faults and corruptions that do not speedily arise; the Nicolaitans had separated themselves into a sect; there had been open persecutions, and Antipas had been martyred at Pergamos (ii. 13).

SUMMARY. I. PREFATORY: The Divine authority of the record. The narrative of the first vision, respecting the Churches of proconsular Asia (i).

II. THE MESSAGES TO THE SEVEN CHURCHES (ii,iii): viz.—

(1) EPHESUS: reproof for forsaking its first love and first works.

(2) SMYRNA: commendation of works, poverty, endurance of persecution.

(3) PERGAMOS: reproof for false doctrine, immoral conduct, idolatrous pollution.

(4) THYATIRA: reproof to one party for similar corruptions; commendation to the other for their fidelity.

(5) SARDIS: reproof for spiritual deadness with mere nominal life.

(6) PHILADELPHIA: approval of its steadfastness and patience.

(7) LAODICEA: rebuke for lukewarmness.

These predictions have long been fulfilled: but much of the book is still a mystery, though generally regarded as prophetic of the history of the Church from the close of the first century to the end of time. By some the major part is considered to have had its fulfilment in the early ages of the Church; by others to have been gradually realised by successive religious revivals and persecutions; by others it is regarded as a picture of the historical epochs of the world and the Church. Its outline is as follows:—

III. THE PROPHETIC VISIONS: viz.—

(1) The Divine glory, sealed book, and the Lamb (iv, v).

(2) The vision of the opening of six seals; the sealing of 144,000 Israelites; the worship by innumerable multitudes of saints; and the opening of the seventh seal (vi, vii).

(3) The vision of an angel offering incense on the golden altar, followed by the sounding of six trumpets (viii, ix).

(4) The vision of an angel with an open scroll; seven thunders, and the angel's proclamation (x); measuring the temple and altar; the two witnesses; sounding of the seventh trumpet (x, xi).

(5) The vision of the woman and the dragon: the conflict between Michael and the dragon: rescue of the woman: the rising of a beast from the sea, and of another from the earth (xii, xiii).

(6) The vision of the Lamb and the 144,000 on Mount Sion; the proclamations of the three angels; the harvest and vintage (xiv).

(7) The pouring out of the seven vials of wrath (xv, xvi); the woman sitting upon the beast (xvii); the angel's proclamation of the fall of Babylon, followed by songs of praise and triumph (xviii, xix. 1—10).

(8) The vision of the "Word of God," attended by the faithful, who destroy the three great enemies, viz. the beast, false prophet, and confederate kings (xix. 11—21); the binding of the dragon for 1,000 years; the reign of righteousness, and final conflict (xx. 1—10).

(9) Visions of the last judgment, the new heaven, new earth, new Jerusalem (xx. 11—xxii. 5), with closing addresses from the angel, Christ, and John, enjoining the universal proclamation of these visions, attesting the certainty and speedy accomplishment of the predictions, and concluding with final benediction (xxii. 6—21).

XXIII. FAMILY OF THE HERODS.

(From Lewin's "Life and Epistles of Saint Paul.")

XXIV. PAUL'S MISSIONARY JOURNEYS.

I. With Barnabas and John Mark (Acts xiii, xiv).

Antioch (in Syria), the centre of Gentile evangelisation. Barnabas and Saul, specially called by the Holy Ghost to mission work, and taking with them John Mark, go to

Seleucia (port of Antioch), whence they sail to the island of Cyprus (the native place of Barnabas), landing at the eastern extremity, at Salamis, a populous mercantile port. The apostles preached in the synagogues there; then traversed the isle (100 miles) to

Paphos, its western extremity, the capital city. Here Elymas was struck blind, and the Roman proconsul, Sergius Paulus, converted. They crossed to the southern shore of Asia Minor, landing at Perga, the ancient port of Pamphylia, whence goods from the interior were exported. Here John Mark left them and returned home. The apostles went up into the mountains, on which journey they are supposed to have suffered the trials enumerated in 2 Cor. xi. 26, 27, till they reached

Antioch (in Pisidia), a central resting-place, just over "the pass," where the great road from Ephesus into Asia intersected the southern road. It was a Roman colony. They preached in the synagogue, the first sabbath to Jews (Paul's first recorded sermon), and the next to Gentiles. Ejected subsequently by the rulers, they followed the great road to Iconium (capital of Lycaonia, a dreary plateau). They stayed "a long time," making many converts, till, a factious mob trying to stone them, they fled to

Lystra, a small rural town of simple heathens. Paul healing a cripple, they were treated as gods (Jupiter and Mercury), till Jews from Iconium followed, declaring them to be impostors, and had them stoned. They fled to

Derbe, a small town away from the high-road, where they rested awhile, returning by the same route through Lystra, Iconium, Antioch, to

Perga, where they taught with no great success; so sailed back to Antioch, where they reported their work to a full assembly of the congregation, and abode there a long time (probably six or seven years).

II. With Silas (Acts xv. 36—xviii. 22).

Antioch (in Syria), the starting-point, whence they went by land through Syria and Cilicia, confirming the Churches, and delivering the decrees of the Council of Jerusalem. Thence across the mountains to

Derbe and Lystra, where Paul circumcised Timothy, and took him with him through

Phrygia and Galatia, where Paul fell sick (Gal. iv. 13), and being forbidden by the Spirit to enter the province of Asia, went into

Mysia; but, again being forbidden to pursue his intended journey to Bithynia, he was divinely guided to

Troas, where he met with Luke; had a vision of a Macedonian inviting him to Greece; embarked, touched at Samothracia, and landed at

Neapolis (Kavala), the seaport; whence he went up by land, across the Pharsalian plain, to Philippi (in Macedonia), a Roman "colony," i.e. possessing the same laws and rights as Rome itself. Here Lydia was converted; the sorceress was exorcised, and her masters charged the apostles before the magistrates, who scourged and imprisoned them. They were miraculously released by night; converted and baptised the jailer and his household. Paul left here Luke and Timothy, and passed through Amphipolis and Apollonia to Thessalonica (metropolis of Macedonia), where he stayed three sabbaths. Assailed by a Jewish mob, Jason, his host, being bound over to keep the peace, Paul escaped to

Berœa, where he was well received till persecutors followed him; then he was sent by the brethren to

Athens, probably by sea, leaving Silas, for whom he waited; here he disputed with the Jews, and conversed with the philosophers, till forced to address the latter on Mars' hill; but, meeting with little success, he retired to Corinth, a great mercantile centre, which for a year and a-half he made the head-quarters of evangelising efforts in Achaia. Here he was joined by Silas and Timothy, and wrote the two Epistles to the Thessalonians. He was driven from the synagogue, and brought before Gallio; was received by Aquila and Priscilla, whom he converted, and with whom he sailed from

Cenchreæ, the eastern port of Corinth, to Ephesus; where he left Aquila and Priscilla, going on himself to

Cæsarea; whence it is supposed he went by land to Jerusalem, to keep the Feast of Pentecost (xviii. 21), and then returned to Antioch, where he remained "some time" (probably less than a year).

III. With Timothy (Acts xviii. 23—xxi. 33).

Antioch (Syria), starting-point; thence through

Galatia and Phrygia, of which no incidents are recorded, to Ephesus, where Apollos had baptized converts only to repentance, and with an imperfect form, whom Paul rebaptized; staying there three years, refuting false philosophy and the imposture of sorcerers, who publicly burnt their books, confessing their fraud. He retired from the synagogue; taught in the school of Tyrannus; wrote one Epistle to the Corinthians, and one to the Galatians; remained over the great annual Pan-Ionic festival of Diana, when Demetrius roused the craftsmen, and Paul was sent away by his friends to

Macedonia, where he visited and encouraged his converts in the various places visited in the former journey; passing on into

Greece, where he stayed three months, probably visiting the Churches established at Corinth and in Achaia. He intended to sail from Cenchreæ to Syria, but was waylaid by the Jews, so he sent the main body of his companions on in advance to Troas, viz. Sopater (of Berœa), Aristarchus and Secundus (of Thessalonica), Gaius (of Derbe), Timotheus (of Iconium), Tychicus and Trophimus (of the province of Asia).

Philippi was reached by some secret and unrecorded route by Paul, who was there joined by Luke. They sailed thence together, and in five days reached

Troas, where they remained seven days. Paul preached in an upper room; Eutychus fell from the window, but was miraculously restored by Paul, who "broke bread" in the congregation, and travelled by land to Assos to meet his companions, who had gone round the coast on board the ship. At

Assos Paul embarked, and they touched at

Mitylene; the next day anchoring off Chios, and the day following put in at Trogyllium, a promontory on the coast opposite the island of Samos. The next day they touched at Miletus, where they probably remained two days, as Paul sent a messenger by land to the presbyters of Ephesus to come to him, when he took a solemn farewell of them. Launching thence, they sailed with a fair wind past Coos and Rhodes to

Patara, where they changed vessels, embarking on one sailing direct to Syria; sighting

Cyprus, but leaving it to the left (i.e. sailing south of it), they landed at

TYRE, where the vessel discharged her cargo, remaining seven days, and where the disciples warned Paul not to go to Jerusalem. The Christians accompanied him to the ship, knelt on the shore, and prayed; thence they proceeded to

PTOLEMAIS (Acre), remaining one day; from whence they went to

CÆSAREA, staying many days with Philip, the deacon, where Agabus bound his own hands and feet with Paul's girdle, signifying the apostle's approaching imprisonment. From thence Paul's party, accompanied by Mnason (of Cyprus), went up by land to JERUSALEM, where they were received by a full assembly of the apostles and elders, who advised Paul to purify himself from his contact with Gentiles by joining four men in the completion of a vow, defraying their expenses. While engaged in these religious exercises he was seized by a tumultuous mob, from whom the Roman chief captain extricated him, put him in prison, and sent him to Cæsarea, to the governor Felix.

XXV. PAUL'S VOYAGE TO ROME,

WITH ARISTARCHUS AND CERTAIN PRISONERS UNDER CHARGE OF JULIUS, A CENTURION OF THE AUGUSTAN COHORT.

CÆSAREA. Paul sailed thence in a vessel bound for Adramyttium, touching at SIDON, where he visited his friends. Thence to leeward of CYPRUS (i.e. on the N. side), under the shores of Cilicia and Pamphylia, to

MYRA (a city of Lycia), where they were transhipped to an Alexandrian corn-vessel bound for Italy, which coasted along the southern shore of Asia Minor (130 miles in "many days"), to

CNIDUS, the extreme S.W. promontory; where the wind and current from the Archipelago caught and drove the ship southward to

CRETE, where they rounded Cape Salmone, and got under the shelter of its southern coast, and sailed along it to FAIR HAVENS, near which, inland, was Lasea, and where Paul advised them to winter. The harbour however being incommodious, they tried to reach

PHENICE, which had a harbour, sheltered towards the N.W. and S.W.; but they were caught by the wind Euroclydon from the N.W.; and under shelter of CLAUDA (an island S. of Crete) they prepared for a tempest by striking sail, undergirding the ship, turning her head to the wind, and lying to, so as to avoid being driven on the "Syrtes" to the N. of Libya. So they drifted slowly W. by N., at the rate of 36 miles in 24 hours, till the fourteenth day, i.e. thirteen and a-half days, till midnight = 486 miles; and St. Paul's Bay is 480 miles from Clauda in an exact line W. by N. Second day, "they lightened the ship;" third day, they "cast out the tackling;" fourteenth night, they drew near to land in the neighbourhood of rocks; fourteenth day, they ran the ship aground in a creek of MELITA (Malta), where they landed by swimming, or on portions of wreck. Here the viper fastened on Paul's hand; here also he healed the father of Publius (the chief man of the island) of fever and dysentery. After three months, they sailed in an Alexandrian corn-ship by

SYRACUSE (Sicily), where they stayed three days; and, making a circuit, they came to

RHEGIUM (Italy), and after one day they reached

PUTEOLI (Pozzuoli), in the Bay of Naples, where they rested seven days; thence they went by the Appian Way to

APPII FORUM, where brethren from Rome met them, with whom they came to ROME, and Paul remained in custody of a soldier for two full years in his own hired house.

* Stephen, in this chapter (Acts vii. 2—50), refers to God's dealings with His people, in support of his argument that God's favour has never been limited to one particular place. He glances cursorily at the sacred records, quoting paraphrastically but not literally (see next Table, "Acts," p. 58).

REVELATION.

The whole of this book is a reflex of the prophetic visions of the Old Testament. It contains pictures of that heavenly form of worship divinely manifested to Moses (of which the Tabernacle ritual was only a pattern), reproduced, and further developed, by its fulfilment in the Atonement of Christ; while it also repeats the mysterious predictions, uttered by Isaiah, Ezekiel, and Daniel, portraying the philosophy of history, the recurrence of its cycles, and the supremacy over all other powers of the kingdom of Christ. It is, therefore, full of references and allusions to the writings of Moses and the prophets, too numerous to be tabulated, and often allusive rather than literal; but the marginal references will better aid the reader in working out the connection between this Revelation, which closes Holy Scripture, and the inspirations vouchsafed to the earlier dispensation, which prepared the way for the fulness of the glory of Christ.

* This exact term is not found in any prophecy. Chrysostom and others suppose it to be quoted from some lost book. Jerome refers it to the Hebrew word Nezer, "a sprout," and identifies it with "the Branch," by which the Messiah is designated by Isaiah and Ezekiel. This view is adopted by most modern expositors. Others consider it to be equivalent to "a reproach," or "scorn of men" (Is. liii; Ps. xxii), and recognise the fulfilment of those prophecies in the low estimation in which the people of Nazareth were held by the other Jews (John i. 46).

XXX. ETHNOLOGY OF THE JEWS AND THEIR NEIGHBOURS.

According to the best modern ethnologists, there are three great divisions of the human race, three principal families from which the bulk of known nations are derived. These are, (1) the Semitic; (2) the Aryan, Indo-Germanic, or Indo-European; and (3) the Turanian or Allophylian. They differ in language, in physical type, in mental power, and in habits. The highest position is taken, in some respects, by the Semites, in others by the Aryans; the Turanians occupy altogether an inferior rank. Some ethnologists add to these three races a fourth, the Hamites, who have analogies with the Semites, and also with the Turanians.

The Hebrews were Semites, and are the accepted type of that race, whereto belonged also the Phœnicians, the Syrians, the Moabites and Ammonites, the bulk of the Arabs, the Assyrians, and the later Babylonians. We know the languages of these races, and find them nearly identical in their grammatical structure, and closely allied in their vocabularies. Dialectal differences alone separate the speeches of Sennacherib and Nebuchadnezzar from that of the Israelites, whom they subjugated. The Moabite stone is readily intelligible to any Hebraist. Western Asia, from the coast of the Mediterranean to the Zagros mountain-chain, which bounds Mesopotamia on the east, was anciently peopled, in the main, by one race, a race nearly akin to the Hebrews, descended — we may well believe — from Shem (Gen. x. 21—31), and known to moderns as "Semites." The race had ramifications in Asia Minor, but was planted especially in the central region of the ancient world, Mesopotamia and Syria.

Within this region it was, however, intermixed to some extent with what seems to have been an earlier population, a population which some writers call "indigenous." We hear of Rephaim, Horim, Avim, Emim, Anakim, Zuzim, as old inhabitants of Palestine displaced by later intruders. There are no means of determining with any certainty the ethnic character of these ancient races. The Semitic form of the names is not to be depended on, since the Hebrews naturally gave their own grammatical inflections to the foreign words which they adopted into their language. The roots of the names, Zuz, Anak, Em, &c., are either positively non-Semitic, or at any rate not shown to be Semitic. Nor can they be distinctly assigned to any other known ethnic family. These old neighbours of the Jews—(1) The Rephaim, who dwelt on the east of Jordan in the great city of Ashteroth-Karnaim (Gen. xiv. 5) and its vicinity; (2) The Zuzim, or Zamzummim, who dwelt in Ham, within the same district (Gen. xiv. 5; Deut. ii. 20); (3) The Emim, who lived east of the Dead Sea, in the country afterwards known as Moab (Deut. ii. 10); (4) The Horim, who inhabited Mount Seir, south of that sea, and adjoined on the Desert of Paran (Gen. xiv. 6; Deut. ii. 22); (5) The Avim, who held a portion of the Philistine country (Deut. ii. 23; Josh. xiii. 3); and (6) The Anakim, who possessed the region about Hebron (Num. xiii. 22)—must be regarded as outlying remnants of some ancient population, whose ethnic character is undiscovered, and as distinguished from the later incomers by huge stature, great fierceness, and great physical strength. Their chief habitat was the region east of the Jordan.

To the west of the Jordan, the country was possessed, prior to the Hebrew conquest, by eight principal races. These were the Philistines to the south-west, the Canaanites in the rich plains of Jordan and Esdraëlon, the Jebusites, Hivites, and Amorites in the mountains, the Girgasites near the Sea of Galilee, the Hittites in the Lebanon district, and the Perizzites in some uncertain locality. All these races appear to have been Hamitic. The Philistines are identified with the Caphtorim in Deut. ii. 23, and called "the remnant of the country of Caphtor (Ai-kaphtor)" in Jerem. xlvii. 4. "Ai-kaphtor" is probably the same as "Ai-guptos," the Caphtorim being, as we learn from Gen. x. 14, descendants of Mizraim, or the people of Egypt. It is true that the analogies of the Philistine language, so far as it can be made out, are Semitic rather than Egyptian; but their migration from Egypt must have been at a very early date, before the Egyptian peculiarities were well developed, and in their new country they may have adopted Semitic forms and names, or even changed their Hamitic for the Semitic speech. The Canaanites are in Gen. ix. and x. distinctly derived from Ham, and their antagonism to the Semites is throughout their whole history very marked. Hamitic roots, as san for "the sun," and bek for "city," belong to some of the oldest sites in their country (Beth-san, Baalbek). With the Canaanites were closely connected the other six nations whom the Israelites drove out—the Hivites, Hittites, Amorites, Jebusites, Perizzites, and Girgasites (Gen. x. 15, 16). Of these, by far the most important were the Hittites, known to us as Khita in the Egyptian and as Khatti in the Assyrian inscriptions. The non-Semitic character of the Hittite language is now generally acknowledged. Its roots, so far as they can be gathered from personal and geographical names, are quite unlike those of any Semitic race, while its grammatical structure is also decidedly non-Semitic. Its closest analogies are with the language of the Vannic cuneiform inscriptions, the nearest modern representative of which is the Georgian. It has been conjectured, that "in the modern Georgians we may perhaps see the physical type of the Hittites and their kindred" (Sayce), and pointed out that anciently a homogeneous population seems to have been spread from the Van region, through Melitene, Commagene, Cilicia, the Orontes valley, and the Lebanon region, of which the Hittites may be taken as the best-known example. The people had an alphabet and literature of its own, an art of a rude kind, and an architecture far from contemptible. The remaining nations—the Hivites, Jebusites, Amorites, Perizzites and Girgasites—no doubt resembled the Hittites, but were in every way inferior and less developed.

The desert bordering Palestine on the south was peopled mainly by Amalekites and Idumæans. These were, both of them, Abrahamic races, descendants of Esau, Isaac's eldest son (Gen. xxxvi. 9—12). They were thus, not only Semites, but Semites of a type allied very closely indeed to the Hebrews. The Amalekites remained always, for the most part, nomads, and became completely assimilated in their mode of life to the Arabs of the Peninsula, in whom they seem ultimately to have been absorbed. The Idumæans showed at Petra something of the Hebrew talent for architecture, and something of the Hebrew ability for trade and commerce. Though bitter opponents of the Jews during the greater portion of their career, they were ultimately acknowledged as "kindred" (Joseph. Ant. Jud. xiv. 8. § 1), and under Antipater and Herod the Great became blended with the Jews into one nation.

Another Abrahamic tribe (Gen. xxv. 2), located towards the south, but of wandering habits, was that of the MIDIANITES. The Midianites intermingled with the Ishmaelites, and probably also to some extent with the Canaanites. Their general habits were those of Arabs, though in some respects they had adopted Canaanitish customs before their first contact with the Israelites, and hence their influence upon Israel was evil and tended to corruption. We have no record of the Midianite language, excepting that which is contained in names. These are undoubtedly Semitic, and often common to the Midianites with the Israelites.

Eastward were also Abrahamic tribes, or at any rate tribes connected with the family of Abraham, the most important of which were the Moabites and Ammonites, descendants of Abraham's nephew, Lot (Gen. xix. 37, 38). We know little, comparatively speaking, of the AMMONITES, who have left no records. They worshipped the Supreme Being under the name of Moloch or Milcom, the Semitic word for "king;" and their capital city was Rabbath-Ammon, or "Great Ammon," where again we have a Semitic prefix. With their kindred, the MOABITES, we are better acquainted, both from the prophecies of Isaiah (chs. xv. and xvi) and Jeremiah (ch. xlviii), and from the important recent discovery, the "stone" erected by Mesha. This "stone" shows that the Moabite language was, in the ninth century B.C., almost identical with the Hebrew, and that the modes of expression in the two countries were similar. The differences of language are merely dialectal, such as anak for anoxi, "I," and the like. The numerals are the same; the dual termination -aim is of frequent occurrence; and a common element in the names of towns is Beth. The Moabites and Ammonites were settled races, like the Hebrews; their cities were many and strong; they cultivated the vine (Is. xvi. 8—10), grew great quantities of corn (Jer. xlviii. 32, 33), and were graziers also upon a large scale (2 Kings iii. 4). The distinction is very marked between them and the Arabs, on whom they adjoined, who dwelt in tents and wandered freely over the desert.

On the north, after the decay of the Canaanitish races, the principal neighbours of the Jews were the Phœnicians and the Aramæans or Syrians. It has been usual with ethnologists to identify the PHŒNICIANS with the Canaanites; but this involves the belief that the Canaanites were Semites, which has been shown to be untenable. The Semitic character of the Phœnicians is undisputed. Their remains have been completely analysed by the great Semitic scholars, Gesenius and Deutsch, who have shown the Phœnician form of speech to be closely akin to the Hebrew. The Phœnician ethnic character presents also certain analogies to the Jewish, combining, as it does, warlike energy and great tenacity of purpose, with a remarkable aptitude for trade and commerce. The SYRIANS, or ARAMÆANS, are another well-known Semitic race, whose language (Syriac) has undergone complete analysis. Placed in Genesis among the descendants of Shem (Gen. x. 22), bearing a name which is significant in Semitic and in no other form of speech, and speaking a tongue which, though considerably varying from the Hebrew, is unmistakeably Semite in character, their position in the Semitic group of nations is quite unassailable.

If, from these immediate neighbours of the Jews, we pass to those more distant ones with whom the circumstance of war, invasion, and conquest from time to time brought them into contact, we find that, on the south, they were liable to attack from two great nations, the Egyptians and the Ethiopians; on the east they had dealings, military and other, with three—the Assyrians, the Babylonians, and the Persians; while, on the north, they came into collision, in their later history, with four races—the Scythians, the Greeks, the Romans, and the Parthians. A few words must therefore be said, in order to complete this sketch, concerning the ethnic character and affinities of these nine remoter nations.

The EGYPTIANS are the best known of the Hamitic races. Mizraim is "the son of Ham" in Genesis (x. 6). Egypt is called repeatedly in Scripture κατ' ἐξοχήν, "the land of Ham" (Ps. cv. 23, 27; cvi. 22). Its own native name was Chemi, which has been explained as "the Black Land," but may likewise be interpreted "the land of the Hamites." The physique of the Egyptians was very marked and striking: they were tall and thin, with large hands, large and flat feet, good foreheads and eyes, depressed noses, and thick lips. They offered a marked contrast to their Semitic neighbours upon the east, while they resembled in many respects their Cushite neighbours upon the south. Their language had certain Semitic analogies, and received through contact and immigration a not inconsiderable Semitic infusion into it; but fundamentally it was non-Semitic, and may well be taken as a type of the Hamitic tongues. The form of the civilisation was Hamitic, somewhat elevated above the ordinary level by Semite influence.

The ETHIOPIANS were a coarser kind of Egyptians, with darker complexions, thicker lips, and profiles more prognathous. Their descent from Ham is distinctly asserted in Genesis (x. 6). Egyptian civilisation was readily received among them, but suffered deterioration in the process, and failed to raise the race very much above the savage condition. There were times when Ethiopia threatened to become one of the "Great Powers" of the Eastern world; but the inherent weakness of savagery caused it to relapse after each success into a comparatively unimportant position.

The ASSYRIANS, who came into contact with the Israelites before the Babylonians, were pure Semites, as appears both from the Book of Genesis (x. 22) and from the native inscriptions. The Semitic character of their language is unmistakeable, and is allowed on all hands. Their physiognomy, physical type, and manners are also clearly Semitic, and render any doubt upon the subject impossible. In features, as represented in the sculptures, they closely resemble the Jews; in general ethnic character they are not dissimilar. Their descendants, the "Chaldæans" of the mountains near Mosul, still speak a Semitic dialect, and have features closely resembling those of the Hebrews

The BABYLONIANS were a mixed race. Originally Hamites (Gen. x. 8), in the course of time they became Semitised; and, when first brought into contact with the Jews, were scarcely distinguishable from the Assyrians. The languages spoken by Sennacherib and Nebuchadnezzar differed less than Spanish and Portuguese; the two nations had an almost identical religion; and their physical type was not very different. The Babylonians were somewhat shorter and clumsier in figure, their noses more depressed, their foreheads lower, and their expression altogether more commonplace.

With the PERSIANS we come upon an entirely new and distinct nationality. The Persians belonged to the Aryan (or Indo-European) family, as Darius Hystaspis emphatically asserts in the inscription upon his tomb. Indeed the word "Iran," which is the native name for the country ruled by the Shah, is the actual word "Aryan" in another form, corresponding to the Ariané of the Greeks. The language of the Persians exists in five stages, and can be traced from about B.C. 1200 to the present day. It appears as Zend in the Zendavesta; as Achæmenian Persian in the inscriptions of Cyrus, Darius, Xerxes, and Artaverses; as Pehlevi in the inscriptions of the Sassanians and the Pehlevi version of the Zendavesta; as Pazend in the poems of Firdausi; and as modern Persian in the mouths of the existing people. In its most ancient form Persian is closely akin to Sanskrit, in its most modern to Hindustani; in all its forms it has close analogy with the tongues of the West. And the ethnic character of the people was in many respects Western. They were lively, enterprising, spirited, worshippers of a single God, Ormazd, tasteful in their architecture, possessed of a considerable power of organisation. They have been called "the Frenchmen of the East;" and certainly their character has many resemblances to that of "la grande nation." Their physique was decidedly what has been called "Caucasian"—a high forehead, a well-formed nose, large eyes, a short upper lip, a well-rounded chin. Their limbs were slighter than those of their Semitic neighbours, the Assyrians and Babylonians, but were well knit and muscular.

The SCYTHIANS, whose invasion of Palestine is prophetically described by Ezekiel (chs. xxxviii and xxxix) and historically related by Herodotus (i. 105), appear by the descriptions which Herodotus (Book iv) and Hippocrates (De Aere, Aqua, et Locis, ch. vi) give of them, to have been predominantly a Turanian race, a people "coarse and gross in their habits, with large fleshy bodies, loose joints, soft swollen bellies, and scanty hair" (Ancient Monarchies, vol. ii. p. 223). They were probably the rudest of all the races with which the "chosen people" came into contact; and it was fortunate for that people that the contact was once only in their history, and for a short time. Turanian invasions are among the most terrible misfortunes that can befall a people; and the Scythians were Turanians of the lowest type. Their customs were barbarous in the extreme. They lived in wagons or tents of the simplest kind, subsisted on mares' milk and cheese; scalped their enemies and drank their blood; and used human skin as leather. Their principal worship was that of the naked sword (Herod. iv. 62), and among their most cherished rites was human sacrifice. Their proper habitat was the tract north of the Caucasus, though it would seem that races akin to them were to be found in Asia Minor and in the mountain region between the Halys and the Caspian.

The ethnic character of the GREEKS and ROMANS is too well known to need many words in this place. The Hellenic and Italic races are universally recognised as two main branches of the great Aryan stock, and the two which in the ancient world carried Aryan civilisation to the highest point. Possessing languages nearly akin to each other, and not remotely allied to Sanskrit and Zend, possessing moreover vast energy and high intellectual power, they became respectively the masters of the West and East. The Jewish nationality narrowly escaped absorption into the Greek at the time of Antiochus Epiphanes, and both in Egypt and in Palestine received permanent Hellenic impressions. Before Rome it refused to bend, and the refusal led to its destruction.

As with the SCYTHIANS, so with the PARTHIANS, there was one occasion only when the "chosen people" came into contact with them. In B.C. 40, not long after the defeat of Crassus, a Parthian army crossed the Euphrates, and defeating the Romans under Decidius Saxa, occupied and ravaged the whole of Syria and Palestine. Jerusalem itself was plundered by them, and Antigonus placed upon the throne as Parthian viceroy, a position which he occupied for three years. The ethnic character of the Parthians is somewhat difficult to determine. Upon the whole, it seems most probable that originally they were of the Turanian race, but became Aryanised to a considerable extent by intermixture with and imitation of the Persians. They were thus, at the time of their invasion of Palestine, a people very different from the Scythians of Ezekiel's time, less coarse in every way, and comparatively speaking civilised. They are perhaps best compared with the modern Turks—Turanians also by origin, but greatly changed from their old barbarity by contact with Aryan races.

XXXI. JEWISH SECTS, PARTIES, &c.

THE ESSENES (the derivation and meaning of the name are very doubtful). This sect numbered in the time of Josephus (Antiq. xviii. 1. 5) about 4,000 devotees, who renounced all the pleasures of life; abstained from marriage, the use of meat, wine, and oil; had a community of goods; gave themselves wholly to the reading of Scripture, to united prayer and praise, to works of benevolence and mercy. They all wore white priestly dresses, lived in communities, shared the same toil; had no sacrifices, but daily lustrations; and strictly observed the Law of Moses, whom they almost deified.

THE GALILÆANS were a turbulent and seditious sect, to whom Josephus attributes a great part of the calamities of his country (cp. Luke xiii. 1). Their leader was Judas of Galilee (Acts v. 37), who attracted to him a few Pharisees; but eventually they swallowed up almost all the other sects, and were probably the "Zealots" so conspicuous at the siege of Jerusalem (Joseph. B. J. iv. 3. 9, 13, 14). They taught that all foreign domination was unscriptural; they refused to pray for foreign princes, and performed their sacrifices apart.

THE HERODIANS were a political party, rather than a religious sect. They were the partisans of the Idumæan dynasty, which, springing from heathenism, remained in taste, inclination, barbarity, and licentiousness, heathen still, though from state policy they outwardly conformed to the Jewish ritual observances. Supported in authority and position solely by Roman might, they endeavoured to repay their benefactors by performing their part of the compact in leavening the Jewish nation with laxity of moral tone, religious indifferentism, and the policy of temporising under Roman ascendancy. Hence they vied with the Sadducees in scepticism and the Greeks in licentiousness, pandered to the Herods' vice and cruelty, and truckled to the Romans. Against this demoralising leaven our Lord warned His apostles (Mark viii. 15).

THE NAZARITES (Heb. "Nazir," separated) were of two sorts, viz. those devoted in infancy by their parents to God, and those who so devoted themselves, either for life or for a limited time. Of the former were Samson, Samuel, John the Baptist. The order was instituted by God Himself, and the laws respecting it are prescribed in Num. vi, consisting mainly of abstinence from intoxicating liquors and from pollutions, and of the adoption of an ascetic mien and dress.

THE PHARISEES, a religious party whose name was derived from the Hebrew "Parush," separated, because they affected very great sanctity (John vii. 49; Acts xxvi. 5). They were strict observers of external rites and ceremonies beyond the requirements of the Law, placing the traditions of the elders on an equal footing with the written oracles. They were exclusive, formal, self-righteous; proud of their unblemished descent from Abraham; abjuring Greek culture, literature, and commerce; adhering to the land, language, and proud self-satisfaction of the ancient Hebrew race. Jerusalem was their capital; their language was Aramaic; the Hebrew Scriptures were their literature; the Temple their one centre of devotion. They held to the literal interpretation of the Law and the prophets; believed in spiritual manifestations, in the pre-existence and immortality of the soul, and in the resurrection of the dead. They were already an influential body in the time of John Hyrcanus the Maccabee (B.C. 108).

THE PROSELYTES were Gentiles converted to Judaism. They were of two kinds, viz. "Proselytes of the Temple," and "Proselytes of the Gate." The former were circumcised, admitted to the full religious privileges, and charged with the entire obligations of the Mosaic covenant, but were not esteemed to be heirs of the promises made to Abraham and his seed. The latter were allowed to join in the worship of God, standing in the outer "court of the Gentiles;" they were not bound by the ceremonial laws of Moses, but only the moral ones, or, as they were called, the Seven Precepts of Noah. They were uncircumcised, and were admitted into the Jewish Church by baptism. They are usually called "devout men" in the Acts of the Apostles. A difference was made between various nations, no heathens being admitted direct into the condition of Proselytes of the Temple. Edomites and Egyptians had this privilege in the third generation, while Ammonites and Moabites were excluded till the tenth, before which they had none of the civil rights and advantages peculiar to the Jew by descent. This strictness caused the controversy in the Christian Church as to the admission of Gentile converts without circumcision (Acts xv).

THE PUBLICANS were neither a sect nor a party, but a social class. They were the tax-collectors of the civil power. The taxes were farmed by rich Roman citizens of the Equestrian Order, or sometimes by a joint-stock company at Rome, who had agents in the provinces to arrange the actual collection from the people. These agents divided the country into districts, and offered each district to public competition, to be farmed by the highest bidder. The purchaser was usually required to pay the purchase-money, either wholly or by instalments, in advance, and he was at liberty to recoup himself. He was always a native of the country, well versed in its resources and the temper of its people; using his knowledge and power to extort as much as possible for his own profit. In this he was backed by the Equestrian Order at Rome, who carried most oppressive decrees in the Senate against defaulters. Such were the "Publicans;" universally despised; branded as "plunderers;" classed as beasts of prey, with "bears and lions," among the "most ferocious of wild beasts;" and coupled with the vilest and most contemptible characters. As much of the tax was an ad valorem duty on property and produce, which the publican gauged, there was ample opportunity for unjust exaction. To this general odium must be added the peculiar sting to "Abraham's seed, in bondage to no man," that they were no longer free; and the question was ever rife, whether it were "lawful to pay tribute to Cæsar." Even our Lord classes them with "heathen men" (Matt. xviii. 17); and the Jews forbade marriage with a family in which there was one publican, which thereby became polluted.

THE SADDUCEES, a party supposed to be named either from "Tsedek," righteousness, or from Zadok, disciple of Antigonus Sochæus, a president of the Sanhedrin (B.C. 200—170). They were the very opposite of the Pharisees, denying the authority of all revelation and tradition subsequent to Moses: sceptical with regard to the miraculous and supernatural, they denied the existence of spiritual beings, the immortality of the soul, and the resurrection of the body. Hence they were Deists, and viewed the Supreme Being as a quiescent Providence, calmly surveying from above the regular working of natural laws, and the creatures which spontaneously reproduced themselves from the original germs. They gave themselves up to ease, luxury, and self-indulgence; accepted Greek culture and intercourse; mingled with foreigners, and were not indisposed to view with indifferent liberality the laxity of heathen morals and the profanity of idle worship. They divided the hierarchy with the Pharisees, and the Chief Council seems to have been equally balanced between the two (Acts xxiii. 6); the family of Annas belonging to the Sadducean faction in our Lord's time (Acts v. 17).

THE SAMARITANS were a mixed people, derived from the colonists whom the king of Assyria sent to inhabit the land of Samaria after he had carried the Israelites captive (2 Kings xvii). These colonists had been drawn from various eastern nations; and they brought with them their various forms of national idolatry, until the plagues sent among them by God led them to petition for a priest of the God of the country to teach them the old form of worship. He was stationed at Beth-el, and they endeavoured to combine a formal reverence of God with the practice of their own heathen rites; but after the captivity of Judah they sought an alliance with the returned Jews, with whom they intermarried. When the Mosaic law as to mixed marriages was enforced, Manasses, a Jewish priest, who had married the daughter of Sanballat, chief of the Samaritans, headed a secession to Shechem, taught the people the Mosaic ritual, and erected a rival temple on Mount Gerizim; and this mixed community began to claim descent from the patriarchs, and a share in the promises, adopting the Pentateuch and Books of Joshua and Judges as their sacred books. Having the advantage of occupying a place of peculiar sanctity (Shechem), surrounded by the tombs and memorials of the patriarchs, and dividing the two portions of the Israelite people (Galilæans and Jews), they held a very strong vantage-ground, which they used to annoy their neighbours. They erected false beacons to render nugatory the announcements of the great festivals; refused a passage through their territory to pilgrims going up to the feasts; defiled the temple by scattering dead men's bones upon its altar; and finally welcomed the invasion of Alexander the Great, and offered him their temple for a heathen fane,—a proceeding which resulted in its final destruction by the Jews under John Hyrcanus (B.C. 130).

The old feud between the ten tribes and the house of David was renewed with double hostility by the Samaritans, Shechem and Jerusalem being the centres of animosity, each possessing rival claims to sanctity. Hence the point of the Samaritan woman's questions to our Lord (John iv), and the readiness with which her fellow-citizens accepted the overture of one "being a Jew" to receive them into full religious communion. The Samaritans now number scarcely 100 persons, living at Nablous (Shechem), preserving an ancient copy of the Pentateuch, keeping up an annual sacrifice of the Passover on Mount Gerizim, living peaceful and moral lives, and observing, with some peculiar variations, the Mosaic Law.

THE SANHEDRIN, "The Council" of the Jewish Church and people, was a theocratic oligarchy, which, after Alexander's conquest, if not before, held chief authority "in all causes and over all persons, ecclesiastical and civil." It was suggested by the old institution of seventy-two elders (six from each tribe), appointed by Moses, at Jethro's suggestion, to relieve him in the administration of justice (Ex. xviii. 14; Num. xi. 16). There is no trace of such a tribunal in the Book of Joshua, or in the time of the Judges or of the Kings. It consisted of an equal number (twenty-four) of priests, scribes, and elders, all of whom were required to be married, above thirty years of age, well-instructed in the law, and of good report among the people. This constituted the Supreme Court of Judicature, and Administrative Council, taking cognisance of false doctrine and teaching, as well as of breaches of the Mosaic Law, and regulating both civil and ecclesiastical observances peculiar to the Jewish nation. The power of life and death was taken from it by the Roman government (John xviii. 31; xix. 7), which otherwise covenanted to respect its decrees; though during the interval between the death of Tiberius and the accession of Caligula, and in the absence of Pilate at Rome, the opportunity was seized to stone Stephen in contravention of this compact.

The Sanhedrin usually met in the hall Gazith, within the Temple precincts, though special meetings were sometimes held in the house of the high priest (Matt. xxvi. 3), who was generally (but not necessarily) the president. There were also two vice-presidents; two scribes, or "heralds," one registering the votes of acquittal (or noes), and the other those of conviction (or ayes); and a body of lictors, or attendants (Matt. xxvi. 58). The assembly sat in the form of a semicircle, the president occupying the centre of the arc, the prisoner that of the centre of the chord, while the two heralds sat a little in advance of the president, on his right hand and his left. The name Sanhedrin is not Hebrew but Greek (συνέδριον).

The Sopherim, "Scribes" (writers), were a learned profession, neither a party nor a sect. They devoted themselves to the study of the Law, of which they were the expositors and transcribers. They were the lawyers and public notaries of the community (Matt. xxii. 35; Mark vii. 2; Luke v. 17, 21). Such were Gamaliel and Saul. In doctrine and practice they favoured the Pharisees, with whom they are often classed (Matt. xxiii. 2). From being transcribers and expounders of the Law, they supplied, after the Captivity, the place of the prophets and inspired oracles, which had ceased; and from them arose those glosses and interpretations which our Lord rebukes under the term "traditions." These became so numerous, that they were collected by the Rabbi Judah (A.D. 200) into six books, called the Mishna (Repetition of the oral law), to which was subsequently added a book of comments (Gemara), which completed the whole traditionary doctrine of the Jewish Church. The Mishna and the Gemara together constitute the Talmud, of which there are two, one by the Jews in Judæa (called the Jerusalem Talmud), the other by those in Babylon (called the Babylonian).

Keneseth, "Synagogue," was a term applied both to the congregation in a provincial town, and to the room in which it met during the week for mutual instruction, disputation, and administration of justice, and on the sabbath for prayer and praise (not sacrifice). These buildings were the schools of the children, the debating clubs and libraries of the youths; there were 480 of them in Jerusalem.

Each Jewish community had its officers, viz.:—

1. Ten Batlanim (men of leisure), who devoted themselves to the interests of the community (see Jer. iii. 15). They were the provincial council, administering both ecclesiastical and civil affairs. These were the "rulers of the synagogue," and had special seats of honour assigned them during Divine worship (Matt. xxiii. 6; Acts xiii. 15).

2. The Shelîach (Delegate). He was a layman, delegated by the chief shepherd (Parnas) to recite the most sacred portions of the liturgy. The office was not permanently vested in one person, but one so delegated was the mouthpiece, for the time being, of the congregation. In large towns the qualifications required were considerable and were strictly exacted, and became the groundwork of those required for Christian bishops (1 Tim. iii. 1—7). Our Lord seems to have held this office at Nazareth (Luke iv. 16). From hence arose Christian "prophets" or "presbyters."

3. The Chazzan (literally Inspector), a minister or attendant, whose duties were partly ecclesiastical, partly civil:—

(a) To unrobe the priests of their sacerdotal vestments.
(b) To blow the trumpet for public announcements.
(c) To hand the roll of the Law to the Reader.
(d) To act as messenger to "the rulers," when dispensing justice.
(e) To inflict scourging (forty stripes save one).
(f) To take charge of the furniture, light the sabbath lamp, clean the synagogue.

These Chazzanim are mentioned fifteen times in the New Testament, but different words are used in the A.V.: viz. Officer in eleven passages (Matt. v. 25; John vii. 32, 45, 46; xviii. 3, 12, 18, 22; xix. 6; Acts v. 22, 26); Servant in three passages (Matt. xxvi. 58; Mark xiv. 54, 65); Minister in one passage (Luke iv. 20). It was with them that Peter sat and warmed himself; and it was they who smote Jesus with the palms of their hands. The Greek word is always ὑπηρέται.

4. The Meturgeman (Interpreter). As the synagogue came mainly into use after the Captivity, when Hebrew was not well known and Greek was more generally used in common life, the Law was interpreted to the congregation by an interpreter, selected for his learning and knowledge of languages. To guard against false interpretation, the learned formed a guild of "interpreters," who drew up a Book of Paraphrases on the hebdomadal lessons, which from them was called the "Targum." This word Meturgeman, or Turgeman, has been corrupted into the modern Dragoman.

Keneseth haggedolah, "Great Synagogue," has been already mentioned (pp. 34 sq.). It is remarkable that there is no allusion to this body in Holy Scripture, in the Apocrypha, in Philo, or in Josephus. The earliest notice of it is found in the Pirke Aboth, a Hebrew book attributed to the second century after Christ. According to this book it ceased to exist before the historical origin of the Sanhedrin. Some critics have regarded these two bodies as identical. At all events they seem never to have existed side by side. It is not improbable that the Sanhedrin was a revival of the Great Synagogue, under another name, with diminished numbers and limited functions.

XXXII. THE JEWISH YEAR.

Month of Sacred Year.	Month of Civil Year.	Name.	Number of Days.	English Months.	Products.	Jewish Festivals.
I.	VII.	Abîb, or Nisan (Exod. xii. 2; xiii. 4).	30	March, April.	Barley ripe. Fig in blossom.	Passover. Unleavened Bread.
II.	VIII.	Iyar, or Zif.	29	April, May.	Barley harvest.
III.	IX.	Sivan.	30	May, June.	Wheat harvest.	Pentecost.
IV.	X.	Thammuz.	29	June, July.	Early vintage.
V.	XI.	Ab (Ezra vii. 9).	30	July, August.	Ripe figs.
VI.	XII.	Elul (Neh. vi. 15).	29	August, Sept.	General vintage.
VII.	I.	Tisri (1 Kings viii. 2).	30	Sept., Oct.	Ploughing and Sowing.	Feast of Trumpets. Atonement. Feast of Tabernacles.
VIII.	II.	Bul (1 Kings vi. 38).	29	Oct., Nov.	Latter grapes.
IX.	III.	Chisleu (Zech vii. 1).	30	Nov., Dec.	Snow.	Dedication.
X.	IV.	Tebeth (Esth. ii. 16).	29	Dec., Jan.	Grass after rain.
XI.	V.	Shebat (Zech. i. 7).	30	Jan., Feb.	Winter fig.
XII.	VI.	Adar (Ezra vi. 15).	29	Feb., March.	Almond blossom	Purim.
XIII.		Ve-Adar, Intercalary.

N.B.—The SACRED YEAR was reckoned from the moon after the vernal equinox.
The CIVIL YEAR began in September (the less productive period of the year).
The prophets speak of the sacred year; those engaged in secular pursuits, of the civil year. The year was divided into 12 lunar months, with a thirteenth, or intercalary month, every third year.

XXXIII. GEOGRAPHY AND TOPOGRAPHY OF THE HOLY LAND.

The country to the east of the Levant, measured from N. to S., beginning above Antioch and ending in the plain below Beer-sheba, is 360 miles in length, 60 in breadth at the narrowest, 100 at the widest part. It is as mountainous as Switzerland, though the mountains do not attain a great elevation. The northern portion (nearly two-thirds of the whole) is known as "SYRIA," the southern as "PALESTINE."

PHYSICAL FORMATION.

SYRIA. A branch of Mount Taurus running southward soon divides into two main forks, the one (Libanus) following the coast line, the other (Anti-Libanus) turning inland, and then sweeping westward, till it joins the other in the rocky heights that form the northern wall of the PLAIN of ESDRAËLON. The latter is broader, but less elevated than the former, and more barren, but it throws out one lofty offshoot in the jagged needle-points of HERMON (10,000 feet), from which there is spread out a fan-like range tending eastward, which sweeps along the plain past Damascus to Palmyra. A little S. of HERMON the mountains of Gilead commence, and extend in an irregular chain southward, till they join those of MOAB and EDOM, which skirt the eastern shore of the DEAD SEA. LIBANUS runs from N. to S. along the western coast, broken only in three places; (1) by the great valley of the Orontes (where ANTIOCH stands), (2) by the narrow plain of ISSUS (near Iskanderûn), and (3) by the wide break called the "Entrance of Hamath" (Numb. xxxiv); until, having reached its highest point (10,000 feet) near "The Cedars," it turns abruptly westward, and projects a precipitous promontory into the sea between Tyre and Achzib (Josh. xix. 29), creating a natural barrier between Syria and Palestine. Between the mouths of the Orontes valley and the Entrance of Hamath, a wide plain stretches along the seacoast, on which stood LAODICEA (Latakea); and, below it, the mountain range throws off frequent lateral roots E. and W., sometimes jutting into the sea, forming alternate bays and promontories, on the latter of which are successively situated, TRIPOLI, BEYROUT, SIDON, and TYRE. Between the two branches, Libanus and Anti-Libanus, lies the plain of Cœle-Syria (70 by 7 miles), drained by the river Leontes, which for four-fifths of its course flows towards the S. W., but then turning W. through a very narrow gorge, empties itself into the Mediterranean about two miles from Tyre.

PALESTINE begins at Achzib. It is bounded on the W. by the Mediterranean, and on the E. by the Jordan. Its total length is about 140 miles, and its average breadth 70.

The whole country between these boundaries is an irregular mass of mountain range, rising in a central core, which extends from the gorge of the Leontes, with but one break, till it terminates almost precipitously at Beer-sheba. That one break is the PLAIN of ESDRAËLON, which cuts both the range and the country in half, running irregularly across from the Mediterranean (at Kaifa) to the Jordan, near BETH-SHAN. This plain is bounded on the N. by the rocky heights of Nazareth, terminating in the Mount of Precipitation and Mount Tabor; on the E. by Little Hermon, or "the hill of Moreh" (an isolated offshoot of Anti-Libanus); and on the S. and W. by the range of CARMEL, which, coming up from the sea, sweeps round S.E. by JENIN (En-gannim), till it recoils with a northward termination (Mount GILBOA), which almost divides the plain in half. It then throws off a number of isolated knolls and undulating downs about DOTHAN and the "HILL of SAMARIA," and connects itself with the main Samaritan range (EBAL and GERIZIM). Continuing its southerly course, it joins the "hill country of Judæa," gradually increasing in elevation until it reaches its culminating point in the plateau of Mamre (above HEBRON), about 3,600 feet above the sea.

One spur of this range, tending eastward, terminates in an abrupt cliff, surrounded on three sides by a deep and narrow gorge (Hinnom and Kedron, which meet at the foot), forming a natural moat. On this spur stands Jerusalem, the ancient impregnable fortress of Jebus. That city, together with Mount Olivet (the opposite crown of the Kedron gorge), Bethlehem (on one peak of the main range), and the "House of Abraham," at Mamre, are the highest points in Palestine.

This mountain range is cleft lengthwise (from N. to S.) by a singular phenomenon, viz. a great and deep valley, which begins at Antioch and extends to the Gulf of Akaba. At first it follows the course of the Orontes, then that of the Leontes, forming the "Valley of Lebanon," for an extent of 70 miles. It then falls rapidly to the upper fountains of the Jordan, joins the plains of Huleh, and forms the Jordan Valley to the Dead Sea, whence it continues to the Gulf of Akaba. The valley of Lebanon at its northern extremity is 2,300 feet above the sea-level; at Huleh it is level with the Mediterranean; while the surface of the Sea of Tiberias is 682 feet, and that of the Dead Sea 1,292 feet below it. From thence the valley gradually rises, until it reaches the sea-level at EZION-GEBER. This valley is 300 miles long, 140 of which are below the level of the sea, forming a deep and wide trench in the mountain chain, so that, to one standing in Palestine, the eastern bank of the Jordan seems to be flanked by a continuous range of mountains, which is really only the edge of the cleft, the elevated plateau continuing eastward in a gentle decline, till it sinks into the "Syrian Desert."

SUMMARY.

MOUNTAINS. The two great ranges are: Eastern—Anti-Libanus, Bashan, Gilead, Moab, and Edom; Western—Libanus, Carmel, Samaritan and Judæan Hills.

PLAINS. Maritime.—SHARON, on the western coast between Joppa and Hor, which extends somewhat inland; PHILISTIA, a narrower strip, running southward from Joppa to the "Desert of Shur," known as the "Land of the Philistines," who gave to the country its name "Palestine."

Central.—ESDRAËLON, the battle-field of Palestine, is an irregular triangle, one side (12 miles) formed by the Galilæan hills, another (18 miles) running from the E. to the Samaritan range, a third (15 miles) from Jenin to the mountains of Nazareth. But it consists of three parts: (1) N., terminating in a narrow pass into the plain of Accho W., and running on past Tabor eastward to the hills of Galilee. This is the Plain of Megiddo, where Barak defeated Sisera, and Pharaoh Necho slew Josiah. It is bounded on the S. by the terminations of Little Hermon and Gilboa, between which runs (2) the Plain of Jezreel, descending past the well of Harod (where Gideon's 300 men lapped with their tongues, Judg. vii), by Bethshan (where the bodies of Saul and Jonathan were exposed), to the banks of the Jordan; and (3) the Plain of Jenin (En-gannim, "the garden-house," 2 Kin. ix. 27, towards which Ahaziah fled from Jehu), extending southward from Gilboa to the Samaritan range. The most important historically is (2), in which the Philistines from Hermon triumphed over Saul encamped on Gilboa. At the foot of the former hill were Shunem, Nain, and En-dor; on the latter (Gilboa) stood Jezreel, and at its foot lay Naboth's vineyard. Here were fought most of the battles between Israel and the Syrians (2 Kings).

Eastern.—ARAMÆA (the "Highland" lying to the N.E. of Palestine), a vast plateau, extending from the mountains of Gilead and Bashan to the Euphrates eastward, from the Lebanons to the Arabian Desert southward. This tract must be divided into three parts: (1) ARAM-NAHARAIM (Highland between the two Rivers), or PADAN-ARAM, lying between the Tigris and Euphrates, better known by its Greek name, MESOPOTAMIA; (2) ARAM-DAMESK (Highland of Damascus), 2 Sam. viii. 6; (3) "WILDERNESS" OF ARAM (2 Chron. viii. 4), still called the Hauran. It should be noted, that where "Syria" or "Syrian language" occurs in the Authorised Version, the original has "Aram" and "Aramaic" respectively.

PLATEAUX. Bashan, Gilead, Hauran.

VALLEYS. The great central depression intersecting the country from N. to S., beginning with that of Orontes (in the N.), followed by that of Lebanon or Cœle-Syria, Huleh, Jordan, Siddim, and Akaba.

RIVERS. ORONTES, flowing N. from Mount Libanus through Antioch to the Mediterranean, 149 miles; LEONTES, rising near Baalbek, flows S. down the valley of Lebanon to the Mediterranean, 55 miles; BÂRADA (Abana) rises in Anti-Libanus, flows in many channels to Damascus (23 miles), and is absorbed in irrigating the plain. ARNON was the boundary between Moab and the Amorites, and became the southern frontier of the Israelites east of Jordan. It enters the Dead Sea through a narrow chasm in the rock. JABBOK rises in the eastern plateau, winds westward down a narrow gorge, and falls into the Jordan, halfway between the Sea of Galilee and the Dead Sea. Except during the winter rains, it is almost dry. It was the boundary between the territories of Sihon and Og (Josh. xii); and also the northern frontier of Ammon, and the scene of Jacob's wrestling with the angel (Gen. xxxii. 22—24). KISHON drains the Plain of Esdraëlon, and falls into the Bay of Kaifa. JORDAN (= descending) rises at the foot of Hermon, and passing through the waters of MEROM and Sea of Tiberias, falls into the Dead Sea, from which there is no outlet. The direct distance between its source and mouth is 92 miles; from the Sea of Tiberias to the Dead Sea 60; but its course between the two is 200, with a fall of 610 feet in 60 miles. KEDRON is now a dry bed, running from Jerusalem to the Dead Sea.

LAKES. MEROM (Huleh), six miles long by four broad; TIBERIAS, fifteen by eight miles; DEAD SEA (or Lake Asphaltites), forty-six by ten miles.

CHIEF TOWNS OF SYRIA.

ANTIOCH, the capital of the Seleucidæ, is situated 16 miles from the sea (41 from the mouth of the tortuous Orontes); its seaport was SELEUCIA. It was the third city in the Roman Empire; became the first centre of Christian Missions under Paul and Barnabas (Acts xiii. 1, 2, &c.); and after the destruction of Jerusalem was the head of the Eastern Church, its Patriarchate extending to Babylon, and including the whole of Syria and Palestine.

DAMASCUS is the most ancient existing city. Founded by Uz, son of Aram, son of Shem, it has existed as a city without intermission for about 4,000 years, and is still prosperous, with a population of 150,000. It owes its continued prosperity to its unique position, at the foot of the barren mountains that form the eastern termination of Anti-Libanus, and at the edge of the wide sandy desert that stretches for eight days' journey to the Euphrates. It is a paradise in a wilderness, the "garden of the Lord" in the middle of wide-spread desolation. Its luxuriance is due to the river Abana (and its tributary the Pharpar), which bursts out from the mountains, forces a passage through the limestone rock, distributes its waters over the alluvial deposit brought down by its boisterous torrent, and is entirely absorbed in a plain only 30 miles in diameter. It was probably visited by Abraham in his journey to Canaan (Gen. xv. 2), whence he obtained his steward; and to it he pursued the four kings who sacked Sodom. It was subjugated by David (2 Sam. viii. 6), after which, under the dynasty of the Hadads, its policy was to encourage internecine war between the rival kingdoms of Israel and Judah, siding sometimes with one, sometimes with the other, and it was alternately conquered and victorious, until the Assyrians triumphed over it and Israel (2 Kings xvi. 9); but it is called by Isaiah "the head of Syria" (Is. vii. 8). For a time it became inferior to Antioch; after the battle of Issus it passed into the hands of the Romans; in Paul's time it was held by Aretas the Arabian (2 Cor. xi. 32); it grew in magnificence, and when captured by Mohammedan Arabs (A.D. 634) was "one of the first cities of the East."

TYRE (Tsur—the Rock) probably gave its name to Syria. Its marvellous wealth and commerce are described by Ezekiel (xxvii), and its destruction by Nebuchadnezzar foretold (Ezek. xxvi. 7), which happened after thirteen years' siege. It was rebuilt on an island rock, but again stormed by Alexander. The Israelites were unable to take it (Judg. i. 31). David and Solomon made peace with Hiram its king (2 Sam. v. 11; 1 Kings v). Our Lord once visited its neighbourhood (Matt. xv. 21), and Paul landed at its port (Acts xxi. 3).

ZIDON (Saïda—Fish), the mother city of Phœnicia (Is. xxiii. 12), is said to take its name from a son of Canaan; but was more probably so called from the primary occupation of its Canaanite builders, Sidon being the Greek spelling of the Syriac Saïda. It is one of the oldest cities in the world, and was already famous in Joshua's time (xix. 28). Its architects were the best in Syria (1 Kings v). Ahab married the daughter of its king Ethbaal. It was captured by Shalmaneser, B.C. 720, and again by the Persians, B.C. 350. Paul touched there on his voyage to Rome (Acts xxvii. 3). Near to Zidon stood Zarephath, where Elijah was received by the widow (1 Kings xvii. 9).

CHIEF TOWNS OF PALESTINE.

On the Coast. 1. ACCHO, or Akka, near the foot of Mount Carmel, was occupied by Phœnicians, whom the tribe of Asher could not dislodge. It is only once mentioned in the Old Testament (Judg. i. 31), and once in the New, under its later Greek name, Ptolemais (Acts xxi. 7). Under the Crusaders, it became the seat of the Christian kingdom, and the head-quarters of the Knights Templars, from whom it derived its modern name of Saint Jean d'Acre. The plain of Accho, watered by the Kishon, is the most fertile in Palestine.

2. CÆSAREA has no place in history before Christ. It was only a poor landing-place, 27 miles N. of Joppa, till Herod the Great built a city there worthy of the Roman power, made it the seat of government, and called it Cæsarea Sebaste (Augusta) in honour of the Emperor. It was the central depôt of Roman troops.

3. JOPPA (Jaffa, Yâfa) is a place of very great antiquity. It was allotted to Dan (Josh. xix. 46). It was the port at which the timber from Lebanon for building Solomon's temple was landed (2 Chron. ii. 16), and again for rebuilding it (Ezra iii. 7). From it Jonah embarked when he fled to TARSHISH (in Spain); here Peter restored Dorcas to life, saw his vision, and received the messengers of Cornelius. It is frequently mentioned in the story of the wars of the Maccabees. It is about 35 miles distant by road from Jerusalem.

Central. The main cities of Palestine were on heights naturally strong, and were also fortified by art.

BETHSAIDA, on the Jordan, two miles above the Sea of Galilee (also called Julias, after the daughter of Augustus), was built by Philip the tetrarch. Two cities were so called, both deriving their name, "House of Fishing," from the great shoals of fish attracted thither by the hot springs. It was here that Christ fed the five thousand (Luke ix. 10—17).

BETHSAIDA (El-Tabigheh), principally mentioned in the Gospels, and warned by the fate of its namesake SAÏDA (Sidon) on the other sea, was about two miles south-west of Chorazin, on the beach, just under the rocky promontory on which stood Capernaum, of which it was a suburb. It was the residence of Andrew, Peter, James, John, and Philip (probably also of Thomas, John xxi. 2), and the scene of two miraculous draughts of fish.

CAPERNAUM (*Khan Minyeh) was a Roman settlement with a castellated fort, on a promontory overlooking the Lake, "in the borders of Zabulon and Nephthalim." It was the centre of Roman taxation and government in Galilee; and accordingly possessed a garrison (Matt. viii. 5), with centurions and other officers. Civil representatives of the Roman power (the nobleman, John iv. 46), with a large staff of tax-gatherers (Mark ii. 15), were stationed there; but the Jews were too small and poor a colony to build their own synagogue (Luke vii. 5). Capernaum was built at the junction of the four great central roads from Arabia, Egypt (viâ Jerusalem), Tyre, and Damascus, and at the northern corner of the luxuriant "Plain of Gennesaret." Though adjacent to the sea, it does not seem to have stood on the beach. Our Lord made it "His own city" after His rejection from Nazareth; He often taught in its synagogue, yet only once did He illustrate His teaching by a parable taken from seafaring pursuits (namely, the "Drawnet"), usually choosing illustrations from the cultivation of "the Plain," or the traffic of the merchants, who bartered their goods at the Junction Fount outside the city. Here Levi sat at receipt of custom, and entertained our Lord and many publicans at a feast. Here Christ healed the palsied man (Matt. ix. 2—7); sent Peter for the tribute-money; healed the man with a withered hand; raised Jairus' daughter; most probably converted Mary of the adjoining village of Magdala; preached the sermon on the "Bread of Life" (John vi. 59), and that "in the Plain;" and foretold the overthrow of Capernaum from its proud and elevated position (Matt. xi. 23, 24), noting the similarity of its site in the "Garden of Princes" to that of Sodom in the "Garden of the Lord" (Gen. xiii. 10).

CÆSAREA PHILIPPI (Banias), near the upper source of the Jordan. It is probably the site of "Baal-gad," the northern limit of Joshua's conquests (Josh. xi. 17). Here Herod the Great erected a temple to Cæsar Augustus, which Philip (Luke iii. 1) enlarged, calling it by the name of the reigning emperor (Tiberius Cæsar), with the addition of his own. It was here that Peter confessed Christ's Divinity, six days before He was transfigured, as is supposed, on the adjacent Hermon.

CHORAZIN (Tell-Hum) stood on the northern shore (western extremity) of the Lake of Gennesaret, a position on that sea corresponding to that of Tyre on the Mediterranean; hence our Lord's comparison of the two (Matt. xi. 21, 22).

DECAPOLIS (Ten Cities), a district to the east of Jordan, lying south and south-east of the Sea of Galilee, extending north to Damascus, and south to the river Jabbok, colonised by veterans from the army of Alexander (whence its Greek name). The most important of its cities were Gerasa, Gadara, Hippos, Pella, Philadelphia, Scythopolis (on the west of Jordan).

GENNESARET. The banks of the Sea of Galilee are almost precipitous. On the east there is only one break, viz. opposite Tiberias. On the north-west is the small bay between Chorazin and Bethsaida, with its crescent-shaped plain about two miles in length by three-quarters of a mile in width, at the southern extremity of which stood the promontory of Capernaum. Rounding this we come upon the rich tropical plain of "Gennesaret," the Garden of Princes (the scene of "the Sower"), teeming with rich vegetation, and hedged to the water's brink with oleanders, and the nubk thorn, filled with myriads of sparrows (Luke xii. 6). This plain sweeps into an amphitheatre of hills, having a width of about one mile in its broadest part, and a length of about three miles from horn to horn.

MAGDALA, at the southern extremity of the Plain of Gennesaret, behind which are the "Mount of Beatitudes," and the traditional site of the miracle of feeding the four thousand.

NAZARETH. Ascending the height, and journeying west by south, we come to a wide plateau on the cluster of hills which form the northern wall

* The identification of Capernaum with the promontory by Khan Minyeh is supported by the universal testimony of the most ancient travellers, by the minute description of Matthew, and by the whole tenour of the Gospel narrative. There is scarcely a single valid argument in favour of Tell-Hum.

of the Plain of Esdraëlon, and in its centre is a small dell, out of whose bosom rises, beside a crystal fountain, a knoll on which stood CANA. Passing it we mount a higher range of hills to the west, and find ourselves on the margin of an extinct volcano, on the sides of whose crater the city of Nazareth clings with its houses tier above tier.

ROYAL AND SACRED PLACES.

The history of the Old Testament is mainly confined, in Palestine, to that portion below Mount Tabor, and chiefly centres round Esdraëlon, Shechem, Shiloh, Beth-el, Mamre, Hebron, Jerusalem, Beer-sheba, all which towns (except the last) stand on high elevations.

BEER-SHEBA (well of the oath, or well of seven) lay at the foot of the range, and on the edge of the plain stretching from Egypt round to the vale of Siddim. It is eleven miles south of Hebron, but twelve hours' walk. To it Abraham retired after the destruction of Sodom, and lived there 75 years, Isaac 180, Jacob 77, and Esau 100. Abraham dug there two large wells, and Isaac five more, which still exist. Abraham also built an altar, and planted a sacred grove round it, which became the first fixed sanctuary in Palestine, and here Jacob and his whole family sacrificed, as they went down into Egypt. Here also Abraham received orders to take Isaac and sacrifice him, and here were enacted all the chief events of Isaac's life:—his own birth, and that of Esau and Jacob; the purchase by Jacob of Esau's birthright, and his reception of his father's blessing. Here Samuel's sons sat as judges (1 Sam. viii. 2), and Elijah left his servant when fleeing to Mount Sinai (1 Kings xix. 3). It was the birthplace of one queen of Judah, Zibiah, wife of Ahaziah (2 Kings xii. 1); a place of idolatrous worship (2 Kings xxiii. 8); and the southern boundary of Israel.

BETHANY lies on the eastern shoulder of the Mount of Olives, a mile and a half from Jerusalem, on the way to Jericho. It is reached by three roads: (1) winding westward to the north of the summit of Olivet; (2) the oldest road, striking directly up the hill, and meeting the other beyond the summit; (3) winding round the eastern shoulder. All start from Gethsemane, in the bottom of the Kedron valley. Bethany is only celebrated for our Lord's visits to the house of Lazarus on three occasions: once when Mary sat at His feet (Luke x. 38—42); again when He raised Lazarus (John xi); and again when, in Simon's house, Mary anointed His "body for the burial" (Matt. xxvi. 6, 7); from which time, till the night of His betrayal, He appears to have slept there every night. In the immediate neighbourhood Jesus ascended to heaven.

BETH-EL (Luz, anciently a Canaanite royal city) was the boundary town between Benjamin and Ephraim (Josh. xviii. 22). Situated at the entrance of two great mountain-passes, (1) by Michmash to Jericho, (2) by Beth-horon to the plains of Sharon and Philistia by the sea, it was the key to the southern kingdom; hence it was one of Joshua's first conquests, and became the border-fortress of Israel. It stands on a height midway between Shechem and Hebron, in the very centre of the land, within sight of Jerusalem, only seven miles distant. Here Abraham built his second altar, received the second promise from Jehovah, and returned to sacrifice after going to Egypt. Jacob, fleeing from Esau, slept under the shelter of Abraham's altar, had a vision of angels, and gave to the spot its name, "House of God;" he returned after twenty years to perform his vow there, rebuilt the altar, set up a pillar, and received his change of name. Here he buried Deborah under an oak, beneath whose shadow another Deborah (Judg. iv. 5) had her tent. Samuel made it a seat of judgment and central place of sacrifice, and to it David sent firstfruits of the spoil of Ziklag (1 Sam. xxx. 27). Jeroboam I made it the chief sanctuary of his kingdom, setting up a calf and altar, which Josiah destroyed; but in Elijah's last visit before his translation there was a School of the Prophets still existing. To it Elisha returned from Jericho, and cursed the mocking youths. Under Jeroboam II it was a royal residence, with a royal chapel and chaplains, when the prophet Amos was sent there to warn Israel (Amos vii. 13). After the Captivity, the priest sent from Assyria to teach the settlers was stationed at Beth-el.

Around Beth-el, grouped on a cluster of hills, are Ophrah (Gideon's native place), and Rimmon (the refuge of the Benjamites, Judg. xx. 45), on the east; Ramah (Samuel's home), Mizpeh (the great place of assembly, where Saul was elected), Gibeah (Saul's native place), and Anathoth (the birthplace of Jeremiah), in a circle to the south.

BETHLEHEM (House of Bread) is about four miles south of Jerusalem. It is also called Ephrath and Ephratah (Mic. v. 2). It was the scene of Rachel's death and burial (Gen. xxxv. 19); the native place of Samuel's father (1 Sam. i. 1); the residence of Boaz and Ruth (Ruth iv. 11); and the birthplace of David (1 Sam. xvii. 12). It was once captured by the Philistines (2 Sam. xxiii. 14). The house of Boaz, the patrimony of David, was bestowed by him on Chimham the Gileadite, and became the Khan, or inn, on the great road to Egypt. It was the last rallying-point of the remnant of Judah after the invasion of Nebuchadnezzar (Jer. xli. 17), and the birthplace of our Lord (Luke ii. 11).

HEBRON (Kirjath-Arba, four cities) consists of four villages on a cluster of heights, about six hours' walk south of Bethlehem, and eleven miles from Jerusalem. Its foundation was nearly contemporary with that of Damascus. Sarah died and was buried here, in the cave of Machpelah, to which were brought the remains of Abraham, Isaac, Rebekah, Leah, and Jacob. It became the inheritance of Caleb, and was a Levitical city and a city of refuge. It became David's first capital, where six of his sons were born; and here Joab killed Abner, David received from the heads of the ten tribes the offer of the kingdom, and Absalom began his rebellion.

JERICHO is distant about five and a half hours' walk from Jerusalem to the north-east, in the deep valley of the Jordan, near its mouth. It was the first acquisition of Joshua, miraculously thrown open to him, and required by God to be burnt as a first-offering (Josh. vi); and a curse was imprecated on any one who rebuilt it, which fell upon Hiel the Beth-elite in the time of Ahab, 500 years later (1 Kings xvi. 34). In the time of Elisha there was a School of the Prophets there. Antony gave it to Cleopatra. Herod rented it of her, and afterwards built a palace there, in which he died. The Jericho of the New Testament (Riha) was a mile and a half to the south of the old city; it was a small place, but was visited by our Lord, when He healed Bar-Timæus and converted Zacchæus (Luke xviii. 35; xix. 1—9).

JERUSALEM (Jebus-Salem?), the ancient royal city, as is said, of MELCHI-ZEDEK (the King of Righteousness), and chief fortress of the Jebusite tribe, stands on a spur of the main range, cleft to the south into two ridges, of which the west (ZION) is the higher, and the east (Moriah) the more precipitous; the former has two peaks (Zion and Acra), and the latter two (Moriah and Bezetha), each separated from the other by a shallow depression. On Moriah Abraham offered Isaac, David the expiatory sacrifice to stay the destroying angel (2 Sam. xxiv. 25), and Solomon built the Temple. It was unconquered by the Israelites till David took it and made it the capital, from which time the national history centred around it. Its isolated position and natural strength made it suitable for its purpose; but its small dimensions prevented its being more than a centre of defence and government. On its western side was the deep gorge of Hinnom, on the east that of the Kedron (also called Jehoshaphat); both gorges unite at the southern extremity, and run on to the Dead Sea, 15 miles distant. It is 33 miles from the Mediterranean, and at a maximum elevation of 2,528 feet above its level. It remained the capital for 460 years, till burned by Nebuchadnezzar; but was rebuilt by Ezra and Nehemiah, and destroyed by the Romans, A.D. 70. In the time of our Lord it was little more than the centre of the priesthood and university of Judaism, inhabited by the literati and devotees; it contained 480 synagogues for instruction. The TEMPLE was built on the crown of Moriah, "the threshing-floor of Araunah" (2 Chron. iii. 1), with a surrounding platform 612 feet square. The building (Naos) would seem to have stood on the summit of the rock, in which graduated platforms were cut, forming the courts of the Jews and women. The Naos was small (60 by 20 cubits), and was divided into the Holy of Holies and Holy Place (i.e. a chancel and nave), the former used once a year, the latter occupied only by the priests performing daily service. In the former was the ark; in the latter, the altar of incense (in the centre of the further end), with the table of shew-bread on its one side and the golden candlestick on the other. These two parts were separated by a veil, which was rent at the crucifixion (Matt. xxvii. 51). The court of the Gentiles surrounded the Naos, but was on a lower platform, separated off by a trellis fence. The Naos was, like Mount Sinai, the sanctuary of Jehovah, fenced off (Exod. xix. 23) from the Gentiles' court, the plain below. Solomon finished his temple B.C. 1004; it was destroyed B.C. 588; rebuilt under Ezra and Nehemiah B.C. 515; polluted by Antiochus B.C. 167; its restoration commenced by Herod B.C. 17; finished A.D. 29; again destroyed by Titus A.D. 70.

MAMRE is situated half an hour's walk above Hebron, on the highest elevation in Palestine, overlooking the vale of Siddim and the Mediterranean. This was Abraham's dwelling-place, when news came to him of Lot's capture. Here he had the vision of God's spiritual Presence,—the lamp of fire (Gen. xv. 17); here Ishmael was born, the rite of circumcision was ordered, the promise by the three angels of Isaac's birth and the revelation of the destruction of Sodom were made (Gen. xviii).

SAMARIA, the second capital of Israel, was built by Omri (Ahab's father), on the hill of Shemer (a little north-west of Shechem), and was the scene of many events under the monarchy. It was occupied by the Syrians (1 Kings xx. 34), taken (B.C. 720) by Assyrians, and rebuilt by Herod the Great.

SHECHEM (Nablous), on the side of Gerizim, was the first spot on which Abraham built an altar (Gen. xii. 6); hence it is the most anciently sacred place in Hebrew history. This altar Jacob rescued from the Amorites (Gen. xlviii. 22), and rebuilt and surrounded with a parcel of land he bought (Gen. xxxiii. 18—20), which became the burial-place of the Patriarchs (Acts vii. 16). It was the scene of the slaughter of the Shechemites by Simeon and Levi (Gen. xxxiv. 25); under a famous oak Jacob buried the Aramite gods, around which oak Joshua assembled the Israelites to offer sacrifice, and to read out the blessings (from Gerizim) and curses (from Ebal) of the Law, immediately on entering the Promised Land; and here again he assembled them to renew the covenant before he died, when he set up a pillar as a witness (Josh. xxiv. 26). At this pillar Abimelech was made king, and Rehoboam met the heads of tribes, who sought redress. Here the ten tribes revolted, and made Jeroboam their king. Its site is still known as "The Pillar."

At the well of Jacob (300 paces south-east) our Lord conversed with the Samaritan woman (John iv). It was then the chief city of the Samaritan sect, a remnant of whom still reside there. A mile distant to the east is Joseph's tomb.

SHILOH lies a little off the road, on a knoll rising out of a secluded dell, "on the north side of Beth-el, on the east of the highway that goeth up from Beth-el to Shechem, and on the south of Lebonah" (Judg. xxi. 19). Here Joshua set up the tabernacle, made the allotment of Canaan to the tribes, and dismissed them with his benediction to their possessions. It became the first great sanctuary; priests' houses sprang up round it, till it was called "the temple" (1 Sam. iii. 3). Here Eli lived and died, Samuel ministered before the Lord, and an annual festival was held in honour of the ark (Judg. xxi. 19—24). After the capture of the ark by the Philistines, Shiloh declined; but Ahijah prophesied there (1 Kings xiv. 1—17). Its destruction was made a warning to Jerusalem (Jer. vii. 12—14; xxvi. 6).

TIRZAH, the first capital of Israel, lies a little to the north-east of Shechem, and is beautifully situated on a ridge projecting from Mount Ebal (S. of S. vi. 4). It was originally the seat of a Canaanite king (Josh. xii. 24). Here Zimri murdered Elah: here also he burnt his palace over his head when the city was taken by Omri (1 Kings xvi. 10, 18).

XXXVI. ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE.

In its physical characteristics Palestine is unique, combining the most opposite physical features: e.g. maritime and inland, mountain and plain, luxuriance and desert, cold and tropical, glacial and volcanic, pastoral and arable. Some species of animals, formerly abundant, have disappeared, e.g. the lion, wild bull, rhinoceros, bison; but eighty species of mammalia still exist there.

2. QUADRUPEDS MENTIONED IN THE BIBLE.

N.B. The Names in Italics (Col. 1) do not occur in the A.V., but the Animals are supposed to be denoted by the original text.

English Name.	Hebrew and Greek.	Description.
Ape (1 Kin. x. 22.)	Koph. πίθηκος.	Apes, and also peacocks and sandal-wood, were imported by Solomon from Ophir (probably Ceylon). The word used is a Hebraised form of the Sanskrit name. The baboon was known to the Egyptians. None are now found in Palestine.
Ass (domestic). (Judg. v. 10.)	Chamôr. ὄνος.	A native of Mesopotamia, of large size, the white species being most esteemed. It was the honoured animal for carrying official dignitaries—kings, prophets, judges. By the Mosaic law its firstling was to be redeemed, as was a male child. It was guarded by many legal privileges. Six thousand seven hundred and twenty returned with the captives from Babylon. The ass, as well as the camel, was a beast of burden.
Ass (wild). (Job xxxix. 5–8; Jer. ii. 24; xiv. 6.)	(1) 'Arôd. (2) Pereh. ὀναγρος.	'Arôd occurs only in Job; elsewhere pereh is used. The wild ass neighs like the horse, herds in droves, is more fleet than the horse, dwells in desolate places, and is very shy. It is the Asinus hemippus, seldom found now west of the Hauran.
Badger (Ex. xxvi. 14; Ezek. xvi. 10.)	Tachash. ὑάκινθος.	This word is used only of the skin from which the outer covering for the tabernacle, &c., was made. Badgers are plentiful in Palestine, but their skins would hardly have been suitable for this purpose; the animal is thought by some to have been the Dugong, a mammal of the whale family, caught in the Red Sea; but tachash seems a generic word for "dolphins," "seals," &c., and in Ezek. xvi. 10 appears to mean "sealskin."

English Name.	Hebrew and Greek.	Description.
Bat..... (Lev. xi. 19.)	Atalleph..... νυκτερις.	There are bats innumerable now in Palestine, notably in the vaults under the Temple and the rocky caves of Galilee. The former are the "short-tailed," the latter the African "tawny," and the English "long-eared." Near the Dead Sea are the "long-tailed" (Ichinopoma), &c. There are also the "horse-shoe," "fox-headed," "mouse-coloured," &c. They were forbidden as an article of food. See Birds, p. 70.
Bear..... (1 Sam. xvii. 34; 2 Kin. ii. 24.)	Dôb..... ἀρκτος.	The Syrian bear is a light-coloured variety of the common brown bear. It is still found in ravines of Galilee, and of Mounts Lebanon and Hermon. It is represented, as an object of chase, on Assyrian monuments.
Behemoth..... (Job xl. 15.)	Behemoth..... θηρια.	The name is of doubtful derivation. It may be the pl. of Heb. behemah "beast;" or a Hebraistic form of Egyptian p-ehe-mont, "water-ox." It is allowed to be the Hippopotamus, "river-horse." It is known to the Arabs as the "water-horse," and is still found in the Lower Nile.
Bittern..... (Is. xiv. 23; xxxiv. 11. Zeph. ii. 14.)	Kiphôd..... ἐχινος.	This animal is mentioned with the "cormorant," and therefore by some supposed to be a bird. It is evidently a token of desolation, and the context seems to demand the idea of some marsh-loving bird, fond of waste and solitary places; whence the "bittern" is thought to be the Botaurus stellaris (so called from the noise it makes, like the bellowing of a bull, when its head is immersed in the mire). Many commentators follow the LXX. and Vulgate, and translate it "hedgehog," or "porcupine;" but these do not inhabit marshy ground, or "perch on the knops of pillars." See Birds, p. 70.
Bull.....	.....	See Unicorn, Ox, and Deer.
Camel..... (Job i. 3.)	Gâmâl..... κάμηλος. Beker.	Doubtless both the Arabian one-humped and Bactrian two-humped species were known to the Hebrews, since both are found on Assyrian monuments; but the latter was rare. The camel seems to have been a sign of wealth (1 Chr. v. 21), and to have come into Palestine from Arabia. Its flesh was forbidden as food (Lev. xi. 4); but its milk was drunk, and its hair was used for weaving into cloth (Mark i. 6). Beker, bikrah (dromedary), are the male and female young camel. The dromedary, kirkarah, is a finer, swifter variety of camel.
Cat..... (Baruch vi. 22.)	αἴλουρος.....	Not mentioned in the Canonical books, though carefully kept and reverenced in Egypt, of which it was a native, and where it was dedicated to the moon, solemnly embalmed, and buried, when dead, at Bubastis.
Cattle..... (Ps. l. 10.)	Aleph..... κτηνη.	There were two kinds, long- and short-horned, the former more numerous, their horns pointed and projecting forwards. They were used for ploughing and threshing (i.e. treading out the corn), for sacrifices, and for food. See Ox.
Chamois..... (Deut. xiv. 5.)	Zemer..... καμηλοπάρδαλις.	It is impossible that the camelopard, a native of South Africa, should be allowed as food to the Hebrews. The root of the word is "spring," "jump," and so it may include all the goat and antelope species. The "chamois" is not found in Palestine, or on Assyrian or Egyptian monuments. The Zemer is therefore supposed to be the wild sheep of Arabia Petræa, dwelling on inaccessible heights, having large, strong horns, curved backwards.
Coney..... (Lev. xi. 5; Ps. civ. 18; Prov. xxx. 26.)	Shaphan..... δασύπους.	Shaphan was forbidden food to the Hebrews; it lived in rocks; it was "feeble;" it chewed the cud. Jewish tradition identifies it with the "rabbit," and says the Phœnicians gave "Spain" its name from its abundance of rabbits; but this animal was unknown in Syria, till imported in later times. The "coney" is the Hyrax Syriacus, somewhat like a rabbit in size and shape, neither rodent nor ruminant, but classed by itself.
Deer..... (Deut. xii. 15.)	(1) Tsebi..... δορκάς.	There are four Hebrew words probably denoting deer or antelopes: (1) Tsebi ("roe," or "roebuck," A.V.), doubtless the Gazella Arabica, still abundant in Syria (not the "roebuck," which is confined to Europe). It was allowed as food. Its swiftness is often mentioned (2 Sam. ii. 18), and its being chased (Is. xiii. 14). Its elegance caused its name to be used as a favourite term of endearment, and also to be given to females, e.g. Zibiah (2 Kin. xii. 1), and Tabitha (Acts ix. 36). The Arabic name is Gazâl.
(Deut. xiv. 5; Is. li. 20.)	(2) Tô, or teô ..... ἔλαφος.	(2) Tô ("wild ox," and "wild bull," A.V.), a clean animal, fit for food; "caught in a net." In older versions identified with Oryx leucoryx, an antelope still found in Palestine, and hunted and tamed by the Egyptians.

English Name.	Hebrew and Greek.	Description.
Deer (cont.). (Deut. xiv. 5.)	(3) Dishôn..... πύγαργος.	(3) Dishón (the "pygarg," A.V.) is only once named among animals for food. It is probably the spotted-nosed Addax, though not found in Palestine, but in Arabia and Egypt, answering to the meaning of the Hebrew and Greek words.
(1 Kin. iv. 23.)	(4) Yachmur..... δουβαλος.	(4) Yachmur ("fallow deer," A.V.) was allowed for food, and was one of the provisions for Solomon's table. It is identified with the Alcephalus bubalis, still called "yachmur" by Arabs; it is red or pale brown. The "fallow deer" is a native of Syria and Palestine. R.
Dog..... (1 Sam. xvii. 43; Job xxx. 1.)	Keleb..... κυων.	Many species (for chase and vigilance) were known to the Assyrians, from the large mastiff to the hound; but the general term "dog" in the Bible is never used, except as expressive of disgust. No reference is made to his tending sheep (except Job xxx. 1), or being employed in the chase: but only as guarding the house (Is. lvi. 10), warding off wild beasts, & himself a wild predatory animal, living on flesh and by rapine and even feeding on human bodies, as in the case of Jezebel. His "price" is an abomination to the Lord (Deut. xxiii. 18),—probably the fee received for omens gained from dogs, a common Babylonian practice. Three species of dogs are now found in Palestine: viz. 1. The pariah dog of towns and villages, the scavenger of the East; 2. The Syrian sheep-dog, like a Scotch colley; 3. The Persian greyhound. See Greyhound.
Dromedary..... (Jer. ii. 23.)	Beker, bikrah.....	See Camel.
Elephant..... (1 Kin. x. 22.)	ὀδόντες ἐλεφάντινοι.	No mention is made of elephants living in Palestine, but only of the importation of their teeth, i.e., ivory; but in the Books of the Maccabees we learn that they were employed in the army of Antiochus Epiphanes against the Jews. They are not part of the fauna of Syria.
Ferret..... (Lev. xi. 30.)	Anâkah..... μυγαλῆ.	An unclean "creeping thing." Its identification is conjectural: opinions are divided between "shrew," or "field mouse" (LXX.), "hedgehog," "toad," "green lizard," "water-lizard." The root of the Heb. word is doubtful,=either "to be long and narrow," or "to grow." See Lizard, p. 74.
Fox..... (Judg. xv. 4.)	Shû'al..... ἀλωπηξ.	The Heb. word universally translated "fox" generally refers to the "jackal," which is very abundant in Palestine; and the word seems a generic one, including both. Its root is either "to harrow," or "to be brown-red." It is generally used in the plural. The common English fox is abundant in the Taurus, and another kind near the Euphrates.
Goat (Is. xiv. 9) (2 Chr. xxix. 21) (Lev. ix. 3.) (Gen. xxx. 35.)	(1) Yatud (male)..... (2) Tsâpir (male). τραγος. (3) Sâir (rough). (4) Tayish (tup). τράγος.	Its flesh and milk were used as food, but its fat was prohibited (Lev. vii. 23). The he-goat, Capra ægagrus, is used as a symbol of strength and also of impurity. It was used for every kind of sacrifice, but especially for sin-offerings. The Day of Atonement (Lev. xvi. 5) supplies a notable example. Two kids of the goats were on that day presented before the Lord for a sin-offering; one was actually sacrificed, the other sent away alive into the wilderness. Goats' hair was used for weaving into cloth, and the skin for bottles and swimming bladders.
Goat (wild)..... (Deut. xiv. 5; Ps. civ. 18.)	Yâ'êl..... ὀρυξ.	This animal is the Capra ibex (the Beden or Jaala), common in Arabia Petræa and in the neighbourhood of the Dead Sea, at En-gedi ("fountain of the kid"). Its flesh is excellent venison, and was probably that brought by Esau to Isaac. H.
Greyhound.... (Prov. xxx. 31.)	Zarzir Mathnaim.... ἀλεκτωρ.	The word "greyhound" is only once used in our Bible, as an example of what "goes well, and is comely in going." The translation is very questionable. The Hebrew words for "girt loins" are also rendered "horse," "girt in the loins." Greyhounds are represented on Assyrian monuments, and some naturalists trace their origin to an Asiatic home. They were used in Assyria and Babylonia, with the hawk, for hunting the gazelle. The LXX. translates the word "cock" in the above passage, but this bird was unknown in Palestine in those times.
Hare..... (Lev. xi. 6.)	Arnebeth..... χοιρογρύλλιος.	The Heb. word is translated "hare," which is forbidden as food, though it is not ruminant, as there alleged. Turks, Armenians, and Somal Arabs now abstain from it. So also Laplanders, and the ancient Chinese. Its use was forbidden on religious grounds to the ancient Britons (Cæs. B.G. v. 12). Two kinds are found in Palestine: 1. Lepus Syriacus, in the north, resembling our own, but short-eared; also represented on Assyrian sculptures: a tract was called Aranabanu, "hare country." 2. Lepus Egyptiacus, in the south, being as small as a rabbit, with very long ears. The LXX. renders the word "hedgehog," which see.

English Name.	Hebrew and Greek.	Description.
Hart, Hind. (Deut. xii. 15, 22.)	Ayyal. ἔλαφος.	The "hart" (fem. hind) is mentioned with the "roebuck," as food allowed by Mosaic law, and as substantial daily food at Solomon's table. It is used as a symbol of the tribe of Naphtali (Gen. xlix. 21). It gives the name to the valley of Ajalon (Ayyâlon, "place of stags"); and its peculiar traits are used as similes, e.g. panting after cooling water (Ps. xlii. 1), leaping nimbly (Is. xxxv. 6); its elegant form (Cant. ii. 9), swiftness of foot (2 Sam. ii. 18), tender love (Prov. v. 19), fear of thunder (Ps. xxix. 4, 9); concealment of young (Job xxxix. 1). It is thought to have been the red deer, now extinct in Palestine.
Hedgehog. (Lev. xi. 6.)	Arnebeth. χοιρογρύλλιος.	This is the LXX. rendering in Lev. xi. 6 for arnebeth (hare). See also Bittern. Both hedgehog and porcupine are very common in Palestine,—a large species of the former in the north, a smaller in Judæa. The porcupine abounds near the Dead Sea. Both are known in Egypt and Assyria.
Horse. (Nah. iii. 2, 3; Deut. xvii. 16.)	Sûs. ἵππος.	The kings of Israel were forbidden to multiply horses, because connected with the worship of the sun. They were not beasts of burden, but only for chase and war (as cavalry, and in chariots), and formed the strength of Assyrian and Egyptian armies. The horse does not occur on Assyrian sculptures, but only the wild ass. It was a native of Armenia and Media, whence it came to Palestine. In Scripture it is spoken of as less swift than the ass (Prov. xxvi. 3).
Hyæna. (1 Sam. xiii. 18; Is. xiii. 21; Jer. xii. 9.)	Tseboim. [Ôach, pl. Ochim.]	The word does not occur in the A.V.; but the hyæna is, and always has been, common in all parts of Syria and Mesopotamia. There are passages where some suppose it is meant: e.g. Isa. xiii. 21, ochim, "doleful creatures," classed with Zîim ("wild beasts"), expresses the howl of hyænas; Jer. xii. 9, tsabûa ("speckled bird," A.V.) is rendered by many "hyæna;" the valley of Zeboim is still called by Arabs Shukh ed-Dubba, "ravine of the hyæna," the exact equivalent of the Hebrew. Hyænas are associated with "lions," as predatory carnivora, in Assyrian records.
Jackal. (Is. xiii. 22; S. of S. ii. 15; Lam. v. 18.)	(1) Shûal. (2) Îyyîm. (1) ἀλώπηξ. (2) ἐχῖνοι.	The jackal (Canis aureus) is very common in Palestine. Two words occur in the Hebrew, viz. shûal, universally rendered "fox," though often meaning "jackal;" and îyyîm (pl.), "wild beasts of the islands," which certainly seems to refer to jackals; so also tannîm (pl.), "dragons," which occurs thirteen times, is used as a synonym of îyyîm: the root of both is a word meaning "howl." Jackals "howl in the desert," herd in packs (îyyîm and tannîm are always plural), and are fond of grapes. The Arabic for shûal is shakal; and jackals still infest Syria by hundreds, being specially numerous at Baalbec, in the Jordan Valley, and around the walls of Jerusalem. See Fox.
Leopard. (Jer. v. 6; Hab. i. 8.)	Nâmer. πάρδαλις.	Many cities and localities in Palestine bear in their names (Nimrah) a token of the prevalence of leopards in their vicinity, e.g. Beth-nimrah (which see), and the Nimrim in Moab. Nâmer means "spotted." On a broken Assyrian obelisk Tiglath-Pileser I is recorded to have hunted and killed leopards in the country of the Hittites (i.e. S. of Palestine). The leopard is still common there; the cheetah also haunts Mount Tabor, the Galilæan hills, Gilead, &c. In Scripture, illustrations are drawn from its "spots," its "watching for prey," its "activity," &c.
Lion. (Num. xxiv. 9; Jer. xlix. 19.) (Amos iii. 4; Ps. xvii. 12; Job iv. 10.) (Job iv. 11.) (Deut. xxxiii. 20.) (Job iv. 10.)	(1) Ari. Aryeh. λέων. (2) Kepheer. σκύμνος δράκων. (3) Laish. μυρμηκολέων. (4) Lâbi. λέων. (5) Shâchal. λέαινα.	Five words occur in Hebrew: (1) general term; (2) "fierce;" (3) "strong;" (4) "roaring;" (5) poetical. The whole five occur in Job iv. 10, 11. The oldest name is "laish," whence comes the name of the city Laish. In no passage is any mention made of hunting it, except in Job, though Ezekiel refers to its being taken in a net or pit (Ezek. xix. 2-9); but on Assyrian monuments hunting the lion is a very favourite subject. Tiglath-Pileser slew a hundred and twenty. It is still found in India and Africa. Besides mention of its depredations, the lion was the symbol of "strength," of the "tribe of Judah," and of "Christ" (Rev. v. 5).
Mole. (Lev. xi. 30.) (Is. ii. 20.)	(1) Tinshemeth. ἀσπάλαξ. (2) Chaphar-peroth. ματαιοι.	Two words are rendered "mole" in our Bible; the former is mentioned among unclean animals, but thought by some to be a kind of lizard; the latter is from the root chaphar, to "burrow," reduplicated, and so probably is the mole-rat (Spalax typhlus). No other mention occurs of either of these animals. No mole has yet been found in Palestine; but the mole-rat is found in the débris about Jerusalem. It is silvery grey, without tail or eyes, and about ten inches long; it feeds on bulbs, and lives in companies underground.

English Name.	Hebrew and Greek.	Description.
Mouse..... (Lev. xi. 29; 1 Sam. vi. 4, 5.)	'Akhbar..... μῦς.	The 'akhbar is mentioned as an unclean animal, and its name is generic of any small rodent. The ravages of the field-mouse were part of the plagues inflicted on Philistia during the detention of the ark. In Palestine are found the rat, mouse, marmot, dormouse, and jerboa (springing like a kangaroo, and living in sandy districts). The "hamster" is an article of food in Northern Syria, and is probably the 'akhbar, an "abominable thing eaten," condemned by Isaiah.
Mule..... (2 Sam. xiii. 29.)	Pered..... ἡμίονος.	Three Hebrew words (pered, rekesh, yêmûn) are translated "mule" in our A.V., of which the first only is correct, the second ought to be "camel," and the third is doubtful. It occurs only once (Gen. xxxvi. 24), and is thought by some to indicate a discovery by a herdsman of the crossing of breeds of cattle; but the Vulgate renders his discovery "warm springs" of water. The mule was not used by the Hebrews before David's time, when with the horse it supplanted the ass as the royal beast. It is still the most valuable beast of burden, carrying heavier weights, and possessing greater powers of endurance in a mountainous country, than the horse, ass, or camel. Mules of a superior breed are found on Assyrian monuments.
Ox..... (Gen. xii. 16.) (Ps. xxii. 12.) (Deut. xxii. 10.)	(1) Bâkâr..... μόσχος. (2) Abîrîm. ταῦροι πίονες. (3) Shôr. μόσχος.	"Ox" is the generic term for the bovine race. There are many names by which it is distinguished in the Bible, marking difference of age or sex: e.g. bâkâr, collective name for "ploughing cattle;" eglath bâkâr, "heifer;" par ben bâkâr, "young bullock;" egel (m.), eglah (f.), "a calf;" abîrîm, "strong ones," i.e. "bulls;" shôr (Chald. tôr, Ezra vi. 9), "one head of cattle." They were pastured "in the open," there being no fences, hence many of the enactments; but could not have been extensively used for food, since there is little grazing land. They are now rare in central districts from Lebanon to Hebron, and nowhere pastured, except in Dothan, Shechem, and Hamath. They are small, shaggy, short-legged, both long- and short-horned. They were used for sacrifices, ploughing, treading out corn, drawing waggons (Num. vii. 3). See Unicorn, and Cattle.
Porcupine.....	.....	See Hedgehog.
Ram..... (Gen. xv. 9; Is. xiv. 9.)	Ayîl..... κριός.	This animal was the offering of Abraham instead of his son. It was the prescribed sacrifice for trespass-offering, for the new moon, and the Day of Atonement; the fat of its broad tail was part of the peace-offering to Jehovah. It was the symbol of power or might (Luke i. 69), and of leadership (Is. xiv. 9); and among the Egyptians represented the omnipotence of the Deity. Its dyed skins were highly esteemed (Exod. xxv. 5). See Sheep.
Roe, ... } Roebuck..... }	.....	See Deer.
Sheep..... (Gen. iv. 2; xlvii. 3.)	Tsôn..... πρόβατα.	Ovis laticaudatus, a variety of the broad-tailed sheep, with white body, head and neck black or dark brown, wool thick. Sheep-keeping was one of the earliest industries, particularly among the Hebrews, even when offensive to their neighbours (Gen. xlvi. 34). It is used as a symbol of God's pastoral care for man, both in the Old and New Testament. It is still one of the industries of Palestine, and the "ewe lamb" is the pet animal of the peasant of Jerusalem. See Ram.
Swine..... (Lev. xi. 7; 2 Mac. vi. 18; Matt. vii. 6.)	Chazer..... ὗς.	The Hebrews and Phœnicians abhorred swine, and the Mosaic Law classed them with unclean animals, their flesh when badly cooked being productive of parasitical disease. In Gospel times they were kept, and probably eaten, around, if not in, Palestine.
Unicorn..... (Job xxxix. 9—12.) (Num. xxiii. 22.)	Reêm, or Reîm..... μονοκέρως. ἀδροί.	The LXX. translation has passed into our A.V., but is erroneous, as the mention of two horns on one reêm (Deut. xxxiii. 17) proves. There Joseph is compared to a reêm, his two horns being Ephraim and Manasseh. It was a very strong, wild ox, untameable, having two tall horns, with which it gored: it is distinct from oxen and bulls, and is used figuratively for "prince" or "chieftain" (Is. xxxiv. 6, 7). The description of it tallies with Cæsar's account of the Hercynian Urus, which ranged from the Rhine to China, from Siberia to S. Persia. It is sculptured on Assyrian monuments, and the kings of Assyria hunted rîmu in Lebanon and Palestine, B.C. 884. The rîmu (Assyr.), or reêm (Hebr.), is the Bos primigenius, a species of wild ox, with strong, thick, long, curved horns, and a hump on its back.

English Name.	Hebrew and Greek.	Description.
Weasel..... (Lev. xi. 29.)	Choled..... γαλῆ.	This word occurs only once among "unclean creeping things." The Hebrew is allied to the Arabic khuld, "mole-rat;" and its root being chuad, "to dig," it seems to express the habits of that animal rather than those of the "weasel." In some Rabbinical writers chuldat is the "mole," in others the "polecat;" but the description of the habits of the choled in the Talmud is more applicable to the "weasel." Weasels and polecats are common in Palestine. See Mole.
Wolf..... (Gen. xlix. 27; Ezek. xxii. 27.)	Zeeb..... λυκος.	The Canis lupus of Syria is larger and of lighter colour than the European species. It still infests the hill country of Benjamin, the ravines of Galilee and Lebanon, and the hills of Bashan and Gilead. It was the symbol of Benjamin, and is used in Scripture as illustrative of ravening after its prey, stealing on it by night, &c.; so of dishonest gain, extortion, oppression, &c.

XXXVII. BIRDS FOUND IN PALESTINE,

WITH A REFERENCE TO THOSE NAMED IN SCRIPTURE.

N.B.—V.L.= Van Lennep; H.=Houghton; T.= Tristram.

English Name.	Hebrew and Greek.	Specimens found by Palestine Explorers.	Where Found.	Remarks.

Blackbird.....	.....	Merula.	.....	Found in Palestine; not migratory. V.L.
Blackcap.....	.....	Silvia atricapilla.	Jericho.
Blue Jay.....	.....	.....	.....	Still found in Palestine. V.L.
Bulbul.....	.....	Ixus xanthopygius.	Beit Atab.	Peculiar to Syria. The nightingale is so called, as also a titmouse. V.L.
Chat.....	.....	Saxicola libanotica.	Bethlehem.
"	.....	Pratincola rubicola.	"
"	.....	Dromolæa leucopygia.	Ain Feshkah.
Cock..... (Mark xiv. 30.)	ἀλέκτωρ.
Cormorant.... (Lev. xi. 17.) (Is. xxxiv. 11.)	Shâlâk..... καταράκτης. Kâath..... πελεκᾶς.	Phalacrocorax carbo.	.....	Probably kâath is the "pelican" (see marginal reading): but the common cormorant frequents the coast, comes up the Kishon, and is found on the Sea of Galilee and on the Jordan; and this is probably the shâlâk. T.
Corn-Bunting.	.....	Emberiza miliaria.	Ain Fasail.
Cretchmaker's Bunting.	.....	Emberiza cæsia.	Ain Fasail.
Crane..... (Is. xxxviii. 14.)	Agûr..... χελιδὼν.	Grus cinerea. T.	.....	Some think the "crane" should be "stork," which see. Others agree with A.V. Cranes flock to the wilderness of Beersheba in winter. T.
Crow..... (Prov. xxx. 17.)	'Oreb..... κόραξ.	Corvus umbrinus.	.....	Ordinary cinereal crows are very common scavengers, and are identified with the "ravens" that fed Elijah. V.L. But the term includes the whole tribe of crows, e.g. rooks, jackdaws, &c., all of which are very numerous. T.
Cuckoo..... (Lev. xi. 16.)	Shachaph..... λάρος.	Cuculus canorus.	Jordan Valley.	Some translate shachaph "sea-gull" (as the LXX.).
"	.....	Oxyophus glandarius	Ain Fasail.	Summer migrant to Palestine.

Dove (Is. xxxviii. 14.)	Yonah περιστερα.			See Pigeon.
Dunlin		Tringa cinclus
Ducks				Ducks, wild and domestic, are found everywhere.
Eagle (Deut. xxxii. 11.)	Nesher αετός.	Circaetus Gallicus. Gyps fulvus. T.	Yebna	Feeds on reptiles. The Arabic nissr, i.e. griffon, great vulture. Found in Palestine and Egypt.
" Gier (Lev. xi. 18.)	Racham πορφυριων.	Neophron percnopterus.		The "Egyptian vulture," or "Pharaoh's hen," common in Asia and all parts of Africa; migratory from Palestine in the winter.
Fowl, fatted (1 Kin. iv. 23.)	Barburîm Abusîm			"Fatted fowl," probably "geese," which abound all over Palestine, as likewise domestic fowls. The native country of the latter is Asia, and they were not imported into Palestine till after the Captivity. V.L.
Glede (Deut. xiv. 13.)	Raah γύψ.	Buteo ferox.		Probably the "buzzard," of which there are three kinds in Palestine, the commonest being the large red species resembling a small eagle. T.
Goldfinch		Carduelis elegans.	Bethlehem.
Grakle		Amydrus Tristrami.	Mar-Saba.	Dead Sea and Jordan Valley.
Grouse		Pterocles Senegallus.	Desert.	Also in Jordan Valley.
Harrier		Circus æruginosus.	Dead Sea.
"		C. cinereaceus.	Jericho.
Hawk (Job xxxix. 26.)	Netz ιέραξ.	Accipiter nisus.	"	Netz is generic, including the whole kestrel tribe. T.
" Night (Lev. xi. 16.)	Tachmâs γλαῦξ.	Caprimulgus (?) T.		Doubtful; perhaps "night-jar." Some say, a kind of owl.
Hen (Luke xiii. 34.)				See Fowl.
Heron (Lev. xi. 19.)	Anâphah χαραδριός.	Ardeola comata. Ardea cinerea. T.	Jordan Valley.	White, blue, and brown herons are found; also the "buffbacked" (often called the "ibis"), especially about the Waters of Merom. H.
Hoopoe (Lev. xi. 19.)	Dukipath ἔποψ.	Upupa epops.	Bludan.	Summer visitant to Palestine; very common, especially in woods and near rocky watercourses. It is a very filthy feeder, and therefore unclean. T.
Jar		Caprimulgus Europæus.	Beit Aiab.
Kestrel	Netz	Tinnunculus alaudarius.	"	Abounds in all southern Palestine. T.
"		T. Cenchris.	Ramleh.
Kingfisher		Alcedo ispida.	Jericho.
"		Ceryle rudis.	"
"		Alcyon Smyrnensis.	"	Found likewise in Asia Minor.
Kite (Lev. xi. 14.)	Ayyah ἰκτινος.	Milvus regalis.		Ayyah is a generic term for "keen-sighted" birds; regalis very common in winter.
Lark		Galerida cristata.	Jaffa.	More abundant in species and individuals than in England. T.
"		Otocoris penicillata	Anti-Libanus.	Found only on mountain tops of S. W. Asia.
Lapwing (Lev. xi. 19.)	Dukipath ἔποψ.			No doubt the hoopoe, since the Arabic term is the same; in size similar to the thrush, but crested. See Hoopoe.
Magpie				One of the most valuable scavengers of Syria, relieving cattle of flies and vermin.
Nuthatch		Sitta Syriaca.	Anti-Libanus.
Owl (Is. xxxiv. 13.)	Bath-haya-'anah στρουθος.			Many agree with the LXX. in regarding it as an ostrich.

English Name.	Hebrew and Greek.	Specimens found by Palestine Explorers.	Where Found.	Remarks.
Owl, great .... (Lev. xi. 17.) (Is. xxxiv. 15.)	Yanshooph.. ἰβεις. Kippos..... ἐχινος.	Bubo Ascalaphus	Jericho.	Kippos and lilith are both found at Jericho. The former can scarcely be the "ibis," which could not live among the ruins of Petra; but kôs is called by the Arabs "mother of ruins." Kôs (a cup) is by some translated "pelican," from its pouch. T. Some translate kippos, "arrowsnake."
" little..... (Lev. xi. 17.)	Kôs..... νυκτικόραξ.	Athene meridionalis.	Bethlehem.
" of desert.. (Ps. cii. 6.)	Kôs..... νυκτικόραξ.

Osprey..... (Lev. xi. 13.)	Asniyah..... ἀλιαίετος.	Pandion haliaëtus.	.....	Fish-eating eagle, never plentiful, on account of the scarcity of its food; but the term includes also the "short-toed" eagle, by far the most common in Palestine.
Ossifrage..... (Lev. xi. 13.)	Peres..... γύψ.	Gypaëtus barbatus.	.....	The Lämmer-geier, most magnificent of the vulture species; found sparingly in most rocky ravines. Both the Hebrew and English names mean "bone-breaker."
Ostrich..... (Lam. iv. 3.)	Ya'anah..... στρουθίον.	Struthio camelus.	.....	Still found in the wilderness of Sinai.
Partridge..... (Jer. xvii. 11.)	Korè..... πέρδιξ.	Caccabis Græcus.	Jericho.	Found everywhere in Palestine and Egypt, especially the rock partridge.
" ..... (1 Sam. xxvi. 20.)	.....	Ammoperdix heyii.	"	Peculiar to the Jordan Valley.
Peacock..... (1 Kin. x. 22.)	Tuccîyim .... (plural) ταὼς.	Pavo cristatus	.....	Not native; imported by Solomon from Malabar Coast, or Ceylon; extinct. The name is not Hebrew, but Tamil, togeī, and the peacock is still called by it in Ceylon.
Pelican..... (Ps. cii. 6.)	Kâath..... πελεκᾶς.	.....	.....	Spends the winter in Palestine; migrates in the summer to Russia.
Pigeon..... (Ps. lxviii. 13; Matt. iii. 16.)	Yonâh ..... περιστερά.	.....	.....	Called "dove" in A.V. Blue or black, with patches of white; common and migratory. There are the wood-, rock-, and wild-pigeons. V.L.
" ..... (Gen. xv. 9.)	Gozâl ..... περιστερά.
Plover.....	.....	Charadrius hiaticula.	Jaffa.
Quail..... .... (Ex. xvi. 13.)	Selav..... ὀρτυγομήτρα.	Coturnix vulgaris.	.....	Like a small partridge; migratory for breeding in spring from Africa to high plains of Asia Minor, Turkey, and S. Russia. They alight on the shores of the Red Sea for rest before passing over the mountains; and are found by the Dead Sea. Their flesh is a delicacy.
Raven..... (Prov. xxx. 17.)	'Oreb..... κόραξ.	.....	.....	See Crow.
Redstart.....	.....	Ruticilla phœnicura.	Jordan Valley.	Summer migrant to Palestine.
		" Tithys.	Bludan.	" " "
Robin.....	.....	Erythæus rubicula.	Jericho.	Winter migrant to Palestine.
		Ruticilla Suecica.	"
		Coracias garrula.	Gaza.
Sandpiper.....	.....	Tringoides hypoleucos.	Solomon's Pools.	Same as English species.
Shrike.....	.....	Lanius lathora.	Jericho.	Has very much larger toes and feet than the English species.
		" auriculatus.	Jordan Valley.
		" nubicus.
Sparrow..... (Ps. cii. 7.)	'Tizppor..... στρουθίον.	Passer salicarius.	Ain Fasail.	The word occurs forty times in the Bible; and is always, with two exceptions, translated "bird," or "fowl." Sparrows swarm in the Plain of Gennesaret, and are trapped and sold for very little; but they are very sparse and solitary in Judæa. H.
		Fringilla patronia.	Jericho.

English Name.	Hebrew and Greek.	Specimens found by Palestine Explorers.	Where Found.	Remarks.
Starling.....	.....	Sturnus vulgaris.	Jericho.
Stork..... (Jer. viii. 7.)	Khasidâh.... ἀσιδα.	Ciconia alba. T.	.....	The black stork is constantly seen, building in fir trees, and the common stork on the roofs of houses and mosques: they migrate to Egypt. Forbidden as food by the Mosaic law.
Sun-bird	.....	Cinnyris osea.	Jericho.	Peculiar to the Jordan Valley. P.E.
Swallow..... (Prov. xxvi. 2; Ps. lxxxiv. 3.)	Deror..... στρουθός.	Hirundo rustica.	Jordan Valley.	"Swallow" is thought to be a mistranslation for "crane," and sûs in the same passage is the "swift." Several species in Syria; some frequent rivers, some crags. They save the country from a plague of flies. The common swallow abounds in the Mosque of Omar. V.L.
(Is. xxxviii. 14.)	Agûr. χελιδών.
Swan..... (Lev. xi. 18.)	Tinshemeth.. κύκνος.	.....	.....	Swans, white and gray, come down to the lakes in winter.

XXXVIII. REPTILES OF THE BIBLE.

In the Bible, reptiles are a connecting link between beasts and fishes. They are divided into the "moving creatures of the sea" (Gen. i. 20), among fish; and the "creeping things" of the land (Gen. i. 25), after the Mammalia. Modern naturalists give us six orders of Reptilia, each of which is represented in Scripture; but they are not very clearly distinguished. The following Table will present a general sketch of them, arranged alphabetically for facility of reference.

N.B.—The names printed in Italics do not occur in the A.V., though the reptiles so called are now found, and are probably the same as those indicated by the Hebrew writers.

H.=Rev. W. Houghton; T.=Canon Tristram; R.=Prof. Rolleston.

English Name.	Hebrew and Greek.	Zoological Species.	Remarks.
Adder..... (Ps. lviii. 4.)	(1) Pethen..... ἀσπίς.	Cobra	"Adder" is the translation in the A.V. of four Hebrew words, viz. pethen, shephiphon (once), 'achsub (once), and tziph'oni (once). Of these the first is generic, and the remaining three all denote a venomous serpent. The second (horned snake) is well known in the sandy deserts of Arabia, Egypt, Sahara, &c.; it is about a foot long, pale brown, with black irregular spots, and two horns above its eyes. It lies in ambush, occasionally biting the heels of horses, and is often found in the wilderness of Judæa. It is thought to have been the instrument of Cleopatra's death. Mentioned five times in the Bible. Poisonous; dwelling in holes: distends its neck, and stands erect: some are proof against snake-charmers. It is the sacred and royal emblem on Egyptian monuments; the symbol of the protecting divinity.
(Gen. xlix. 17.)	(2) Shephiphon.. ὄφις.	Cerastes Hasselquistii.
(Ps. cxl. 3.)	(3) 'Achsub..... βασιλίσκος.	Vipera Euphratica.
(Prov. xxiii. 32; Job xx. 14–16.)	(4) Tziph'oni.... ἀσπίς.	Daboia xanthina.

English Name.	Hebrew and Greek.	Zoological Species.	Remarks.
Asp..... (Is. xi. 8.)	Pethen..... ἀσπίς.	Egyptian cobra (Naja naje).
Caterpillar...	.....	.....	See Locust, Gazam, p. 87. It is doubtful whether the Jews knew that butterflies came from caterpillars. R.
Chameleon ..... (Lev. xi. 30.)	(1) Coäch..... χαμαιλέων.	Psammosaurus scincus. T. Hydrosaurus Nilioticus. T.	The coäch, rendered "chameleon," is thought to be the monitor lizard, which is highly prized as a destroyer of crocodiles' eggs. Of the two kinds, the former is common in Egypt, the Sinaitic peninsula, and Judæa, and is about five feet long; the latter, resembling it, is common in Egypt, where it was reverenced, and is figured on Egyptian sculptures. T.
"	(2) Tinshemeth . ἀσπάλαξ.	Chameleo vulgaris. T.	Tinshemeth, translated "mole," is, from its derivation, supposed to be the chameleon, a kind of lizard, living in trees and feeding on insects; very common in Palestine and Egypt. T.
Cockatrice .... (Is. lix. 5.)	Tzeph'a..... Tziph'oni. ἀσπίς.	Daboia xanthina.	See Serpent, No. 7. It is mentioned five times (once translated "adder," Prov. xxiii. 32); but, from Is. lix. 5, would seem to be more deadly than the pethen.
Crocodile ..... (Lev. xi. 29.)	κροκόδειλος	.....	The word translated "tortoise" (which see), is rendered in the LXX. "land crocodile." See Dabba. The crocodile is probably the animal called Leviathan, which see.
Dabba..... (Lev. xi. 29.)	Tzâb..... κροκόδειλος χερσαίος.	Uromastis spinispes.	The Arabic dhab, thought by some to be the tzâb (tortoise of A.V.), a large species of lizard, common in the sands of Arabia, well known in Judæa; burrowing in sand, and living in holes of rocks; feeding on beetles. T.
Dragon..... (Is. xxxiv. 13; Ezek. xxix. 3.)	Tan..... Tannîn.	....	In the passages where "dragon" is used as the symbol of Egypt, the "crocodile" is meant. Tan (always pl.) is classed with wild beasts and fowls, and inhabits "desert places;" it "wails," "cries," and "snuffs up the wind;" hence thought to be the Jackal, which see, p. 76. Tannîn is a water-monster, with feet, or a huge land reptile, as that "serpent" into which Moses' rod was changed. In the former sense it is synonymous with "leviathan."
Frog..... (Ex. viii. 2; Rev. xvi. 13.)	Tzepharde'a..... βάτραχος.	Rana esculenta. Hyla arborea.	The Hebrew word is of Arabic extraction, and only occurs in the Old Testament in connexion with the Egyptian plague. The frog was adored as a female deity in Egypt, and was the symbol of regeneration. In the Book of Revelation frogs represent "uncleanness." The Esculenta, a water-frog, is common in Egypt, and the Hyla, or tree-frog, in Palestine.
Gecko..... (Lev. xi. 30.)	Anâkah..... μυγάλη.	Ptyodactylus gecko.	Anâkah ("ferret" in A.V.), from its classification among "creeping things," is more probably the "gecko," a lizard uttering a mournful noise (the meaning of anâkah). It is found in all parts of Palestine and Egypt, frequenting rocks, ruins, and houses. Its appearance is repulsive, and it is regarded with disgust. T.
Horseleech.... (Prov. xxx. 15.)	'Alukah..... LXX. (?)	Hæmopis sanguisuga. H. Hirudo medicinalis. T.	The 'alukah is only once mentioned, and by some thought to be the vampire-bat, its root meaning "to suck;" but the Arabs call a leech 'alak, and so the LXX. and Vulgate translate it. The horseleech is found in Palestine, but the medicinal leech is much more abundant.
Leviathan..... (Ps. lxxiv. 14; Job xli. 1.)	Livyathan..... δράκων.	Crocodilus vulgaris.	The word occurs five times, and in every case but one (Ps. civ. 26) denotes the "crocodile;" though some think that, in Is. xxvii. 1, it refers to the great python, often seen on Egyptian monuments. T. There is a full description of it in Job. It is not now found in Palestine, but has been captured within the last century in the river Zurka, which flows through the plain of Sharon.
Lizard..... (Lev. xi. 30.)	Letâah..... χαλαβώτης.	Generic (?).....	The word only occurs once, but there is no question as to its meaning. Lizards abound everywhere, and the species are very numerous. There are those of the land, the water, and sandy desert. Every district has its kinds; but they swarm in the desert places, while some frequent cultivated plains, and others the forests of Tabor and Gilead. Perhaps letâah is the generic term of the whole lizard tribe. T.

Mole.....	Tinshemeth..... ἀσπάλαξ.	.....	See Chameleon.
Scorpion..... (Deut. viii. 15; Luke x. 19.)	Akrabîm..... σκορπιος.	Numerous.....	Scorpions are named as part of the terrors of the wilderness of Sinai (where they are still abundant, and the species numerous); also as symbols of desolation, and as Divine scourges. More than ten distinct species have been found in Palestine. They swarm in many parts, and their sting is painful and dangerous. T.
Serpent..... (Ps. lviii. 4; Prov. xxx. 19.) (Ex. vii. 9, 10.)	(1) Nâchâsh..... ὄφις.	Generic term....	Seven Hebrew words are used for various kinds of serpents, translated somewhat indiscriminately:—(1) Generic term, denoting no particular species. (2) Generally rendered "dragon," sometimes "serpent," sometimes "whale" (Job vii. 12, &c.), seems to denote any sea or land monster, therefore not to be limited to any species. (3) Deaf Adder, or poisonous Asp, which see. (4) Poisonous adder of sandy deserts. (5) Thrice mentioned (see Viper). (6) Found only in one passage, "adders' poison." (7) Five times mentioned; translated in A.V. by "adder" and "cockatrice," the latter fabulous, supposed to be hatched by a cock from serpents' eggs, and so represented as a dragon with a cock's head; called also "basilisk," or crested serpent. It may be the large yellow-streaked serpent, not uncommon in Palestine; dangerous from its size and nightly prowlings. T.
	(2) Tannîn. δράκων.
(Ps. lviii. 4.)	(3) Pethen..... ἀσπίς.	Cobra Ægyptiaca.
(Gen. xlix. 17.)	(4) Shephîphon.. ὄφις.	Cerastes Hasselquistii.
(Job xx. 16.)	(5) Epheh..... ἀσπίς.	Echidna Mauritanica.
(Ps. cxl. 3.)	(6) Achshûb..... βασιλίσκος.	Vipera Euphratica, or Vipera ammodytes.	Serpents were generally regarded by the ancients as symbols of the spirit of evil. More than twenty species have been lately found in Palestine; but only nine are poisonous, viz. the cobra, six species of vipers, Daboia xanthina, and Echis arenicola.
(Prov. xxiii. 32; Is. xi. 8.)	(7) Tsepha..... ἀσπίς.	Daboia xanthina (?). T.
" fiery..... (Num. xxi. 6-8.)	Sârâph..... ὄφις θανατων.	"	"Fiery" or "deadly" serpents were probably so called from the burning fever caused by their bites. The "fiery flying serpent" is distinct from this; but "flying" is poetic imagery, not in accordance with natural phenomena.
" fiery flying.. (Is. xiv. 29.)	ἀσπὶς, ὄφις πετάμενος.	"	For the habits and peculiarities of serpents noted in Scripture, see Tristram's "Natural History of the Bible."
Snail..... (Lev. xi. 30.)	(1) Chomet..... σαυρα.	Generic.....	Two Hebrew words are translated "snail" in the A.V. Each occurs only once. (1) Chomet, among unclean creeping things, is translated in ancient versions by some kind of lizard, probably a sand-lizard, of which there are many species in the Sinaitic peninsula and Judæan wilderness, many of which have no visible feet, and so were distinguished by Moses from the other lizards. T.
(Ps. lviii. 8.)	(2) Shablul..... κηρός.	"	(2) Shablul is evidently a snail that wastes away; the allusion being to the popular error that the slime emitted in its track gradually consumed it, or to the fact of its melting under the influence of salt, which makes it a fit illustration of the wicked blighted by God's curse. More than 140 species of land and fresh-water molluscs have been found in Palestine, many being peculiar to it. (See Tristram's "Natural History of the Bible.")
Snake.....	.....	.....	See Serpent.
Toad.....	.....	Bufo Pantherinus.	Very common in all parts of Palestine. T.
Tortoise..... (Lev. xi. 29.)	Tzab..... κροκόδειλος χερσαῖος.	(1) Testudo Græca.	(1) The land tortoise is found everywhere, creeping over hills and plains in summer, burrowing under leaves at the foot of trees, or in rocky holes, in winter. It is the food of several birds of prey, and is eaten by the natives. (2) A larger kind are found on Mount Carmel. (3) Water species are very numerous in all streams and marshes, especially about the Waters of Merom. It feeds on fish, frogs, young birds, &c., and has a very offensive odour. T. See Dabba.
		(2) Testudo marginata.
		(3) Emys Caspica
Viper..... (Job xx. 16; Is. xxx. 6; lix. 5.)	Epheh..... ἐχιδνα.	Echis arenicola. T. (Sand-Viper.)	A poisonous serpent, of small species, about one foot long; found in sandy districts and under stones by the Dead Sea; quick in movement. The viper which fastened on Paul's hand (Acts xxviii. 3) was the Vipera aspis, common in the Mediterranean Isles. T.

Worm..... (Is. li. 8.)	(1) Sâs..... σής.	.....	Three words are translated (A.V.) by "worm:" (1) occurs only once, in connexion with the "moth," of which it is evidently the grub. See Moth, p. .
(Ex. xvi. 20; Job xxv. 6; Is. xiv. 11.)	(2) Rimmah..... σαπρία. σῆψις.	.....	(2) and (3) are used many times, and are apparently synonymous; generally of the maggots or grubs of insects, rather than the earthworm. Rimmah seems to mean the larvæ of insects, especially such as feed on putrid matter, e.g. dead or diseased bodies, &c. Tole'ah rather denotes the caterpillar or centipede, eating the vines and destroying the gourd (Jonah iv. 7); but it is also used of the larvæ of the meat-fly, feeding on dead bodies of the slain (Is. lxvi. 24), where it is the symbol of eternal punishment. It is doubtful what worm is meant by σκώληξ (Acts xii. 23), the special scourge of Herod Agrippa, as also of Herod the Great and Antiochus Epiphanes. Probably "serpents" are meant in Mic. vii. 17.
(Job xxv. 6; Is. xiv. 11.)	(3) Tole'ah..... σκώληξ.	Tortrix vitisana (?). H.
" earth.....	.....	Lumbricus. T....	Several species of earth-worms, and of centipedes or millipedes, abound in Palestine, furnishing food for birds. T.
" canker.....	.....	Myriapoda. T.	See Locust, Yelek, p. 87.
" palmer.....	.....	.....	" " Gazam, p. 87.
" crimson.....	.....	.....	See Cochineal, p. 86.

XXXIX. AQUATIC ANIMALS OF THE BIBLE.

"The Holy Land" is strictly an inland tract of mountains, for the Israelites had no possessions (with the exception of Joppa) on the coast, the one part of which belonged to the Phœnicians, the other to the Philistines, whose chief god was Dagon, having the face and hands of a man, the body of a fish (1 Sam. v. 4).

Its one river is the Jordan, too rapid, too muddy, too deep in its hot rocky bed for angling to be either pleasurable or profitable. The smaller streams (Kishon and Jabbok) were on the confines, and were, alternately, dry and rushing torrents. Of its three lakes, the largest (the Dead Sea) was almost entirely destitute of all life, animal and vegetable (with the exception, it is said, of some molluscs,—the Surgus salvianus and Melanopsis); so that the only fishing preserves were the Lake of Gennesaret and the pools of Heshbon (Cant. vii. 4). The drag-net and the hook as implements for capturing fish are mentioned by Isaiah (xix. 8), but in connexion with Egypt and the Egyptians.

Beyond mention of the fact of the creation of fish generally, the Mosaic division of their species into the clean and unclean, their incidental mention in our Lord's history as an article of food, and of the occupation of fishing as a parabolic illustration, fish enter but little into the phraseology of the Bible; and not a single species is named, if we except the whale. Josephus notices that the species found in the Jordan and Lake of Gennesaret are identical with those in the Nile. Recent explorers have confirmed that opinion, and found some that belong only to the African families. They are chiefly of the bream, carp, and perch tribes, the shoals of which, coming up at night to the mouths of the warm springs of the two Bethsaidas, are most extraordinary, often thickly covering an acre of water. The Siluroids were held by Egyptians, as well as Hebrews, to be unfit for food, on sanitary grounds. The Table given below will show the extent of the Palestine fisheries, and the species recently found.

N.B.—T.=Tristram; R.=Rolleston.

English Translation.	Hebrew and Greek.	Animal supposed.	Remarks.
Jonah's Fish... (Jonah i. 17.)	Dâg gadöl. κῆτος.	Shark (?)..	The Hebrew only speaks of "a great fish," without particular specification; in Matt. xii. 40 that fish is translated "whale" (κῆτος); but the Greek, like the Hebrew, is general, and strictly means only a "sea-monster." A whale has too contracted a throat to swallow a man; but sharks capable of doing so are not uncommon in the Mediterranean.
Tobit's Fish...	ἰχθύς . . .	Sheat-fish (?). Siluridæ.	As Tobit's fish leaped out of the Tigris to attack a man (contrary to the habits of any known fish), it may have been a crocodile, or one of the Siluridæ. Bochart says that Galen and Dioscorides prescribed the gall of the sheat-fish as an eye-salve. T.
Onycha..... (Ex. xxx. 34; Ecclus. xxiv 15.)	Schecheleth. ὄνυξ.	Wing-shell Strombus.	Twice referred to: once as an ingredient of the holy perfume of the tabernacle; once, in the Apocrypha, as emitting a delicious odour. The name "onyx" means a "claw" or "nail;" and so the small shell on the foot of many molluscs, with which the larger shell is closed, gets its name. From this smaller shell, or valve, part of the ingredients of the compound "frankincense" were obtained. Many species of it are found in the Red Sea, and shells of the largest kind are familiar to us as old-fashioned chimney ornaments. R.

Pearls ..... (Job xxviii. 18.)	Gabish. .. μαργαρίται.	Pearl oyster... Aricula Margaritifera.	Only once named in the Old Testament, often in the New; always as a jewel. The pearl oyster is abundant in the Persian Gulf and Red Sea. Its shell ("mother of pearl") is still a commodity of general traffic in Palestine, being carved by the peasants into religious ornaments.
Purple (fish)..	Argaman.	Purple fish Murex brandaris. M. trunculus.	A valuable dye (which Lydia sold), traditionally said to come from a small vessel in the throat of a shell-fish. Tyrian purple (or fiery red) was of two kinds, one light (i.e. scarlet), the other dark (i.e. crimson); and probably, by admixture with other colours, various shades of purple, and even blue, may have been subsequently produced. The art of extracting it, known to the Phœnicians, has been lost. It was of such a costly nature as to be one of the peculiar insignia of royalty or official distinction.
Whale. ..... (Ex. vii. 9; x. 12; Deut. xxxii. 33; Ps. xci. 13; Jer. li. 34.)	Tannin.. κῆτος.	Some land-monster. Dragon, or Serpent (?).	The Hebrew word means a "monster" in animal life. In Gen. i. 21, "great whale" is generic of all monsters moving in the waters; but in Lam. iv. 3 the "whale" is specifically mentioned by one who knew its habits and its classification among mammalia. Two species of the dolphin have been found in the Mediterranean, and another in the Red Sea; but true whales are also occasionally to be found in the former. R.

Kishon, R.	Blenny.....	Blennius lupulus.	Fewer fish in the streams flowing westward than in those flowing eastward.

XL. INSECTS OF THE BIBLE.

Under this head are classed all those smaller creatures not included in the preceding Tables. They are arranged rather for facility of reference than scientifically, and being in alphabetical order, any one of them can be found by the reader at a glance.

N.B.—The names of insects given in Italics are not used in A.V. H.=Houghton; T.=Tristram; W.=Westwood.

English Name.	Hebrew and Greek.	Zoological Species Found.	Remarks.
Ant..... (Prov. vi. 6—8; xxx. 25.)	Nemalah..... μύρμηξ.	Formica, or Myrmica.	Ants are abundant in Palestine; and though they feed on flesh, insects, and saccharine matter from trees, they store up corn, chaff, seeds, &c., to protect their nests from damp. They surpass most insects in instinct and industry. T.

English Name.	Hebrew and Greek.	Zoological Species Found.	Remarks.
Bee ..... (Ps. cxviii. 12; 1 Sam. xiv. 25.)	Debôrah. ... ... μέλισσα.	Apis mellifica. " Ligustica.	There are in abundance the hive bees of England, and yet more those of S. Europe, and the wild bees; the allusions in Scripture are mainly to the last, which attack plunderers with great fury (Deut. i. 44). Their abundance is certified by the term descriptive of Palestine, "flowing with milk and honey," for which its climate and aromatic flora are peculiarly adapted. They are most numerous in the wilderness of Judæa (Matt. iii. 4). Honey was one of the delicacies sent by Jacob to Egypt, and a commodity supplied by Judah to the market at Tyre. T. They are also found in Assyria (Is. vii. 18). Various species of humble bees and mason bees are very numerous.
Beetle ..... (Lev. xi. 21, 22.)	Chargol ..... ὀφιομάχη.	Buprestis (?)	Only once found in the Old Testament, among winged reptiles allowed for food. It is evidently, from the connexion, some kind of "locust," and not a "beetle," since the latter has not "legs above its feet to leap withal." More than 400 species of beetles have been found in Palestine, the climate being peculiarly suited to them. T.
(Hab. ii. 11.)	Chaphis..... κάνθαρος.	.....	In Hab. ii. 11, Bochart renders Chaphis by "the scarabæus," or sacred beetle of Egypt, with which the Jews were familiar; it was an emblem of eternity and resurrection. (See Hope, in Trans. Entomol. Soc., ii. 173.) Though the LXX. and Vulgate favour this interpretation, Gesenius and others agree with the A.V., and translate it "beam."
Cochineal..... (Is. i. 18.)	Tola'ath ..... κόκκινος.	Coccus iliois	Tola'ath is always translated (A.V.) by "crimson" or "scarlet." It is literally the "crimson worm" (Arab. Kermes), but the latter word is omitted, because in the texts the colour, not the insect, is denoted. It is a cochineal, attaching itself to the Syrian holm-oak. The male is winged, the female wingless; and it is from the latter alone that the dye is gained. It is dark red, of the size of the kernel of a cherry, but when dry smaller than a wheat grain. It is very abundant in Palestine, though supplanted as a dye by the imported Mexican species, which feeds on the prickly pear. T.
Flea..... (1 Sam. xxiv. 14; xxvi. 20.)	Par'osh..... ψύλλος.	Pulex irritans ...	Only twice mentioned, as an illustration of the most insignificant of creatures. Fleas swarm in the very sand of Egypt, and in the dust of all parts of Palestine,—the greatest pests of man and beast.
Fly..... (Ex. viii. 21; Ps. lxxviii. 45.)	(1) Arôb, or Oreb. κυνόμυια.	Musca, or Culex.	(1) Arôb only occurs of the plague of flies in Egypt. It is disputed whether the common house-fly or mosquito is meant; both are great pests in Egypt now, as also are the gad-fly and horse-fly. The common fly carries the poison of ophthalmia from man to man, and spreads its infection. It is probably here generic, including in the "plague of swarms," flies, sand-flies, gnats, mosquitos, &c. H. By some authors, Kirby (Bridgewater Treatise, ii. 357), Michælis, Rosenmüller, Geddes, &c., the Oreb has been supposed to be a cockroach, Blatta sp. (See Hope, op. cit., ii. 180.) W.
(Eccles. x. 1.)	(2) Zebub..... μυῖα.	Scarabæus coprophagus. H.	(2) Zebub, only twice mentioned, once as frequenting the rivers of Egypt; again, as corrupting the apothecary's ointment;—the former a gad-fly tormenting horses on the banks of the Nile and Jordan, so pestiferous as to be deprecated by appeals to a special god, Baalzebub (of Ekron), whom the Jews derisively called "lord of the dunghill" (Baal-zebel). Probably the poisonous Tsetse, described by Livingstone, is meant. W. The other would be the common fly, whose swarms would corrupt any unguent or savoury compote in a few minutes.
(Is. vii. 18.)	....	Hippobosca, or Œstrus. H.
Gadfly.....	....	....	Probably the Zebub of Eccles. x. 1. See Fly.
Gnat ..... (Mat. xxiii. 24.)	κώνωψ.	Culex.....	The word is only found in the New Testament, where the proper rendering is "strain out a gnat," a metaphor from the custom of straining wine before drinking, to avoid breach of ceremonial law. in Lev. xi. 20, 23, 41, 42. Gnats and mosquitos are among the most prevalent pests of Egypt and Palestine, frequenting all marshy ground. H.

Grasshopper... (Judg. vi. 5; Lev. xi. 22.)	Arbeh..... Chagab. ἀκρὶς.	.....	A creeping thing, with "legs above its feet to leap withal," but used as an illustration of diminutive size; therefore probably the smallest of the locust tribe. It is translated "locust" in 2 Chron. vii. 13. (See Locust.) There are many brilliantly-coloured species of this small insect. T.
Hornet..... (Ex. xxiii. 28.)	Tzir'ah..... σφηκια.	Vespa Crabro....	Hornets were abundant in Palestine, as is indicated by the name of the valley of Zoreah (Josh. xv. 33), = "the place of hornets." The Bible phraseology betokens the dread with which they were regarded; but it is conjectured that God's promise to drive out the Canaanites before Israel was metaphorical of a panic, or of preceding plagues generally, since no mention occurs in the Pentateuch of any such visitation of hornets. Four species (resembling ours, but larger) have been found there. H.
Lice..... (Ex. viii. 16.)	Kinnim..... σκνιφες.	....	Lice are only mentioned in the record of the Egyptian plague, and the Hebrew name is thought to be of Egyptian origin. Some contend that "gnats" or "mosquitos" are meant; but the latter spring from water, not from dust. Parasitic insects abound in the East, and through the summer the Mohammedan men keep their heads shorn to avoid them.
Locust..... (Ex. x. 4–6; Lev. xi. 22.)	(1) Arbeh..... βρουχος.	Œdipoda migratoria. T. Locusta peregrina.	The "locust" includes the insects called in our version by the different names Beetle, Canker-worm, Caterfillar, Grasshopper, Locust, Bald-locust, Palmer-worm (which see). The Rabbis say there were 800 species; but only about forty have yet been identified in Palestine. Its name, habits, ravages, appearance, &c. are constantly mentioned in Scripture. The locusts swarm, and their ravages are great; but in all stages of growth they are largely eaten by natives, and are a palatable food. Nine Hebrew words are used to express the locust species:—(1) General word ("multiplier"), used of the Egyptian plague, of the edible insect, and as the food of the Baptist. In four passages it is rendered "grasshopper;" but it always seems to be migratory (1 Kin. viii. 37, &c.).
" (bald)..... (Lev. xi. 22.)	(2) Sal'am..... ἀττακης.	Truxalis. T.	(2) Only mentioned once (probably Chaldee word, "devourer"); having a smooth head, and frequenting rocks. It answers to Truxalis, which is common in Palestine. T.
"	(3) Chargol .... ὀφιομαχη.	.....	(3) Only occurs once as an edible, clean animal. Rendered "beetle" (A.V.), which see. This may possibly be identical with the Cossus of the Romans. W.
"	(4) Chagob. ... ἀκρις.	....	(4) Generally translated "grasshopper" (which see), but once "locust." From a comparison of texts we gather that it was the smallest of destructive leaping locusts, doubtless a grasshopper. H.
(Joel i. 4.)	(5) Gazam..... καμπη.	Larva of Arctia caja. H. Œdipoda migratoria. H.	(5) The "palmer-worm" of A.V., consuming what the locusts left, especially the fig-trees, vines, and olive-trees. The LXX. and other old versions translate it "caterpillar" generally, which modern naturalists confirm, including the larvæ of locusts before developing wings, the woolly-bear, &c. H. Or, a worm or grub destroying buds of plants. W.
(Joel i. 4; Nah. iii. 15; Ps. cv. 34; Jer. li. 14, 27.)	(6) Yelek..... βρουχος.	.....	(6) The "canker-worm" of A. V., in five passages; but rendered "caterpillar" in three. The name means "the licker" of the grass; hence it seems to denote the larva of the locust, which is most destructive of all, only appearing after the winged locust has left, consuming all that remains, then assuming wings and flying away (Nah. iii. 15).

English Name.	Hebrew and Greek.	Zoological Species Found.	Remarks.
Locust (cont.)... (Deut. xxviii. 42.)	(7) Tzelatzal.... ἐρυσιβη.	....	(7) Occurs only once; means the "tinkler" (see Cymbals, p. 109), applied to the locust from the noise of its wings; probably only a synonym. T. Evidently, from the name, identical with the Tsaltsalya, or Zimb, of Bruce. W
(Is. xxxiii. 4; Amos vii. 1.)	(8) Gob..... ἀκρις.	....	(8) Once translated "locust," and twice "grasshoppers" (margin, "green worms"); but no indication is given of any particular species, or whether the larva or full-grown insect is meant, though "green worm" would suggest the former. T.
(Ps. lxxviii. 46.)	(9) Chasil ..... ἐρυσιβη.	....	(9) Translated "caterpillar" in all passages, and always included with the locust, in Solomon's dedication prayer and elsewhere, as a Divine plague. The Hebrew means "consumer," and is probably the locust in the larva state, and not a distinct species.
Manna.....	....	Coccus manniparus. Ehrenb.	A species of Coccus, closely allied to the cochineal insect, is found on Mount Sinai, upon the Tamarix mannifera, which it punctures with its proboscis, causing it to discharge a gummy saccharine secretion, which quickly hardens and drops from the trees, when it is collected by the natives, who superstitiously regard it as the real manna of the Israelites. W. See Manna (Section XLI), p. 97.
Mosquito.....	....	....	See Gnat, and Lice.
Moth ..... (Is. l. 9; Job xiii. 28; xxvii. 18.)	Ash..... σής.	Tinea.....	The references to it in Scripture allude to the destruction of clothes by its larvæ, and it is cited as a mark of the perishable nature of temporal things, and the folly of the prevalent Eastern custom of hoarding costly raiment. In Job xxvii. 18, "buildeth his house as a moth," reference is made to some leaf-rolling larvæ. The moth is the only one of the genus Lepidoptera mentioned in Scripture; but 280 species of this genus have been found, though the climate and the absence of wood are unfavorable to butterflies, moths, &c. T.
Spider ..... (Is. lix. 5.)	(1) Accabish... ἀράχνη.	Epeira.....	Two Heb. words are translated "spider" (A.V.): (1) In reference to its web, as a metaphor of what is fragile, flimsy, and temporary, as a warning to the wicked of the weakness of their contrivances. (2) Occurs only once of the "spider" (A. V.) taking hold with her hands; but by some it is thought the Gecko is meant (which see, p. 82). The action is applicable to both T. More than 700 species of spiders are found in Great Britain, and quite as many in Palestine. T.
(Prov. xxx. 28.)	(2) Semamith.

XLI. TREES, PLANTS, FLOWERS, &c., OF THE BIBLE.

N.B.—B. = Birdwood; C. = Carruthers; T. = Tristram.

English Translation.	Hebrew and Greek.	Botanical Name.	Remarks.
Almond..... (Jer. i. 11, 12.)	Shâked..... καρυΐνη [βακτηρια]; ἀμύγδαλον.	Amygdalus communis.	The almond blossoms before the leaves come out, hence its Hebrew name shâked, "hasten." (See the play on the word, Jer. i. 11, 12, "a rod of shâked tree...for I will hasten (shâked).") It is one of the native fruits of Palestine, and therefore often mentioned in Scripture. Aaron's rod was of this tree; and Jews now carry branches of it to the synagogue on great festivals. It was the model of the ornaments of the candlestick in the tabernacle. There is both a wild and a cultivated species.
Almug..... (1 Kin. x. 11, 12.) Algum..... (2 Chron. ii. 8.)	Almug ..... ξύλα πελεκητά.	Pterocarpus santalinus. T.	Not indigenous, but imported in the form of timber by Solomon from Ophir, with gold and precious stones; evidently itself precious; used for making musical instruments. Probably red sandal wood, still highly prized in the East for lyres, &c.

Aloes, ... or Lign-Aloes. (Ps. xlv. 8; Num. xxiv. 6.)	Ahâlim..... (1) στακτή. (2) σκηναί.	Aquilaria agallocha. T.	Occurs in two different contexts: (1) as a perfume in connexion with "myrrh, cassia, and cinnamon," or as a spice for embalming the dead (John xix. 39), where it is the gum of the eagle-tree, growing in Cochin China and N. India to a height of 120 feet; (2) Lign-aloes, used by Balaam, with the cedars, as an illustration of the noble position of Israel, planted in a choice land. As the Aquilaria does not grow in Syria or Palestine, some other species must be meant. T. It has no connexion with our "bitter aloes."
Anise..... (Mat. xxiii.23.)	ἄνηθον.....	Anethum graveolens.	Occurs in the New Testament once only. See Dill.
Apple..... (S. of S. ii. 3; Joel i. 12.)	Tappûach..... μῆλον.	.....	"Apple tree" occurs four times in the Song of Solomon; also in Joel, the fruit being used for purposes of illustration in the Proverbs. The tree meant afforded a grateful shade; its fruit was enticing to the sight, sweet to the taste, imparting fragrance, and of golden colour amid silvery leaves. None exactly answer these conditions: quince, citron, and apple are the contesting candidates, the last being the least probable, since the climate is unfavourable. But the apricot is very probably the fruit intended, since it approaches the details of the description most nearly, and is very abundant in Palestine.
Ash..... (Is. xliv. 14.)	Oren..... πίτυς.	Pinus Halepensis.	Only once mentioned, as a tree from which idols were made. Our ash is not indigenous there; but the LXX. translates it "the pine," which flourishes on the coast, and is planted elsewhere. This may be the tree meant, or the Aran (Arabic) of Arabia Petræa, resembling our mountain ash. T.
Balm, ... or Balsam. (Jer. viii. 22.)	(1) Tzorî..... ῥητίνη.	(a) Pistacia lentiscus. (b) Balanites Ægyptiaca. (c) Balsamodendron Gileadense.	Three trees are supposed to be the source of the gum, viz. (a) Mastick (which see); (b) modern Balm of Gilead, a small shrub, which grows near the Dead Sea and on the Plains of Moab only; (c) true Balm of Gilead, a native of the E. coast of Africa, growing about Mecca. From a root given by the Queen of Sheba, Solomon carefully cultivated it in the tropical plain of Jericho; it was of great value, and was one of the trophies carried to Rome by Titus. It is now quite lost. T.
"	(2) Bosem.
Barley..... (Ruth i. 22; Judg. vii. 13.)	Seôrah..... κριθαί.	Hordeum disticum.	The most universal cereal in the world, and the common food in Palestine of men, horses, asses, and draught oxen, oats being unknown. It is used in Scripture as a mark of poverty and of worthlessness (Hos. iii. 2). Barley harvest is in March or April, according to the locality.
Bay Tree..... (Ps. xxxvii. 35.)	Ezrach..... κέδρος τοῦ Λιβάνου.	Laurus nobilis.	Ezrach is once rendered "bay tree;" elsewhere it is used of a "native," as opposed to a "stranger." If it be any particular "native" plant, it must be a green shrub growing by the water-side, such as the sweet bay, which is not very common; but of all, the most glorious representative of luxuriant growth and pomp is the oleander, which decks so profusely the lakes and water-courses.
Bdellium..... (Gen. ii. 12.)	Bdolach..... ἄνθραξ.	Borassus flabelliformis.	Some suppose it to be the gum of a tree growing in Arabia Felix; others a precious stone. T.
Bean..... (2 Sam. xvii. 28; Ezek. iv. 9.)	Pol..... κύαμος.	Vicia faba.	Beans, peas, and various kinds of leguminous plants are grown in Palestine, and used for food, both as vegetables and in flour. They are gathered with the wheat harvest. T.

English Translation.	Hebrew and Greek.	Botanical Name.	Remarks.
Box..... (Is. xli. 19; lx. 13.)	Teasshur..... πυξος.	(1) Buxus longifolia. (2) Juniperus phœnicea.	Box is twice mentioned as a forest tree, with the pine and fir. It is also the foundation of rowing benches, in which ivory is inlaid (Ezek. xxvii. 6). The species found resembles ours, but is larger (20 feet high), and grows on Mount Lebanon and the Galilæan hills. Combs, spoons, &c., are made of it. Some think it to be a juniper, growing with the cedar. T.
Bramble..... (Judg. ix. 14.)	(1) Atâd..... ῥάμνος.	Lycium Europæum.	From eighteen to twenty-two Hebrew words are used in the Bible to express prickly shrubs or weeds, which are indifferently translated in A.V. by "bramble," "brier," "thorn," "thistle," and we have little to guide us in distinguishing or identifying them. The following are some:—(1) Translated "bramble," and "thorn," is the "box-thorn." It extends from Lebanon to the Dead Sea, and is often used for hedges.
(Is. xxxiv. 13; Job xxxi. 40.)	(2) Choach. ..... κνίδη.	Notobasis Syriaca. Scolymus maculatus. Carthamus oxyacanthus.	(2) Translated "bramble," "thistle," "thickets;" growing in Lebanon, and in corn-fields, Probably the thistle, of which there are many species, especially in the plains.
(Gen. iii. 18; Matt. vii. 16.)	(3) Dardar..... τρίβολος.	Centaurea calcitropa.	(3) Generally translated "thistle," but also "brier." Supposed to be a species of knapweed (star-thistle), found in corn-fields all over Southern Europe and Western Asia. T.
(Prov. xv. 19; Mic. vii. 4.)	(4) Chedek..... ἄκανθα.	Solanum Sodomæum.	(4) "Thorn," or "brier;" evidently a plant suitable for a hedge. From the Arabic term, chadak, it is identified with the so-called "apple of Sodom," a shrubby plant, three to five feet high, having prickly stems like a brier and blossoms like a potato, and bearing similar apples. It grows in all the hot valleys, and is used for hedges. T.
(Gen. iii. 18; Matt. vii. 16.)	(5) Kôtz..... ἄκανθα.	.....	(5) Very generally used in the Bible (Old and New Testaments) as a generic term for all prickly plants, from a bush to a weed (as in the Parable of the Sower).
(Is. vii. 23, 25.)	(6) Shamîr..... ἄκανθα.	(1) Paliurus aculeatus. (2) Rhamnus oleoïdes.	(6) Occurs very often in Isaiah, translated "briers," and coupled with shâit, "thorns," (a generic term). Shamîr = Arabic samur, a common non-fruit bearing thorny tree. In the Jordan Valley the name is confined to the Christ's thorn; elsewhere it is given to the buckthorn. The former has small leaves like an olive, with very flexible boughs; it grows plentifully about Jerusalem, and is supposed by some to have been the tree from which Christ's crown of thorns was made. T. The real "brier," or wild rose, is found only in the extreme north of Palestine and Syria.
(Is. vii. 19.)	(7) Naatzûtz..... στοιβή.	Zizyphus spina Christi.	(7) Another word (translated "thorn"), used of the same species of thorn tree, the nubk of the Arabs; very common in all the warmer parts of Palestine, especially in the Plain of Gennesaret and the Jordan Valley, where it forms a thicket. It sometimes grows to a great size, is common about Jerusalem, and from it the crown of thorns is generally supposed to have been plaited. It is tough and pliant, and the spikes are very sharp and numerous. T.
(Judg. viii. 7, 16.)	(8) Barkanim.... ἄκανθαι.	Rubus fruticosus.	(8) Only once used (rendered "briers"), as the scourge threatened by Gideon to the men of Succoth. Probably the common bramble is here intended, which is abundant in Palestine, and especially about Bethlehem. T.
Ezek. ii. 6; xxviii. 24.)	(9) Sillon..... ἀκανθα ὀδύνης.	Ruscus aculeatus.	(9) Translated "briers," and "a pricking brier." Probably identical with the Arabic sellaon, or "butcher's-broom," very common in Palestine. The other words implying thorns, briers, or thistles, cannot be identified either by their Arabic names or by the context.

English Translation.	Hebrew and Greek.	Botanical Name.	Remarks.
Bulrush..... (Ex. ii. 3; Job viii. 11.)	(1) Gôme..... θιβη πάπυρος.	Cyperus papyrus.	Six Hebrew words are used of the rush genus, and are variously translated somewhat indiscriminately: (1) Gôme ("bulrush" and "rush," A.V.), the material of Moses' ark in Egypt, and growing in miry places. The famous papyrus of Egypt, which formerly grew like a forest on the banks of the Nile, is now extinct in Egypt, though still found in the marshes of Nubia. It grows luxuriantly in a swamp at the north end of the Plain of Gennesaret, and covers acres of marsh by the waters of Merom; but exists nowhere else in Asia. It is called by the Arabs babeer (i.e. papyrus). It has a triangular stem, eight to ten feet high, with bushy top.
(Is. xix. 7.)	(2) 'Arôth..... τὸ ἄχι τὸ χλωρόν.	.....	(2) Translated "paper reeds," but wrongly, as papyrus had already been mentioned. It is the "green herbage," which bounds in marshy places.
(Job viii. 11; Gen. xli. 2.)	(3) Achu..... ἄχι βούτομον.	(a) Cyperus esculentus. (b) Butomus umbellatus.	(3) Translated "flag" in Job, but "meadow" in Genesis, as that in which Pharaoh's fat kine fed. From the former, where it is classed with the papyrus, it is clearly a specific plant. The word is not Hebrew, but Egyptian. Probably the (a) edible rush, or (b) flowering rush, both of which flourish in Egypt, and grow in Palestine, with the papyrus.
(Ex. ii. 3, 5; Jonah ii. 5.)	(4) Sûph..... τὸ ἕλος. (Omitted in LXX.)	.....	(4) Rendered "flags" (in which Moses' ark was concealed) by the river bank; but "weeds" in Jonah, at the bottom of the sea. A general term for water-weeds, whether seaweed or the rank marsh vegetation of a river's brink.
(Is. ix. 14; xix. 15.)	(5) Agmôn..... (paraphrased in LXX.)	Arundo donax.	(5) "Reed," or "cane," occurs twice in a proverb, "head and tail, branch and rush," i.e. "top and bottom;" also in Job, in the phrase "bowing the head like a bulrush," whence it evidently had a high stem surmounted with a tuft. Probably the common reed of Egypt and Palestine, a tall thin cane, twelve feet high, with a bushy blossom, bending flat before the wind and rising again,—the "reed shaken with the wind" (Matt. xi. 7), growing luxuriantly by the Dead Sea and the Jordan.
(Gen. xli. 5, 22.)	(6) Kaneh..... κάλαμος.	.....	(6) "Cane," or "reed," occurs frequently in the Old Testament as the general term for a "stem," whether the "stalk" of the wheat plant, the stem of a candlestick (Ex. xxv. 31), a measuring rod (Ezek. xl. 5) or even the humerus (bone of the arm).
Bush, Burning. (Ex. iii. 2—4.)	Seneh ..... βάτος.	Acacia Nilotica.	Only used of the "burning bush," the thorny acacia of the Arabian peninsula, the sânt of Egypt, akin to the shittah tree and senna; hence perhaps the mountains on which it grows derive their name "Sinai," and the tract is "the wilderness of Sin," or the seneh.
Calamus..... (Ex. xxx. 23; Ezek. xxvii. 19.)	Keneh bosem.... κάλαμος εὐώδης.	.....	The name given to an aromatic substance extracted from some reed. It is one ingredient in the anointing oil; it is the Sweet Cane (see below); is coupled with "cassia," "cinnamon," "spikenard," &c. Probably imported from Arabia Felix or India, and made from the lemon grass; no such plant has been found in Syria. T.
Camphire..... (S. of S. i. 14; iv. 13.)	Côpher..... κύπρος.	Lawsonia alba.	The henna of the Arabs, with which they dye their nails, palms, &c.: well known in Nubia, Egypt, and Arabia, but also found by the Dead Sea, at Engedi only. A small shrub, with dark bark, leaves pale green like a lilac, and bearing clusters of white and yellow blossoms, very fragrant.
Cane, Sweet.... (Jer. vi. 20.) (S. of S. iv. 14; Is. xliii. 24.)	Kaneh hattob... Keneh. κιννάμωμον.	.....	Thought by some to mean "incense," by others the "sugar-cane;" but it would seem to be identical with, or closely akin to, the Calamus (see above), viz. an aromatic reed, from which fragrant essence was extracted, probably Andropogon schœnanthus.

English Translation.	Hebrew and Greek.	Botanical Name.	Remarks.
Caper			See Hyssop.
Cassia (Ex. xxx. 24.)	(1) Kiddah. ἰρις.		Two spice-bearing trees are included under "cassia," viz. (1) Cinnamomum cassia, one ingredient in the holy oil, sold in the market at Tyre. It is inferior to cinnamon, coarser, and more pungent. It is not now found in Arabia. Probably the spice was always imported from India, being the inner bark dried.
(Ps. xlv. 8.)	(2) Ketzioth. κασία.	Aucklandia costus (?).	(2) Ketzioth, either a cassia-bearing tree, or the Indian orris.
Cedar. (Lev. xiv. 4; Ps. civ. 16; Ezek. xxxi. 3, 6.)	Erez. κέδρος.	Cedrus Libani.	Cedar is used in Scripture generically of the whole pine-tree family, and specially of the cedar of Lebanon. In the Pentateuch it probably means an aromatic juniper, found among the Sinaitic rocks; in later books it is the cedar of Lebanon, as the noblest of trees, the glory of the vegetable creation, and so is made the symbol of grandeur, might, loftiness, and of wide expansion. It grows rapidly, and lives long; but is not found in any part of Palestine except the Lebanon district.
Chestnut. (Gen. xxx. 37.)	Armôn. πλάτανος.	Platanus Orientalis.	It occurs twice in A.V., but is translated "plane-tree" in the LXX., which is probably the correct rendering, since the chestnut is not found in Palestine, while the plane-tree is frequent by the side of streams and in plains. In the Bible it is coupled with the willow and poplar, which grow only in moist low ground.
Cinnamon (Ex. xxx. 23; Prov. vii. 17.)	Kinnamôn. κιννάμωμον.	Cinnamomum Zeylanicum.	Cinnamon is a native of Ceylon, and the tree is unknown in Syria. The spice was an ingredient of the holy oil, and a perfume. It is the inner rind of the bark, and was imported; but the oil is distilled from the ripe fruit. The tree is a species of laurel, growing thirty feet high, with a long lance-shaped leaf and white blossom.
Citron (Lev. xxiii. 40.)	'Etz hadar. καρπὸς ξύλου.	Citrus medica.	The Hebrew, Peri 'etz hadar, translated "boughs (or fruits) of goodly trees" (A.V.), is taken by the Chaldee paraphrase and the Rabbis to mean "fruit of the citron trees," which is still used, according to the enactment, on the Feast of Tabernacles (Farrar's "Life of Christ," vol. ii. p. 57, note 2). The citron is a native of Media; its leaves are larger than those of the orange, and its bloom is pale purple. It is the most common of the orange tribe in Palestine, and is occasionally used in synagogue worship as representative of God's gift of fruits.
Cockle. (Job xxxi. 40.)	Boshah. βάτος.		Occurs only once in A.V., but the same Hebrew word is translated "wild grapes" in Is. v. 2, 4. The root of the Hebrew would suggest any "noisome weed," or plant of offensive odour, e.g. the "tares" of the New Testament, the fœtid arums of Galilee, or the smut, Uredo fœtida, that attacks corn. T. Some think it to be aconite, or deadly nightshade.
Coriander. (Ex. xvi. 31.)	Gad. κόριον.	Coriandrum sativum.	Only once mentioned, as that to which manna is compared. It is an umbelliferous plant, with a white blossom, yielding globular peppercorn seeds of aromatic flavour. It grows wild in Egypt and Palestine, especially in the Jordan Valley.
Corn. (Num. xviii. 27.)	(1) Dagan. σῖτος.	Triticum compositum.	Different Hebrew words are used for "corn" in its different states, e.g. (1) General term for corn in the abstract, as compared with any other commodity, such as "wine." (2) "Standing corn," as it grows in the field.
(Judg. xv. 5.)	(2) Kamah. στάχυς.	" spelta. " hybernum.
(Gen. xli. 49.)	(3) Bar. σῖτος.		(3) Grain, or winnowed corn. (4) An ear of corn. (5) Early sprouts of corn. (6) Corn a year old; or earthly produce opposed to heavenly food, i.e. manna. (7) Parched corn, dried or baked by fire. (8) Corn beaten out. (9) Sheaf, or handful of corn stalks. Corn was extensively grown in Palestine.
(Ruth ii. 2.)	(4) Shibboleth. στάχυς.
(Lev. ii. 14.)	(5) Karmel. χίδρον.

English Translation.	Hebrew and Greek.	Botanical Name.	Remarks.
Corn (cont.) (Josh. v. 11.)	(6) 'Abûr. σῖτος.		Barley, millet, wheat, and spelt ("fitches," A.V.), are common in Palestine: oats are unknown. But Egypt was a great corn-producing country in Jacob's time, and the chief granary of the Roman empire in later ages. The wheat with seven ears on one stalk is still to be seen in the Delta, and is known as "mummy wheat." "Parched-corn" is fresh wheat scorched or baked, and eaten without further preparation. The dish sent by Joseph from his table to Benjamin and his brethren was doubtless "frumenty," or "firmity," i.e. corn stewed in the grain, and boiled up with milk.
(Josh. v. 11.)	(7) Kâli. (Om. in LXX.)
(Lev. ii. 16.)	(8) Girsah. χόδρον.
(Ruth ii. 7.)	(9) 'Amár. δράγμα.
Cotton..... (Esth. i. 6.)	Carpas. κάρπασος.	Gossypium herbaceum.	Though the word does not occur in the A.V., the substance is certainly mentioned in the original, where the hangings of the king's palace are described as white, green (carpas), and blue. The rendering should be "white and violet-coloured cotton." The cotton plant is now largely cultivated in Palestine (though it must have been imported from India), and it furnishes almost the entire clothing of the women; but it was probably unknown to the writers of the Old and New Testaments. C.
Cucumber..... (Num. xi. 5.) (Is. i. 8.)	(1) Kishuim..... σίκυοι. (2) Mikshah. σικυήρατον.	Cucumis sativus. " chate.	"Cucumber," and "a garden of cucumbers" (Mikshah), each occurs once. It has always been one of the chief vegetables of Egypt, and is common in Palestine, being planted by the acre in the plains, and forming a staple article of vegetable diet for the poor in summer. There are two kinds, the common species being small, from want of tillage.
Cummin..... (Is. xxviii. 25, 27.)	Cammôn..... κύμινον.	Cuminum sativum.	A common umbelliferous plant, whose fruits, "beaten out with a rod," are used as spices in bread and stewed meats, and as a medicine. It resembles fennel, but is smaller; is indigenous, and cultivated like the cereals. It was only included inferentially in the Mosaic law as to tithes.
Cypress..... (Is. xliv. 14, 15.)	Tirzah..... (Omitted in LXX.)	Cupressus sempervirens.	Only once mentioned, as a material for a heathen god; hence some hard-grained wood. Some think it is the Syrian juniper of Lebanon, resembling the cypress. The real cypress is the funeral or cemetery tree of the East, and so esteemed by the Mohammedans; but is not to be seen in the wild state.
Desire..... (Eccles. xii. 5.)	Abionâh..... κάππαρις.	Capparis Ægyptiaca.	The word occurs only in this passage, and is thought to mean the "caper" (see Hyssop) which was eaten as an intoxicating stimulant to the appetites, and would probably fail of its effects in the decrepitude of old age. So Gesenius, the Talmudists, and ancient versions interpret it.
Dill..... (Matt. xxiii. 23.)	ἄνηθον.....	Anethum graveolens.	Anethon is incorrectly translated "anise" in our New Testament. It is the "dill," a little umbelliferous plant, grown for its aromatic seeds, which are useful as medicine and for seasoning, and resemble caraway seeds. It grows wild in Palestine, and is cultivated in gardens; it is also found in the islands of the Archipelago, and in Egypt. According to the Talmud, its "seeds, leaves, and stem" were subject to tithe.
Dove's Dung.. (2 Kin. vi. 25.)	Chiryônim..... κόπρος περιστερῶν.	....	To palliate the revolting idea of a literal interpretation of the passage, some nauseous plant or herb has been suggested as the probable rendering, such as "chick-pea," or "star of Bethlehem;" but it is more probable that it refers to the cost of the smallest particle of fuel, for which dried dung is commonly used in Palestine.
Ebony..... (Ezek. xxvii. 15.)	Hobnim..... (Omitted in LXX.)	Diospyros ebenum.	It is the heart-wood of the date-tree, growing in Ceylon and South India. This heart is only about two feet in diameter. Ezekiel mentions it as a costly article, brought to the market at Tyre by the merchants of Dedan, i.e. of the Persian Gulf.

English Translation.	Hebrew and Greek.	Botanical Name.	Remarks.
Elm..... (Hos. iv. 13.)	Elah..... (Omitted in LXX.)	Pistacia terebinthus.	"Elm" occurs only once in the A.V., but elah, of which it is a translation, occurs often. The elm is not believed to be indigenous to S. Palestine, and the translation is erroneous. Elsewhere the word is rendered by "oak," "plane-tree," "terebinth," "teil-tree" (which see).
Fig-Tree..... (Gen. iii. 7; Deut. viii. 8.)	(1) Teenah..... συκῆ.	Ficus carica.....	Arabic tin. It is very often mentioned in the Old and New Testaments. It is indigenous in Syria, and reaches a great size, having smooth bark, thick trunk, wide and thick leaves (whose central fibre is made into walking-sticks). The pear-like fruit is a hollow succulent, containing the imperfect flower encased within it. The fig-tree is the earliest named in the Bible, and abounds (wild and cultivated) in every part of Palestine; its smiting is one of God's threatened judgments. It puts out its earliest fruit-buds before its leaves, the former in February, the latter in April or May. When the leaves are out, the fruit ought to be ripe (Matt. xxi. 19). Of the four Hebrew words, (1) is the name of the tree, the other three denote different stages or conditions of the fruit: e.g. (2) Pag is the green fig, or unripened fruit remaining on the tree through the winter. (Beth-phage is the "house of green figs," a sunless ravine.) (3) Bikkûrah is the "early fig." (4) Debelah is a "cake of dried figs," i.e. the main produce of the tree kept for winter use, often mentioned in the Old Testament as a staple article of food. It also possesses medicinal qualities (Is. xxxviii. 21).
(S. of S. ii. 13.)	(2) Pag. ὀλυνθος.
(Hos. ix. 10.)	(3) Bikkûrah. σκοπός.
(1 Sam. xxv. 18.)	(4) Debelah. παλάθη.
Fir..... (Is. xxxvii. 24.)	Berosh..... Beroth. κυπάρισσος.	Pinus halepensis. " maritima. " carica.	The berosh is often mentioned in conjunction with the cedar of Lebanon, as a "choice" and a "goodly" tree. Its timber was used in building the Temple (for flooring, ceiling, and doors), for rafters of ships' decks, and for musical instruments, especially harps. In the LXX. it is rendered by "pine," "cypress," and "juniper;" and probably it may have included these in its connotation. Besides these are found several species of pine and fir (arranged above in order of prevalence in Col. 3). The halepensis is certainly the "fir" of Scripture, and is scarcely inferior to the cedar. No Scotch fir or larch trees grow in Palestine.
Fitches..... (Is. xxviii. 25, 27.)	(1) Ketzach..... μελάνθιον.	Nigella sativa. " orientalis.	Two Hebrew words are translated "fitches;" the former (ketzach) is a kind of ranunculus, growing wild in the Mediterranean, cultivated in Egypt and Syria for its pungent black seeds, largely used like caraway seeds for flavouring cakes, &c. It is too small to bear the threshing instrument, and is "beaten out with a staff." The other (cussemeth) is "spelt" (elsewhere translated "rye," which see). The Nigella orientalis also grows wild, is inferior, and is used for adulterating pepper. T.
	(2) Cussemeth.
Flag.....	.....	.....	See Bulrush.
Flax..... (Ex. ix. 31; Is. xix. 9.)	(1) Pishtah..... λίνον.	Linum sativum.	Flax was the earliest known product cultivated and manufactured for clothing purposes, especially in Egypt, where linen is found enwrapping the most ancient mummies, and remained for centuries the only and universal textile fabric. Flax was cultivated in Egypt, and also in Canaan before the Israelite settlement (Josh. ii. 6); and its failure is among God's punishments (Hos. ii. 9). Linen was a material of female domestic industry, and the fabric of priestly robes; and was used for lamp-wicks (Is. xlii. 3). In modern times its culture in both countries has been largely superseded by cotton. (2) Shesh ("fine linen") is probably an Egyptian word, and seems to be synonymous with (3) Bad, unless the former is the yarn, and the latter the cloth. (4) Butz ("fine linen") denotes the material of the robes of kings, of
(Gen. xli. 42.)	(2) Shesh. βύσσος.
(Lev. vi. 10.)	(3) Bad. λίνον.
(Esth. viii. 15.)	(4) Butz. βύσσος.
(Judg. xiv. 12.)	(5) Sadin. σινδών.
(Prov. vii. 16.)	(6) Etun. (Omitted in LXX.)
(1 Kin. x. 28.)	(7) Mikveh. (Omitted in LXX.)

			rich men, of the Temple choir, and the Temple veil; and is the original of the βύσσος of the New Testament, the dress of Dives, and of the Lamb's bride. The word is probably Assyrian, and applied to the linen brought from the East, while shesh denotes that from Egypt. (5) Sadin is a cloth from which sheets (Judg. xiv. 12) and clothes (Is. iii. 23) were made. (6) Etun (used once) is "linen of Egypt." A like Greek word (ὀθόνη) is the "great sheet" in Peter's vision, and the gravecloth of Jesus (John xix. 40). (7) Mikveh ("linen yarn," A.V.) is an import of Solomon from Egypt, though the LXX. and old versions retain it as a proper name, while Gesenius translates it "troop," and Bochart "tax." Its signification is very doubtful. C.
Frankincense. (Ex. xxx. 34; Is. lx. 6.)	Lebonah ..... λιβανος.	Boswellia Carterii. " thurifera. " papyrifera.	The Hebrew word for "frankincense" is quite distinct from those used in the Bible for "incense" (miktar, kitter, kitteroth), of which the former was one constituent. It is a fragrant gum distilled from the Fagaar, or frankincense-tree, somewhat like a mountain-ash, with long glossy serrated leaves, and green starlike flowers, tipped with red, emitting a lemon fragrance. It grows mainly near Saba (Sheba) in Arabia, along the coast of Hadramaut, and also in the Soumali country. It was never grown in Syria, or in India. B.
Galbanum ..... (Ex. xxx. 34.)	Chelbenah..... χαλβάνη.	Opoidia galbaniifera. Galbanum officinale.	A yellow resin, exuding from two umbelliferous plants, of which the second (Galbanum officinale) grows in Syria; and from it this ingredient of the holy incense was doubtless extracted. C.
Gall..... ..... (Jer. ix. 15; Amos vi. 12.)	Rôsh ..... χολή.	....	Rôsh is some poisonous bitter herb; it is twice translated "poison," and also "hemlock." It is often used with wormwood, and may be taken for any "bitter herb."
Garlick..... (Num. xi. 5.)	Shoom..... τὰ σκόρδα.	Allium sativum.	One of the vegetables enjoyed by the Israelites in Egypt. Akin to the onion; grows, wild and cultivated, in Palestine. T.
Gopher..... (Gen. vi. 14.)	Gopher..... ξύλα τετράγωνα.	.....	Only once used, as the material of Noah's ark, which our translators have not rendered into English. Cedar, pine, and cypress have been conjectured, for no valid reason. C.
Gourd..... (Jonah iv. 5—9.)	Kikayon..... κολοκυνθη.	Cucurbita pepo.	A climbing gourd, with wide leaves, very commonly used in the East to form shelter for arbours; growing often a foot a day, and withering as rapidly. The "castor-oil plant" is a shrub, and unsuitable. T.
" (wild)..... (2 Kin. iv. 39.)	Pakkuoth..... τολυπη ἀγρία.	Citrullus colocynthis.	The poisonous fruit of a wild vine, gathered by the young prophet in mistake for a wholesome melon. Many kinds of wild gourd are found in Palestine, but only the bitter fruit of the colocynth would be likely to be mistaken from its appearance, and yet reveal itself by taste. It grows wild in profusion about Gilgal. C. It is supposed also to be the "vine of Sodom" (Deut. xxxii. 32). T.
Grass..... (Num. xxii. 4.)	(1) Yered..... τὰ χλωρά.	.....	Several Hebrew words are translated "grass;" of which (1) is simply generic for all kinds of green herbage; (2) answers to our word, "green grass," as distinguished from "herbs;" while (3) is "fodder," or dry food for cattle. There are scarcely any pastures or meadows in Palestine, but great variety of grasses (more than seventy species), as of all other vegetable productions. Principally, (a) the bare down-grass of the limestone hills of Judæa; (b) the tall, luxuriant meadow-grass of the maritime plains, answering more nearly to ours; (c) the rank, rapid-growing, prairie-like herbage of the Jordan Valley.
(Gen. i. 11.)	(2) Desher. βοτάνη.	(British and S. European.)
(Is. xxxv. 7.)	(3) Chatzir. χόρτος, πόα
Grove..... (Gen. xxi. 33.)	(1) Asherah ..... (2) Eshel. ἄρουρα.	..... Tamarix Pallasii. " Gallica.	Two Hebrew words are rendered "grove" (A.V.), both erroneously. The first, always used in connexion with the temples of Baal, is supposed to be a wooden image of Astarte. The other occurs only three times, and is twice translated "a tree:" hence it is believed to be identical with the Arab. asal, "tamarisk tree," of which seven species exist in Palestine, growing thickly by the Lower Jordan and Dead Sea. T.

Hazel..... (Gen. xxx. 37.)	Luz..... καρύα.	.....	The hazel is common in Galilee and the Lebanons, but is not found elsewhere. The name occurs only once, and is identical with the Arabic name of the almond-tree, which some suppose it to denote.
Hay..... (Pro. xxvii.25.)	Chatzir..... χόρτος.	.....	Occurs twice; but means tall stems of grass. There is no such thing as "hay" in Palestine. See Grass.
Heath..... (Jer. xvii. 6; xlviii. 6.)	'Arar..... ἀγριομυρίκη.	Juniperus sabina.	Only occurs twice, and is identical with the Arabic word for a dwarf juniper, growing in the most barren and rocky parts of the desert. It is a shrub, of stunted appearance, bearing purple berries. There is no heath south of the Lebanons. T.
Hemlock..... (Deut. xxix. 18; Hos. x. 4.) (Amos vi. 12.)	(1) Rôsh..... χολὴ ἄγρωστις. (2) La'anah. πικρία.	.....	Rôsh, translated "hemlock" and "gall," is thought by some to be the "poppy;" by others "darnel," "henbane," "aconite," &c.; but its identification is uncertain. C. See Gall. La'anah is "wormwood," which see.
Herb..... (Gen. i. 11, 12.) (Is. xviii. 4.)	(1) Esheb..... (2) Oroth.	.....	Esheb is used generally of "herbs yielding seed," as opposed to grass. Oroth is thought to be "colewort," or "cabbage." T.
" (bitter)..... (Ex. xii. 8.)	Merorim..... πικρίδες.	.....	Five bitter herbs were eaten with the Paschal lamb, viz. lettuce, endive, chicory, mint, and one other not identified; but many more are now eaten in Palestine, as salads, by the natives. No specific plant is meant by the word.
Husks..... (Luke xv. 16.)	κεράτια.....	Ceratonia siliqua.	The fruit of the carob, or locust-tree, a leguminous plant, very common in Palestine, with leaves like our ash. Its pods (very abundant in April and May) are flat, narrow, horn-shaped, from six to ten inches long; chiefly used for feeding cattle, horses, and pigs, but sometimes the food of the very poorest people. T.
Hyssop..... (Ex. xii. 22; 1 Kin. iv. 33.)	Ézôb..... ὕσσωπος.	Satureia. Capparis spinosa.	The hyssop is much disputed, but thought to be either Satureia thymbia, found on Carmel, or marjoram; or, more probably, the thorny caper. It seems to have been used as a broom or brush, and so would appear to be formed of a bunch of twigs. It grew in Egypt, in the Sinaitic desert, in Palestine, "out of the wall;" with all which the caper best accords. T.
Juniper..... (1 Kin. xix. 4.)	Rothem..... ῥαθμέν.	Retama rœtam.	A desert shrub (Arab. retem), growing near Sinai, Petra, the Dead Sea, the Jordan, &c. Not a juniper, but a broom; the largest shrub of Sinai, under which Elijah lay down to die; and one Israelite station was "place of broom" (Rithmah).
Ladanum..... (Gen. xxxvii. 25; xliii. 11.)	Lôt..... στακτή.	Cistus creticus. " villosus. " salviæfolius.	Occurs only twice, and both times rendered "myrrh," which cannot be correct, as that is not an indigenous product of Gilead or Palestine. It is identical with the Arab. ladan (ladanum), the gum of the Cistus, or rock rose, of which there are many species in Palestine, especially on Mount Carmel. See Myrrh.
Leeks..... (Num. xi. 5.)	Chatzir..... τὰ πράσα.	Allium porrum.	Chatzir occurs many times, but is only in one place rendered "leeks" (in conjunction with "onions"); and all old versions and commentators adopt this interpretation, though some modern ones suggest a kind of lucern, largely used as salad, since in all other passages chatzir is translated "herbs," or "grass." Leeks were a very favourite vegetable in Egypt, where they were reverenced as sacred; and are still largely grown there and in Palestine. T. Others suggest the "fenugreek," a common article of food in Egypt. H.

English Translation.	Hebrew and Greek.	Botanical Name.	Remarks.
Lentiles..... (Gen. xxv. 34; 2 Sam. xxiii. 11.)	'Adashim..... φακός.	Ervum lens.....	Arabic adas. Jacob's red pottage was of lentiles, mentioned in three other places, among the produce and food of Palestine, in conjunction with beans. A species of vetch, resembling the tine-tare, grown on poorer soils. The red lentile is most esteemed: it is cut and threshed like corn, then stewed, like haricot beans and made into pottage.
Lily..... (1 Kin. vii. 26; S. of S. ii. 16; vi. 2, 3.)	Shûshan..... κρίνον.	Anemone coronaria. Ranunculus Asiaticus. Adonis Palestina.	The Arabs use the word susan as a general term for flowers of the lily kind (e.g. tulip, anemone, ranunculus, &c.). From a comparison of texts, it seems to grow in valleys and gardens, is conjoined with the rose of Sharon (which see), and formed an ornamental garland; its colour was red, and it grew in profusion in the Plain of Gennesaret (Matt. vi. 28); it yielded by distillation a fragrant juice. Probably the allusions in the Old Testament are general, including the above-mentioned, the iris, and water-lilies; but what impresses the traveller universally as the "lilies of the field" of the New Testament are the anemones, carpeting every plain, and luxuriantly pervading the land in every soil and all situations.
Mallow..... (Job xxx. 4.)	Malluach..... ἅλιμον.	Atriplex halimus. Malva rotundifolia. C. Malva sylvestris. C. Althæa frutex. C.	Only once named, and then as food for the most abject poor. The word suggests the notion of "salt" in its taste or locality, and might indicate the tree-mallow and marsh-mallow. Eighteen species of mallow are found in Palestine. Most scholars take it to be the sea purslane.
Mandrake..... (Gen. xxx. 14; S. of S. vii. 13.)	Dudaîm..... μανδραγόρας.	Mandragora officinalis. T.	A plant of the potato family, with a root like the beet, dark green leaves lying flat like a primrose, and bearing yellow pulpy fruit of the size of a large plum, having exhilarating qualities, and still thought by the natives to stimulate fruitfulness. It abounds in Palestine.
Manna..... (Ex. xvi. 15.)	Manna..... μάννα.	.....	Manna (Heb. Man hu, "What is it?") was the name by which the miraculous food of Israel was known. It is described as a small round thing, like coriander seed, white, tasting like wafer and honey. It is still the name given to a sweet gum distilled in the hot weather from the tamarisk trees in a limited locality of the Arabian desert; collected by the Arabs before sunrise: boiled, strained, eaten as honey; but it has no taste of wafer, does not resemble coriander seed, is found in very small quantities, only under the tamarisk trees; melts as soon as the sun is up, and could not form a staple article of food. See Manna (Section XL), p. 88.
Mastick Tree.... (Hist. of Sus. ver. 54.)	σχῖνος.....	Pistacia lentiscus.	Though its name occurs only in the Apocrypha, it is thought by some to be identical with the balsam tree (Gen. xxxvii. 25). It is a small evergreen bushy tree, of the terebinth genus, yielding a gum, a commercial commodity from the earliest times. It is very common in all countries bordering on the Mediterranean, is indigenous in Palestine, and well known as the "lentisk."
Melons..... (Num. xi. 5.)	Abattichim..... πέπονες.	Cucurbita citrullus. Cucumis melo.	Once mentioned among the fruits of Egypt. Melons are staple and refreshing food in Egypt and Palestine, especially the water-melon, which grows to a great size, is often thirty pounds in weight, and refreshes the thirsty as well as the hungry. There is a succession of crops from May to November. T.
Millet..... (Ezek. iv. 9.)	Dôchan..... κέγχρος.	Panicum miliaceum.	Once named with "wheat, barley, beans, and lentiles," in compounding meal for bread. The same name is used by Arabs for two kinds of millet, largely grown in the East. Both are grasses, with very small seeds, used for cakes, but eaten by the very poor, uncooked. T.
Mint..... (Luke xi. 42.)	ἡδύοσμον.....	Mentha sativa. " sylvestris.	Commonly eaten by Jews with their meat, and one of the "bitter herbs" of the Paschal feast. Several species (wild and cultivated) grow in Palestine.

English Translation.	Hebrew and Greek.	Botanical Name.	Remarks.
Mulberry..... (2 Sam. v. 23; Luke xvii. 6.)	Becâîm..... ἄπιοι. συκάμινος.	Populus tremula.	The translation is believed to be erroneous, and the tree meant to be the aspen poplar: but some adopt the LXX. translation, "pear trees." In the New Testament the mulberry is intended by the Greek equivalent "sycamine."
Mustard..... (Matt. xiii. 31.)	σίναπι.	Sinapis nigra. H. Salvadora Persica. T.	Only mentioned in the New Testament; always with reference to the smallness of its seeds in comparison with the size of its branches. Commentators differ in identifying it. Some take it to be the annual herb "mustard," indigenous to Palestine as to Britain, but in such a soil and climate growing to the largest of plants, many feet high; others a shrub-like tree, with an equivalent Arabic name, and similar pungent flavour, having very small seed. The former answers all the Gospel requirements, and the comparison was proverbial.
Myrrh..... (Ex. xxx. 23; Prov. vii. 17.)	(1) Môr..... σμύρνα.	Balsamodendron myrrha. T.	Myrrh is frequently mentioned in the Old and New Testaments. It was an ingredient in the holy oil; a domestic perfume, with "aloes, cassia, and cinnamon;" used for the purification of women, and for embalming. Both Scripture and classical writers give Arabia as its source; and it is the gum from the bark of a small thorny balsam (Arab. murr), somewhat like an acacia.
(Gen. xxxvii. 25.)	(2) Lôt. στακτή.		(2) Lôt, erroneously translated "myrrh," is Ladanum, which see.
Myrtle..... (Is. lv. 13.)	Hadas..... μυρσίνη.	Myrtus communis.	A wild tree in Palestine, growing twenty feet high, with dark glossy leaves and white flowers. Found generally through Central Palestine about Bethlehem, Hebron, and on the sides of Carmel and Tabor. Still used in synagogues on the Feast of Tabernacles; its dried flowers and berries serve as a perfume. Esther's Hebrew name, Hadassah, was from the "myrtle."
Nard..... (S. of S. i. 12; John xii. 3.)	Nerd..... νάρδος.	Nardostachys jatamansi.	An Indian product, from a plant growing on the Himalayas, and therefore very costly. The plant has many hairy spikes shooting from one root, which are the root-leaves shooting up from the ground and surrounding the stalk, from which the nard is procured and dried.
Nettles..... (Is. xxxiv. 13.)	(1) Kimmosh.. ἄκανθα, ὀλεθρος.	Urtica pilulifera.	(1) Kimmosh, mentioned several times with thorns, and twice translated "thorns" (A.V.), is the "sting-nettle," of which there are several varieties in Palestine.
(Prov. xxiv. 31.)	(2) Charûl..... φρύγανα ἄγρια.	Acanthus spinosus.	(2) Charûl is translated "nettles" in a text where Kimmosh is "thorns," and again in Job. Its identification is doubtful; probably "prickly acanthus," a common troublesome weed in the plains of Palestine, with spinæ. T.
Nuts..... (S. of S. vi. 11.)	(1) Egôz..... καρύα.	Juglans regia.....	(1) Egôz is the "walnut tree," which is a native of Persia, extensively cultivated in Palestine.
(Gen. xliii. 11.)	(2) Botnîm..... τερέβινθος.	Pistacia vera.....	(2) Botnîm (Arab. batam) is the "pistachio," a tree allied to the "terebinth," and now somewhat rare in Palestine, but the fruit is very abundant. T.
Oak..... (Gen. xxxv. 4; Judg. vi. 11; Ezek. vi. 13.)	(1) Elâh..... τερέβινθος, δρῦς.	Pistacia terebinthus.	Six Hebrew words are rendered "oak." (1) Elâh is the terebinth, or teil tree, sometimes interchanged with allôn, "oak." It is the turpentine tree, and, though altogether different from the oak, it resembles it in the grain of the wood, as also in its wide-spreading foliage. The remaining five words all refer to the acorn-bearing oaks.
	(2) El, êlôn, îlan. τερέβινθος, ἤλων, δένδρον.	Quercus pseudococcifera.
	(3) Allâh, allôn . βάλανος.	.....	(3) Certainly means the oak; allôn, probably= "evergreen oak;" êlôn, the "deciduous" kinds. Three varieties at least of oak are common in Palestine: one, as "Abraham's oak," is of great size, its foliage covering a diameter of 90 feet, and its girth being 23 feet. T.
Oil-Tree..... (Is. xli. 19.)	'Etz Shemen..... (Omitted in LXX.)	Eleagnus.....	The Hebrew words occur three times: once translated "olive tree," and again "pine branches" (Neh. viii. 15, where it is distinguished from the "olive"). Probably the oleaster, which is very abundant, especially about Hebron, Tabor, Samaria, yielding inferior oil. It is smaller than the olive, with long, narrow, bluish leaves, silvery underneath, and bears bitter green berries. T.

Olive..... (Gen. viii. 11; Deut. viii. 8.)	Zaith..... ἐλαία.	Olea Europæa.....	One of the earliest trees named, and one of the especial blessings of the Promised Land; very abundant in Palestine, and its chief characteristic, yielding abundant fruit and oil. The oldest trees now remaining are at Gethsemane. The wood is of a rich amber colour, finely grained, and from it the cherubim, doors, and posts of the Temple were made. T.
" (wild.)..... (Rom. xi. 17.)	ἀγριέλαιος.....	.....	The olive requires grafting: the ungrafted suckers producing a small worthless fruit.
Onions..... (Num. xi. 5.)	Betzalim..... κρόμμυα.	Allium cepa.....	Named among the vegetables of Egypt: still extensively grown near the Nile, and in Syria; eaten raw by the natives, and regarded as a preservative against thirst. The Egyptian variety is as large as a Portugal onion. T.
Palm-Tree..... (Ex. xv. 27.)	Tamar..... φοίνιξ.	Phœnix dactylifera.	Palm trees are characteristic of sandy semi-tropical deserts, but grow best on clay or rich alluvium. There are 250 varieties. The date-palm is especially identified with Palestine. Many places were named from its abundance: e.g. Jericho, Hazazon-Tamar (by the Dead Sea), Baal-Tamar (near Gibeah), &c. It grew luxuriantly in the Jericho plain and the ravine of the Jordan, around the Sea of Galilee, in the vale of Shechem, and on the maritime plains, and is still abundant at Beyrout. It is improbable that it ever grew on Mount Olivet (Neh. viii. 15 is general in its directions to the whole country), as the soil is unsuitable. The palm leaf (lulab), bound with myrtle on the right and citron on the left hand, formed the triple badge of the desert life, carried by Jews, and shaken, at the Feast of Tabernacles, after which use it was carefully "laid up" at home. These were "the palm branches," fetched out and carried by the multitude who went out to escort Jesus on His triumphal entry (John xii. 13); while those from Bethany cut down branches of olive trees, and strawed them in the way (Matt. xxi. 8). Its tall stem (from 30 to 80 feet high), surmounted by feathery foliage, became the symbol of elegance and grace: hence it became a favourite woman's name, "Tamar" (Gen. xxxviii. 6; 2 Sam. xiii. 1: xiv. 27).
Pannag..... (Ezek. xxvii. 17.)	Pannag..... κασία.	.....	Not translated: mentioned with "wheat of Minnith," as a commodity. The Syriac version renders it "millet:" the LXX. treats it as the name of a place: others regard it as a spice, or some native product of Palestine.
Pine-Tree..... (Is. xli. 19; lx. 13.)	Tidhar..... βραθυδάαρ, πεύκη.	Ulmus campestris (?). T.	Tidhar occurs twice in Isaiah, coupled with the "fir" and "box," growing on Lebanon. There is no clue to its identification. The "elm" grows on Mount Lebanon; but some conjecture it to be the plane, or pine. T. See Fir. "Pine branches" (Neh. viii. 15) is a mistranslation. See Oil-Tree.
Pomegranate.. (Num. xx. 5; Deut. viii. 8.)	Rimmôn..... ῥοά, ροιά, κώδων.	Punica granatum.	One of the pleasant fruits of Egypt, and of the promised blessings of Palestine. It is often alluded to, and its abundance is attested by the frequent occurrence of "Rimmon" as the name of a town. It is a shrub-like tree, of the myrtle family, with blood-red flowers and globular fruit, containing red juicy pulp with many seeds, from which a refreshing drink was made (S. of S. viii. 2). Blood oranges are produced from a branch grafted on a pomegranate stem.
Poplar ..... (Gen. xxx. 37: Hos. iv. 13.)	Libneh..... στύραξ. λεύκη.	Populus alba. " Euphratica.	The Hebrew word means "white," is twice used, and rendered "poplar:" it probably denotes the "white poplar," of which four varieties at least are found in Palestine. The Populus alba is found on the hills, and is doubtless meant in Hos. iv.; the P. Euphratica abounds by the Jordan, and would be native in Padan-Aram (Gen. xxx.). Some have identified it with the "storax," a bushy shrub, with pale leaves having an under-coating of down, and white blossoms. See Stacte.

Pulse..... (2 Sam. xvii. 28; Dan. i. 12.)	Zeroim..... ὄσπρια.	.....	Though translated "parched pulse," the latter word is inserted in the A.V. by conjecture. The Hebrew is only "parched." Probably "peas." In the other passage, zeroim is "seed" of any kind, probably that of grain generally, or of leguminous plants In both cases it is the simple food of the poor.
Reed	.....	.....	See Bulrush.
Rose..... (Is. xxxv. 1; S. of S. ii. 1.)	Chabatzeleth.... κρίνον, ἄνθος.	(1) Narcissus tazetta.	(1) Only mentioned twice: once as "rose of Sharon," no doubt a bulbous plant, of which there are many species in Palestine, especially the narcissus, which abounds in the vale of Sharon. No "roses" proper are found, except in the Lebanons.
		(2) Anastatica hierochuntina.	(2) "Rose of Jericho," a small woody annual (not mentioned in Scripture), with short stem, bearing many branches, and white flowers. After seeding, it dries and curls up into a ball like wicker-work; but when put in water, it expands, as if alive again; hence called Anastatica, "resurrection flower." It is also called "Mary's flower."
Rue ..... (Luke xi. 42.)	πήγανον.....	Ruta bracteosa. " graveolens.	Included among common garden herbs of small value, tithed by Pharisees. Four species are found in Palestine. T.
Rush.....	Gôme..... πάπυρος.	.....	Egyptian papyrus. See Bulrush, (1) Gôme.
Rye..... (Ex. ix. 32; Is. xxviii. 25.)	Cusseméth ..... ζέα, ὀλύρα.	Triticum spelta...	The marginal reading, "spelt," is doubtless correct, as it resembles wheat. Rye is a northern plant, not Egyptian or Syrian; but the Hebrew name is akin to the Arab. chirsanat, "spelt." T.
Saffron..... (S. of S. iv. 14.)	Karkôm..... κρόκος.	Crocus sativus...	Only once named, among scented garden flowers; doubtless the same as the Arab. kurkum, the saffron crocus, which abounds in Palestine, and is highly esteemed for its perfume. Many varieties are found there, from which "saffron" is obtained, a yellow powder freely used for seasoning in the East.
Sea-Weed..... (Jonah ii. 5.)	.....	.....	See Bulrush, (4) Sûph.
Shittah-Tree.. (Is. xli. 19.)	Shittah..... ξύλον ἄσηπτον.	Acacia seyal.....	The tree is named once only; the wood frequently, as used for the tabernacle and its fittings in the wilderness, where no other timber was available, the acacia being the only timber tree of any size in the Arabian desert. It resembles the hawthorn, but is larger, growing in the driest places, and scattered over the whole peninsula, as also on the W. shore of the Dead Sea. Its wood is very hard, close-grained, orange-brown in colour. From it "Gum Arabic" is obtained; its bark is an astringent, and is used for tanning.
Shittim-Wood. (Ex. xxvi. 15.)	Shittim. ξύλον ἄσηπτον.
Soap..... (Jer. ii. 22; Mal. iii. 2.)	Bórith..... πόα.	Salsola kali.....	The native soap of Palestine is made from olive oil and potash, and dates from remote antiquity. The latter is abundantly produced by the numerous alkaline plants on the maritime marshes and by the Dead Sea. The use of potash is very ancient; to its discovery on the Belus we owe the invention of glass by the Phœnicians, and to its Arabic name the word "alkali:" it has always been one of the exports of Palestine.
Sodom, Vine of (Deut. xxxii. 32.)	Gephen Sedom. ἄμπελος Σοδόμων.	Solanum sanctum. Citrullus colocynthus. Calotropis procera.	See Bramble, Chedek. The Colocynth grows near the Dead Sea; it has long straggling tendrils like a vine, and a fruit of tempting appearance, like a beautiful orange, but nauseous to the taste, and when ripe its rind contains only dark ashes and seeds (see Wild Gourd). The Calotropis is also suggested as the Sodom vine: it grows on the S.E. of the Dead Sea, and in the plains of Shittim E. of Jordan, by Jericho, bearing clusters of bright yellow apples, not good for food; but it yields an esteemed medicinal gum. T.

Spelt			See Rye.
Spicery (Spice-tree). (Gen. xxxvii. 25.)	Necôth ..... θυμίαμα.	Astragalus tragacantha.	"Spicery," carried by the Ishmaelites to Egypt for sale, is not a general term, but denotes the product of some tree, probably the Arab. neca'at, or "gum tragacanth," obtained from the Astragali, a kind of lupine, of which there are more than 20 varieties in Palestine, dwarf shrubs with pinnate leaves, long thorns, and yellow blossoms, growing at all elevations. T. Some conjecture the "storax." See Stacte.
			The spice-bearing trees, producing cinnamon, &c., belong to the laurel family, not indigenous to Palestine. C.
Spikenard			See Nard.
Stacte (Ex. xxx. 34.)	Nataf ..... στακτή.	Styrax officinale.	Lit. "a drop" of some exuding gum; one ingredient in the holy oil; translated Job xxxvi. 27, "drop of water." It is identified with the gum of the storax, a beautiful, fragrant shrub, growing abundantly on the lower hills in Palestine, with blossoms like the orange tree.
Sycamine (Luke xvii. 6.)	συκάμινος.	Morus nigra.....	The black mulberry, still called sycamenea in Greece. Both it and the white mulberry are common in Palestine.
Sycamore. Sycomore. (Ps. lxxviii. 47; 1 Chron. xxvii. 28.)	Shikmin..... Shikmoth. συκομορέα.	Ficus sycamorus..	A species of fig, allied to the banyan tree, quite distinct from our "sycamore." It has a leaf like the mulberry, and fruit like a fig. It is an evergreen timber tree, of large growth. In Egypt it supplied the common timber for furniture, doors, boxes, and mummy-cases. It is found in the low plains of Jericho, but does not flourish in a hilly country, and is therefore uncommon in Palestine.
Tares (Matt. xiii.)	ζιζάνια.....	Lolium temulentum.	The Arab. zawân, the bearded darnel, a kind of rye-grass whose seeds are poisonous, common in all countries bordering on the Mediterranean. The leaf resembles that of wheat, but the seed is much smaller.
Teil. Terebinth. (Is. vi. 13.)	Elâh. ..... τερεβινθος.	Pistacia terebinthus.	Elâh in most passages is translated "oak" (which see). Sometimes it is mistranslated "valley" or "plain" (1 Sam. xvii. 2; Gen. xiii. 18); once "elm" (Hos. iv. 13); and in only one passage correctly, "teil," or "turpentine" tree. The LXX. generally render it the "terebinth." Very common in S. and E. Palestine, in localities too warm or dry for the oak, whose place it supplies, and whose winter appearance with straggling boughs it closely resembles. Its leaves are pinnate, dark reddish green; it bears small clustering blossoms, and red berries. On a terebinth (still shown) Judas is said to have hanged himself.
Thick Trees.... (Lev. xxiii. 40.)	'Etz 'Aboth..... κλάδοι δασεῖς.	.....	"Thick trees" are mentioned among those from whose branches the booths were to be made at the Feast of Tabernacles. The Rabbinical commentators interpret it of the "myrtle," which is in consequence used for the purpose to this day.
Thistle ..... (Hos. x. 8.)	Dardar ..... τρίβολος.	Centaurea calcitropa.	Two words are translated "thistles" (see Bramble, 2 and 3). Thistles of gigantic size, overtopping the horse and his rider, abound in the rich plains of Gennesaret, Sharon, Esdraëlon, and Jericho. Choach is thought to be the generic term for any spiny herb or shrub, including thistles, knap-weed, &c.; and dardar represents the genus Calcitropa. C.
(Job xxxi. 40.)	Choach..... τρίβολος.	Notobasis Syriaca.
Thorn			See Bramble.
Thyine Wood.. (Rev. xviii. 12.)	ξύλον θύϊνον.	Callitris quadrivalvis.	"Thyine wood" is one of the priceless commodities of the Babylon of the Book of Revelation. It is not indigenous to Palestine, but to the Atlas mountains. It was called "citron wood" by the Romans. It is a small tree of the cypress family, allied to the Lignum vitæ. T.

English Translation.	Hebrew and Greek.	Botanical Name.	Remarks.
Vine ..... (Gen. ix. 20; xl. 9; Deut. viii. 8.)	Gephen ..... ἄμπελος.	Vitis vinifera.....	It is a native of the hilly region south of the Caspian, and of Armenia and North Persia; it was one of the earliest plants cultivated, and has followed civilisation. Palestine is renowned for the quantity, quality, and productiveness of its vines, especially the valley of Eshcol (or "grapes"), and no climate or soil is better adapted for them. The vine is the emblem of the nation, and hence was adopted as that of the Christian Church.
" (wild) ..... (2 Kings iv. 39.)	Gephen Sâdeh .. ἄμπελος ἐν τῷ ἀγρῷ.	.....	The wild vine, or fox grape, has a small, black, acid fruit, suitable only for vinegar; it grows commonly in the hedges or thickets of Palestine. T. But a more noxious plant than this may be intended.
Walnut..... (S. of S. vi. 11.)	Egoz ..... ἡ καρυά.	Juglans regia.....	"Nuts" should be "walnut tree" in this passage. It is a native of Persia, and is still extensively cultivated in the higher grounds and colder parts of Palestine. See Nuts.
Wheat..... (Gen. xxx. 14; xli. 22.)	Chittah ..... πυρος.	Triticum compositum. " spelta. " hybernum.	Wheat is one of the earliest products, being the chief grain of Mesopotamia in Jacob's time; and from that day to this it has continued to be so in Egypt, where the many-eared (Gen. xli. 22) or "mummy" variety, depicted on monuments, is still grown. Three varieties are commonly found in Palestine: (1) on maritime plains, white, short-bearded; (2) short-grown, long-bearded, thick-set, coarse grain; (3) a longer stem, with coarse black beard and husk. It is still trodden out (Deut. xxv. 4), pressed out by a wooden wheel, or threshed with a flail (Is. xxviii. 27), and then winnowed with a fan and sifted. "Wheat harvest" (April to June) marks a division of the year.
Willow ..... (Lev. xxiii. 40; Job xl. 22.)	(1) 'Arâbim ..... ἰτέα.	Salix octandra. " Ægyptiaca. " Babylonica.	Two words are rendered "willow:" (1) 'Arâbim are always said to grow in the valley. The Arabic name is gharab. (2) Tzaphtzaphah (Arab. safsaf), occurs only once, of a tree growing by the water-side. It was used for constructing booths for the Feast of Tabernacles; and no doubt both words denote the "willow," of which many varieties are found in Palestine. H. But some suggest the oleander, which flourishes abundantly by the water-courses, and lines every valley. T.
(Ezek. xvii. 5.)	(2) Tzaphtzaphah. (Omitted in LXX.)	Oleander (?).
With..... (Judg. xvi. 7.)	Yether Lach.... νευρὰ ὑγρά.	.....	The Anglo-Saxon word wiðig denotes a "willow," in which sense it occurs in Wycliffe's Bible, whence any supple twig, used for wicker-work; but in Judges the word is better translated "cords."
Wormwood..... (Deut. xxix. 18.)	La'anah ..... ἄψινθος.	Artemisia Judaica. " Nilotica. " absinthium.	It is often mentioned, but only by way of metaphor. Several varieties of Artemisia grow in Palestine. Wormwood is well known for its bitter taste. T.

Note.—It is worthy of notice, that the Fauna and Flora, arts and sciences, &c. of the Bible seem to accord with its assumed geography and chronology: e.g. the animals and cereals belong specially to Mesopotamia and the country east of Palestine, and the musical instruments to the earliest ages of human history. Those of the Pentateuch are generally such as have their origin or prevalence in Egypt and the Sinaitic peninsula; those of the historical books, and of most of the prophets, belong more particularly to Palestine in an advanced stage of civilisation; while the animals mentioned in Job have received more illustration from the Assyrian records and monuments than from anything found in Egypt, Arabia, or Canaan. The marked omission of aquatic pursuits and industries, and of marine products, from the Bible narrative, accords with the historical fact that the sea-coast was never occupied by the Hebrews.

XLII. GEOLOGY OF BIBLE LANDS.

The Sinaitic range is formed of granite and plutonic rocks, without any signs of volcanic action, such as lava, basalt, &c. The granite is bright red from base to summit, often intersected with veins of greenstone and porphyry. Mount Sinai consists of coarse granite at the base, graduating in fineness to the peak. As we advance northward, dykes of porphyry intersect the granite, and this in turn is intersected by greenstone, while at the north-eastern extremity syenite supplants them. Tending towards Suez, sandstone overlays the syenite, and the sandstone belt of the Tûr fringes the granite group.

Through the Judæan wilderness a limestone plateau extends almost to Hebron. The whole central Syrian range is limestone, equivalent to the greensand underlying the chalk formation still prevailing about Beer-sheba; the few exceptions being near the Jordan Valley.

Occasionally, on hill tops (such as Olivet), is found a layer of white chalk mixed with flint. These are the remains of a vast chalk deposit, which once covered the whole country with an even surface, and was the cause of its fertility, but which has long ago been washed away by the heavy rains and torrents, leaving the now sterile limestone rock covered with the loose flints.

There are two distinct groups of limestone: (1) Neocomian, with fossils like those in our greensand, and intermingled with dolomite. It predominates in Galilee (from the Lebanons and Hermon to Safed) and Samaria, running on to the east of Jerusalem beyond Olivet. (2) A lower substratum of chalk, underlying the whole country from Lebanon to the south of the Mountains of Moab, but seldom coming to the surface.

In Galilee, near the Lake, are large dykes of basalt, and fields of lava, which has overflowed the limestone, from some extinct volcanoes (near Safed, Horns of Hattin, and Ard-el-Hamma); and the scoria has enriched the cultivation of those hill-sides and valleys, down to Little Hermon and the edge of Esdraelon. This is the only volcanic tract at present discovered.

East of Jordan the formation is similar to that of the west side, but without the upper chalk that once encrusted the hills. The Jordan gorge which cleaves these formations is a geological phenomenon.

1. MINERAL SUBSTANCES, &c., OF THE BIBLE.

Name and Reference.	Hebrew and Greek.	Remarks.
Bitumen..... (Gen. xi. 3.)	Chémar..... ἄσφαλτος.	A kind of asphalt, or earth-resin, found in the vale of Siddim, whence the Dead Sea was called Lacus Asphaltites. It is translated "slime," and was used as mortar or cement.
Clay..... (Is. xxix. 16.)	(1) Chomer..... πηλός.	(1) A tenacious earth, like that so called by us, used for making bricks and earthenware. It was less cohesive than ours, and accordingly for the former purpose was bound together by an admixture of straw before being baked, and for building purposes was mixed with sand.
(Is. xli. 25.)	(2) Tit..... πηλός.	(2) Tît (lit. "dirt") was, and still is, the common building material of the mud-houses of the peasantry of Palestine.
Earth..... (Gen. i. 22.)	(1) Eretz..... ἡ γῆ.	Three Hebrew words are translated "earth:" (1) Eretz, the earth, or globe generally.
(Gen. ix. 20.)	(2) Adamah..... γῆ.	(2) Adamah, red earth, or cultivated soil.
(Gen. iii. 14; Is. xlvii. 1.)	(3) 'Aphar..... γῆ.	(3) 'Aphar, dry earth, or dust.
Nitre..... (Jer. ii. 22.)	Nether..... νίτρον.	A mineral alkali (familiar to us as soda).
Salt..... (1 Chron. xviii. 12.)	Melach..... ἅλς.	Salt is very abundant in the neighbourhood of the Dead Sea, which is highly impregnated with it. A ridge of salt-rock runs into that sea, and there are salt-pits (Zeph. ii. 9), and a plain of salt, or valley of salt (2 Sam. viii. 13). Hence it frequently enters into the symbolical acts and language of the Bible.
Sand..... (Prov. xxvii. 3; Jer. v. 22.)	Chol..... ἄμμος.	Sand abounds in Palestine, and is used to symbolise abundance, insecurity, extensiveness, and weight.
Sulphur..... (Gen. xix. 24; Ps. xi. 6.)	Gophrith..... θεῖον.	Sulphur, or brimstone, is largely found in the vale of Siddim, in the mineral form; also in combination with pyrites and other rock formations.

Note.—The northern shore of the Dead Sea abounds in pebbles, succeeded by sand covered with incrustations of salt and a growth of lichens resembling seaweed at the first glance. This extends for about two miles. The shores of the Sea of Galilee are composed of minute shells, of very many varieties. There are many fossils to be found, as above mentioned; but for a detailed account of these, the student is referred to special treatises.

2. METALS OF THE BIBLE.

Name and Reference.	Hebrew and Greek.	Remarks.
Amber..... (Ezek. i. 4.)	Chashmal..... ἤλεκτρον.	Amber is a compound of copper and gold. It is now much used in Asia Minor and Syria. Chashmal in Ezekiel refers to the same metal as χαλκολίβανον in Rev. i. 15. The LXX. translate it by ἤλεκτρον (electrum), an alloy of four parts gold and one of silver. It is improbable that electrum is the metal intended, since the language of Ezekiel demands a metal of fiery red colour. Gesenius and others, from the etymology, identify it with the "burnished brass" (kalal) of Ezek. i. 7. Others consider it to be an accidentally discovered alloy with copper, resembling light-coloured brass or zinc. There is a white metal, greatly used for ornaments in the East, which is called copper.
Copper. } Brass. } (Ex. xxxviii. 8; 2 Kin. xxv. 13.)	Nechosheth..... χαλκός.	Copper was well known to the Israelites and Egyptians before the Exodus. The latter had, for a long time previous to that event, obtained it from Arabia. It was a native product of Palestine (Deut. viii. 9), and largely exported from Cyprus, whence its name. In most passages Nechosheth is now thought to be bronze, of which many ancient specimens have been found in Assyria. The Egyptians and Israelites also were familiar with tin (which see), and so they could have made that alloy of the two called bronze; but the Hebrew term is used indifferently for pure copper and its alloys. Being very hard and easily fusible, it is probable that bronze was the material of the "brazen sea," the Temple columns, sacrificial "forks," the brazen serpent, the "mirrors" of the Hebrew women, and the 250 censers of the followers of Korah.
Gold..... (1 Kin. ix. 28.)	(1) Zâhab..... χρυσίον.	There are six different words used for "gold" in the Old Testament, which show its use, and high estimation: (1) Zâhab is its earliest and most common name, referring to its colour. (2) Paz is the native metal, as found. (3) Bĕtsŏr is gold dust, and fragments of ore. (4) Châr̂ûtz is either "dug out," or has reference to its "lustre." (5) Sâgûr ("treasured"), and (6) Kĕthĕm ("concealed"), show its high value. No indication of native gold has been found in Palestine, to which it was imported from Spain (Tarshish = Tartessus), Ophir, Sheba, &c. Some modern Egyptologists maintain that gold was found in Egypt in ancient times, and believe that they have found some old worked-out mines of it beyond Assouan. Gold seems to have been first coined by the Jews in the time of Ezra, though it was used as a medium of exchange as early as Abraham's time, like money, but was weighed, not counted (Gen. xxiii. 16).
	(Job xxviii. 18.) (2) Paz. χρυσίον.
	(Job xxii. 24.) (3) Bĕtsĕr. πέτρα Σωφίρ.
	(Ps. lxviii. 13.) (4) Châr̂ûtz. χρυσίον.
	(Eccles. ii. 8.) (5) Sâgûr. περιουσιασμός.
	(Job xxviii. 19.) (6) Kĕthĕm. χρυσίον καθαρόν.
Iron and Steel. (Gen. iv. 22; Deut. viii. 9.)	Barzel..... σίδηρος.	In Europe, at least, the use of bronze preceded that of iron, because the ore of the latter was less likely to attract the attention of the miner, and, when found, it was more difficult to work than the former; but recent discoveries show the very ancient existence of iron in Assyria, as also in Egypt under the Pharaohs. It was found in considerable quantities in Syria, in Canaanite times, and tools were made of it, especially goads, mattocks, files, and coulters, as also were spears and swords (1 Sam. xiii. 21, 22). It is doubtful whether the "chariots of iron" of Jabin and the "iron bed" of Og are to be taken literally; probably a reference to their great strength is intended. "Steel," in our version, is an erroneous rendering for "brass;" but steel is supposed to be meant by "northern iron" (Jer. xv. 12), the most famous makers in old times being the Chalybes, near the Black Sea; and Damascus steel has had a very long celebrity. In Nahum ii. 3, "torches," the translation of Pelâdoth (rendered as "steel" both in Arabic and Syriac), is conjectured to be an error for "scythes" on the wheels of war-chariots.
Lead..... (Ex. xv. 10.)	Bedîl..... μόλιβος.	Lead was known to the Hebrews, and was anciently used to purify silver, and in later times as a plummet or weight, and also for soldering metals. It was found in the Sinaitic rocks before Moses' time, and was one of the wares brought to the Tyrian market.
Silver..... (Gen. xxiii. 15.)	Keseph..... ἀργύριον.	Abram was "rich in silver." It was largely imported into Egypt, and afterwards into Palestine, from Spain and Arabia. The Israelites possessed much gold and silver in the wilderness; of the former "the calf" was made. Silver was used for all kinds of ornaments for the person and house, and was very abundant in Solomon's time; and in the time of the Maccabees it was coined into money; hence keseph is a silver coin.

Name and Reference.	Hebrew and Greek.	Remarks.
Tin. (Num. xxxi. 22.)	'Ophereth. κασσιτερος.	Tin was early known to the Hebrews, being one of the imports of Egypt from Spain, through Phœnician merchants, who also obtained it (as Herodotus and Strabo tell us) from Britain. It was a great commodity in the fair at Tyre. It seems not to have ranked among precious metals, but to have been used as an alloy. In Zech. iv. 10 (marg.) mention is made of a tin levelling instrument, but generally this metal is treated as of little value.

XLIII. PRECIOUS STONES OF THE BIBLE.

Name and Reference.	Hebrew and Greek.	Remarks.
Adamant (Ezek. iii. 9.)	Shâmîr. πέτρα.	The corundum, the hard stone which when ground is known to us as "emery powder." It is once translated "diamond," and was used for engraving upon stone (e.g. the ten commandments, Jos. Ant. iii. 7, § 5).
Agate. (Ex. xxviii. 19.)	Shĕbô. ἀχατης.	Agate is said to derive its name from the river Achates, in Sicily. It is usually white, with a red or green grain like sea-weed. It is common in the East. In Scripture it is spoken of as a material for windows. The Arabic equivalent means red, whence some have thought the Oriental ruby to be meant.
Amethyst (Ex. xxviii. 19; Rev. xxi. 20.)	Achlâmah. ἀμέθυστος.	Blue transparent quartz; so called in Greek because thought to be a charm against drunkenness; but the Jews supposed it to bring pleasant dreams, whence its Hebrew name.
Beryl. (Gen. ii. 12; Ex. xxviii. 20.)	Shoham. βηρύλλιον.	By some shoham is thought to be the onyx; by others the "arrow-stone," the hardest substance for cutting known to the ancients; by others the aquamarine.
Carbuncle. (Ex. xxviii. 17; Rev. iv. 3.)	Bâreketh. σμάραγδος.	A mistranslation for "emerald" in Ex. xxviii: the only green stone "flashing light," which is the meaning of the Hebrew. It is probably the stone now called emerald, a beautiful green stone, and found in ancient times in Egypt and Ethiopia. In Rev. iv. 3 it is likened to a rainbow.
Chalcedony. (Rev. xxi. 19.)	χαλκηδών.	An emerald, found in the copper mines of Chalcedon, near Constantinople. It was a small, transparent, brilliant green stone.
Chrysolite. (Rev. xxi. 20.)	Tarshîsh (?). χρυσόλιθος.	The tarshish of Ex. xxviii. 20 is probably a Spanish stone, brought from Tartessus. Thought to be the cairngorm; but the chrysolite of Rev. xxi. 20 is no doubt the true Oriental topaz.
Chrysoprase. (Rev. xxi. 20.)	χρυσόπρασος.	The modern apple-green stone of that name is a variety of the chalcedony class, unknown to the ancients. Epiphanius so calls a kind of chrysolite. Some Indian beryls have a similar hue; and such a stone (of a deeper blue) is found among Egyptian gems.
Diamond. (Ex. xxviii. 18.)	Yahalom. (Omitted in LXX.)	The diamond could not have been used in the "breastplate," because the Hebrews knew of no means of engraving a name upon it. Yahalom is variously conjectured to be the onyx, or alabaster, or jasper.
Emerald. (Ex. xxviii. 18.)	Nophek. ἄνθραξ.	Properly the carbuncle: it is used for several bright red stones, including the garnet and ruby. In Ex. xxviii. it is wrongly interchanged with carbuncle.
Jacinth. Hyacinth. (Rev. xxi. 20.)	ὑάκινθος.	The true Oriental sapphire, a splendid blue stone, of brilliant transparency.
Jasper. (Ex. xxviii. 20.)	Yash'pheh. ἰασπις.	This was the Greek chalcedony, a dark green stone; the name includes many kinds of crystalline quartz. The jasper of Rev. iv. 3 is thought to be the dark green opaque chalcedony.
Ligure. (Ex. xxviii. 19.)	Leshem. λιγύριον.	Some take leshem to be the fossil belemnite, others amber, opal, or tourmaline; but it is most probably jacinth, which was highly esteemed in Egypt and Arabia.
Onyx. (Ex. xxviii. 20.)	Tarshish. ὀνύχιον.	The onyx is the banded carnelian, cut across the layers to exhibit two strips of black and white, brown and white, &c. Some regard it as the "shell" or composite formation of two different coloured strata, one underlying the other, on which cameos are cut. In our A.V. there is a confusion between tarshish and shoham, each being translated both "onyx" and "beryl." See Chrysolite.

Name and Reference.	Hebrew and Greek.	Remarks.
Sapphire. (Ex. xxviii. 18.)	Sappîr. σάπφειρος.	The Hebrew denotes that on which something is engraved or inscribed. According to the Targum, the Tables of the Law were made of it. This and the context in which it is used (Ex. xxiv. 10), "like the body of heaven," have given rise to the idea that lapis lazuli is meant.
Sardius. Sardine. (Ex. xxviii. 17.)	Odem. σάρδιος.	Our red carnelian, highly valued by the ancients, and extensively used for signets and intaglios. The finest came from Babylon; but many also from Arabia and Egypt. Found in considerable abundance at Sardis, in Lydia.
Sardonyx. (Rev. xxi. 19.)		Sardonyx consisted of a carnelian of three stripes of different colours, or three layers of spots. Its name is a compound of "sard" and "onyx," of which two carnelians it was thought to be the union.
Topaz. (Ex. xxviii. 17.)	Pitdah. τοπάζιον.	The topaz of the ancients is the chrysolite of the moderns, and vice versa. Job says, "the topaz of Cush" (xxviii. 19). The ancient topaz (chrysolite) was of a greenish-yellow colour, found in Egypt, and in great abundance in an island in the Red Sea, from which it derived its name.

LISTS OF PRECIOUS STONES GIVEN IN SCRIPTURE.

There are three important and almost identical lists of precious stones in the Bible. An interval of nine centuries occurs between the first and second, and of nearly seven between the second and third.

I. The description of the High Priest's breastplate.
II. The ornaments of the King of Tyre.
III. The figurative foundation stones of the heavenly city.

The first differs in the name and arrangement of some stones, as recorded by Moses in the Hebrew (when it was first made), from the description of it by the LXX. in their day, and also by Josephus; it had probably undergone restoration. These three are exhibited in order, with the modern names of the stones supposed to be meant.

XLIV. MUSIC AND MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS OF THE BIBLE.

Vocal Music occupies an important place in Scripture, both in religious worship (1 Chron. vi. 32), public rejoicings (1 Sam. xviii. 6), and social festivities (Is. v. 1; liv. 1). It is mentioned among the earliest expressions of joy (Ex. xv. 21) and was accompanied by dancing (2 Sam. vi. 16), and clapping of hands, especially in the "chorus" (Ps. xlvii. 1). For worship David chose a body of singers (1 Chron. xvi. 41); Jehoshaphat appointed a band of singers to praise God in front of his army (2 Chron. xx. 21). After the Captivity we find an equal number of male and female voices (Ezra ii. 65), who sang alternately. They formed a distinguished class, had a separate maintenance (Neh. xi. 23), had cities assigned to them (Neh. vii. 73), and chambers for those in attendance at the Temple (Ezek. xl. 44). From the dedication of some Psalms there would seem to have been a written musical notation, but no certain record of it is extant.

Musical Instruments are among the earliest recorded human inventions (Gen. iv. 21). In Scripture their use seems to be confined to religious worship and social festivities, except that the sound of the trumpet served as a battle-call. The earliest kinds were a tabret, a stringed instrument (incipient harp), cymbals, and pipe. From these germs all others are developments. As the Hebrew names were obscure, or unintelligible to the translators of our Bible, one general term expressing a well-known instrument often does duty for several species of the same genus; while the same Hebrew generic word is sometimes translated by different English specific ones, and in other cases the translation is erroneous. The following Table will exhibit all the names that occur, either in the English or Hebrew text.

1. STRINGED INSTRUMENTS.

English.	Hebrew and Greek.	Description.
Harp..... (Gen. iv. 21; xxxi. 27; 1 Sam. xvi. 23; Job xxi. 12; xxx. 31; Ps. cxxxvii. 2; Is. v. 12.)	(1) Kinnor..... κινύρα.	The most ancient kind, of Syrian origin. A triangular lyre, formed of two flat pieces of wood, whose ends are united with eight or nine animal strings stretched across them. It was held under the left arm, and played with the fingers or a plectrum.
(1 Sam. x. 5; Neh. xii. 27; Ps. xxxiii. 2; lvii. 8; lxxi. 22; lxxxi. 2; xcii. 2; cl. 3; Is. v. 12.)	(2) Nebel..... ψαλτήριον κιθάρα.	A later improvement, of Phœnician origin, having three wooden sides (one curved), and ten strings. It is translated "psaltery" (Ps. lvii. 8, A.V.), "lute" (loc. cit. P.B.), and "viol" (Is. v. 12; Amos v. 23; vi. 5). As it is always coupled with some other instrument, it is thought to have supplied the bass.
(Ps. xxxiii. 2; cxliv. 9.)	(3) 'Asor..... δεκάχορδον.	A smaller instrument, of Assyrian origin, only mentioned in conjunction with nebel, and accordingly thought to have supplied the treble. Translated "instrument of ten strings."
(Dan. iii. 5, 7.).....	(4) Kaithros..... κιθάρα.	A later invention, of Greek origin (Eng. cithern, guitar), imported into the East. It was a lyre, with four strings.
Lute.....	....	See Harp, Nebel.
Psaltery..... (1 Chron. xiii. 8; xv. 16; xxv. 1; 2 Chron. v. 12; xxix. 25; 2 Sam. vi. 5.)	(1) Nebel..... νάβλα	In Psalms, Kings, and Chronicles "psaltery" is the general translation of nebel, which see.
(Dan. iii. 5, 7).....	(2) Psanterin..... ψαλτήριον.	Psanterin (Eng. sawtry) is erroneously rendered "psaltery," from a verbal similarity. It should be "dulcimer," being an instrument formed of strings tightly stretched, by fixed pins and turning screws, over a rectangular sounding-board or box; and was played by hammers struck with the hand against the strings. It is not of the harp genus, but is the germ of the piano.
Sackbut..... (Dan. iii. 5, 7, &c.)	Sabbeca..... σαμβύκη.	A kind of harp, of Oriental origin, known to the Greeks as σάμβυξ (sambux); either very small but of high pit more probably, very large, with many strings, and of fu rich tone. It is wrongly translated "sackbut" instead of "harp."
Viol.. ..... (Isa. v. 12; xiv. 11, &c.)	Nebel..... ψαλτήριον.	See Harp, Nebel.

2. WIND INSTRUMENTS.

ENGLISH.	HEBREW AND GREEK.	DESCRIPTION.
CORNET..... (Ps. xcviii. 6; Dan. iii. 5, 7.)	(1) Keren..... σάλπιγξ.	See TRUMPET, Keren.
(1 Chron. xv. 28; 2 Chron. xv. 14; Ps. xcviii. 6; Hos. v. 8.)	(2) Shophar..... σωφέρ. σάλπιγξ. κερατίνη.	See TRUMPET, Shophar.
(2 Sam. vi. 5.).....	(3) Mena'an'im. αὐλοί.	Mena'an'im only occurs in this passage, and in conjunction with "cymbals," though translated "cornets" in the A.V., and "pipes" in the LXX. The Hebrew word is supposed to be derived from a root meaning "to sway to and fro," or "vibrate;" hence it is thought that the Vulgate rendering, sistra, is more correct, and that it was a rattle (very common in the East), consisting of an oval hoop with a handle, having crossbars of metal rods, on which loose rings are threaded, jingling when shaken, like the plates of a timbrel.
DULCIMER ..... (Dan. iii. 5, 10, 15.)	Sumphoniah.... συμφωνία.	It is only mentioned in this chapter, and wrongly rendered "dulcimer." From a comparison of its name with almost identical forms in Greek and Italian, it would seem to have been a kind of bagpipe, the use of which was known, from remote antiquity, in Persia, Egypt, and Phœnicia. It would have been better translated "sackbut," and the passage read thus: harp (sabbeca), dulcimer (psanterin), bagpipe (symphonia).
FLUTE ..... (Dan. iii. 5, 10, 15.)	Mashrokitha.... σῦριγξ.	It only occurs here, and its exact nature is doubtful. It is variously described as a "double flute," set of "Pan-pipes," and an "organ."
ORGAN ..... (Gen. iv. 21; Job xxi. 12; xxx. 31; Ps. cl. 4.)	Ugab..... ψαλτήριον. ψαλμός. ὄργανον.	The ugab of Gen. iv. can hardly be the same instrument as that of Ps. cl. The former was probably a set of reeds or "Pan-pipes," blown obliquely with the mouth; the latter a set of pipes inserted in a wind-box, and blown from it perpendicularly, either by bellows or by mouth. Such an instrument was known to the Egyptians, as was also the use of bellows.
PIPE ..... (1 Kin. i. 40; Is. v. 12; xxx. 29.)	(1) Chalil..... αὐλός.	(1) The most ancient form of this genus. An "oboe," made of reed, and played from a mouth-piece at one end; used for festival processions (Is. xxx. 29), national demonstrations (1 Kin. i. 40), holiday dances (Luke vii. 32), and funeral dirges (Matt. ix. 23). Some think the last were played on a "double pipe." It is rendered "instruments of music" in Amos vi. 5.
(Ex. xv. 20; Ps. xxx. 11; cl. 4; Jer. xxxi. 4, 13.)	(2) Machol ..... χοροί. χαρά.	(2) This is thought to have been a small flute, used with the tabret for "dancing" (by which word it is generally translated in the LXX. and A.V.).
(Ps. liii. & lxxxviii.)	(3) Machalath... μαελέθ.	(3) This title of two Psalms is thought to refer to the instruments accompanying the song, as it seems to have the same root as the two previous words. Gesenius translates it "lute."
TRUMPET ..... (Lev. xxiii. 24; Josh. vi. 5; 1 Chron. xxv. 5.)	(1) Keren..... κέρας. σάλπιγξ.	(1) The most ancient, formed of a ram's horn, though the Hebrew, jobel-keren, may mean "jubilee-trumpet." The word is Chaldaic; in Dan. iii. it is translated "cornet;" but the word seldom occurs, and only of a horn.
(Exod. xix. 16; Josh. vi. 4; Judg. iii. 27; vii. 16; 1 Sam. xiii. 3; Ps. xlvii. 5; lxxxi. 3; xcviii. 6; Joel ii. 1.)	(2) Shophar..... κερατίνη. σάλπιγξ.	(2) A very long horn, turned up at the extremity. The national trumpet for rallying the people, and rousing political or religious enthusiasm. It was the token that God was on their side; and it was probably only blown by one divinely commissioned. In 1 Chron. xv. 28, &c. it is rendered by "cornet," as also in Ps. xcviii. 6, where in the version of the Book of Common Prayer it is rendered "shawm." See CORNET, Mena'an'im.
(Numb. x. 2; 2 Kin. xi. 14; 1 Chron. xi. 8; 2 Chron. v. 12; Ps. xcviii. 6; Hos. v. 8.)	(3) Chatzozerah. σάλπιγξ.	(3) A straight trumpet of silver, terminating in a bell-mouth, made by God's directions to Moses, to call an assembly or proclaim the march. It was rather a sacred than a martial trumpet; and was blown to herald the approach of a king. It was used by official heralds, who were often followed by a band of Shophars (Ps. xcviii. 6). One hundred and twenty priests blew trumpets from the Temple height, to proclaim the induction of the ark into the Holy Place (2 Chron. v. 12) at Solomon's dedication.
SHAWM..... (Ps. xcviii. 6.)	.....	See TRUMPET, Shophar.

3. INSTRUMENTS OF PERCUSSION.

English.	Hebrew and Greek.	Description.
Bells ..... (Zech. xiv. 20.)	Metzilloth ..... χαλινος.	The LXX. translates the Hebrew by a word meaning "bridle." The Hebrew word has such an evident affinity to the two following words (translated "cymbals"), that it would seem to refer to metal cups suspended to bridies, either for ornament, or to tinkle.
Cymbals ..... (1 Chron. xv. 16, 19, 28; xvi. 5, 42; xxv. 6; 2 Chr. v. 13; xxix. 25; Ezra iii. 10.)	(1) Metziltaim .. κυμβαλα.	These words (1) and (2) do not mark different species; but the latter is generic, since it is used (Ps. cl. 5) with two differential adjectives, marking two species, e.g. (1) "loud;" (2) "high-sounding:" the former probably shaped like a soup-plate, with wide flat rim, and played by being strapped to the hands, and clashed together; the other, conical, cup-like, with thin edge, played by bringing down the one sharply on the other while held stationary, eliciting a high-pitched note. Cymbals are mentioned as accessories to music in sacred dances. David appointed Asaph chief of the cymbalists.
(Neh. xii. 27; 2 Sam. vi. 5; Ps. cl. 5.)	(2) Tziltzelim ... κυμβαλα.
(1 Sam. xviii. 6.) ...	(3) Shalishim.... κυμβαλα.	(3) The word only occurs once, and is translated "instruments of music," or "three-stringed instruments." They were probably "triangles," "sistra," or "rattles" with only three metal rods run through a bow with a handle, a very common Eastern instrument. See Cornet, Menaʿanʿim.
Tabret.[a] } Timbrel.[b] } ..... a (Gen. xxxi. 27; 1 Sam. x. 5; xviii. 6; Is. v. 12; xxiv. 8; xxx. 32; Jer. xxxi. 4; Ezek. xxviii. 13.) b (Ex. xv. 20; Jud. xi. 34; 2 Sam. vi. 5; Job xxi. 12; Ps. lxxxi. 2; cxlix. 3; cl. 4.)	(1) Toph..... τυμπανον. (ψαλτηριον, Job xxi. 12).	(1) The same Hebrew word (sing. and pl.) represents "tabret" and "timbrel," except in one place (2); therefore only one instrument is meant, viz. a simple tambourine, used with the cymbals, as an accompaniment to dancing and singing. There is no proof of cymbals or bells being attached to Jewish tabrets, and so constituting them "timbrels."
(Job xvii. 6.)	(2) Topheth ..... γελως.	(2) Tabrets were used to drown the cries of human victims sacrificed, or "passed through the fire," in the valley of Hinnom. Hence the furnace itself was called topheth, and in Job xvii. 6 the word means an "abomination" (as in Jer. xix. 12, 13), rather than "tabret."

2 letechs = 1 kor, or homer (Numb. xi. 32; Hos. iii. 2)	32	0	0

N.B.—The above Table will explain many texts in the Bible, especially those which are placed within brackets. Take, for instance, Is. v. 10: "Yea, ten acres of vineyard shall yield one bath, and the seed of an homer shall yield an ephah." This curse upon the covetous man was, that 10 acres of vines should produce only 7 gallons of wine, i.e. one acre should yield less than 3 quarts; and that 32 pecks of seed should only bring a crop of 3 pecks, or, in other words, that the harvest should produce a quantity equal to one-tenth only of the seed sown.

TIME.

JEWISH MONEY,

60 manehs = 1 kikkar (talent)	=	342	3	9	=	1,642	50
A gold shekel	=	1	16	6	=	8	76
A kikkar of gold	=	5,475	0	0	=	26,280	0

N.B.—A shekel would probably purchase nearly ten times as much as the same nominal amount will now. Remember that one Roman penny (8 1-2*d.*) was a good day's wages for a labourer.

The Hebrew maneh, according to 1 Kings x. 17, compared with 2 Chron. ix. 16, contained 100 shekels: though according to one interpretation of Ezek. xlv. 12, it contained 60, but more probably 50. The passage reads thus:—"Twenty shekels, five and twenty shekels, fifteen shekels shall be your maneh." This is variously interpreted, (1) 20 + 25 + 15 = 60. (2) 20, 25, 15, are different coins in gold, silver, and copper, bearing the same name. It is well to remark the meaning of these names: Shekel = simply weight: Bekah = split, i.e. the shekel divided into two: Gerah = a grain, as in our weights, a grain and a barley-corn, the original standard weight. Maneh = appointed, equivalent to sterling, a specific sum: Kikkar = a round mass of metal, i.e. a weight or coin. Hebrew names of weights and coins are not found in the New Testament: mna in Luke xix. 13 is Greek, though possibly identical with the Hebrew maneh.

ROMAN MONEY.

A "farthing," as = 4 quadrantes (Matt. x. 29) = nearly	0·5	= 1
A "penny," denarius = 16 ases (Matt. xxii. 19) = nearly	8·50	= 17

[The Roman sestertius = 2 1-2 ases, is not named in the Bible.]

N.B.—Here we learn that—

Naaman's offering to Elisha of 6,000 pieces (shekels) of gold amounted to more than £10,000 = 48,000 dollars.

The Debtor (Matt. xviii. 24) who had been forgiven 10,000 talents, i.e. £3,000,000 = 14,400,000 dollars, refused to forgive his fellowservant 100 pence, i.e. £3 10*s.* 10*d.* = 17 dollars.

Judas sold our Lord for 30 pieces of silver, i.e. £3 10*s.* 8*d.* = 16 dollars, 96 cents, the legal value of a slave, if he were killed by a beast.

Joseph was sold by his brethren for 20 pieces, i.e. £2 7*s.* = 11 dollars, 28 cents.

XLVI. A GLOSSARY OF ANTIQUITIES, CUSTOMS, &c.

ALEPH (A). The first letter of the Hebrew alphabet. Psalm cxix. is divided into twenty-two portions, according to the number of letters in the Hebrew alphabet, one of which is prefixed to each portion, the verses in the original beginning with the Hebrew letter which heads the portion in which they are classed.

ALPHA (A). The first letter of the Greek alphabet, of which Oměga (long O) is the last. Alpha and Omega are used to signify "the first and the last."

ALTAR. An erection of stones, usually set square, on which sacrifices were burnt. The first mentioned was that built by Abel. God commanded the Hebrew altar to be made of unhewn stones, and without steps. The worshippers of Baal built their altars on mountain-tops, hence "altars on high places" were an abomination to the Lord. In the Temple at Jerusalem, the altar of burnt sacrifice was outside the Holy Place, in the court in front of it: but the altar of incense stood in the centre of it.

ANATHEMA MARAN-ATHA. "Anathema" is a Greek word denoting a thing or person devoted to God, and, as all such were put to death, devoted to perdition, accursed. "Maran-atha" is a Syriac expression, meaning "The Lord cometh," or "is come." So the whole phrase means, "accursed (when) the Lord cometh;" or "Maran-atha" stands alone. Compare "The Lord is at hand," Phil. iv. 5.

ANGEL is from the Greek word for a "messenger," and is used sometimes of "ministering spirits" sent by God to men with a message, &c., as in the Old Testament, Gospels, and Acts; sometimes of men so sent, as in the Epistles and Book of Revelation.

APOSTLE is from the Greek, meaning "one who is sent." The word is used of Christ (subordinately of John the Baptist), then of "the twelve," and Paul, all of whom had "seen the Lord," the essential qualification (see Acts i. 21—26). It is also used of men who are called the messengers or "apostles" of the Church (2 Cor. viii. 23; Phil. ii. 25), and finally of men who were of mark among the Apostles (Rom. xvi. 7), either because so called, or because highly esteemed by them.

ARK. The ark was a covered chest, or box: the word is also used of a coffin. Three important arks are mentioned, viz.:—

1. Noah's ark, the material of which is unknown (Gopher being untranslated).

2. That in which the infant Moses was hidden by his mother was made of the papyrus of the Nile, covered over with pitch, rendering it water-tight. It is not an uncommon thing at this day to see an Egyptian mother twist papyrus leaves into such a wicker cradle, smear it with pitch, cover it with a lid of wicker work, place her infant in it, and swim across the Nile, pushing the ark with its infant passenger in front of her.

3. The Ark of the Covenant was a chest (not a boat), made of shittim wood overlaid with gold, on the lid of which was placed the golden "mercy-seat," over which two cherubim extended their wings. It was made to preserve the two tables of stone, on which "the Covenant" between God and His people was engraven. It was 2 1-2 cubits long, 1 1-2 broad, and 1 1-2 deep. Around its upper edge was a cornice of gold, and it was carried in front of the people on their march by the Levites, who bore it by means of two poles of shittim wood covered with gold, which were passed through two rings on each side of the ark. In it were also placed, by Divine command, an omer of manna, Aaron's rod which budded, and the books of the Law. On nearing Palestine, the priests carried it into the Jordan, whose stream stood still above them, but flowed on below, as long as the ark was in its bed. It was carried once daily round Jericho for six days, and seven times on the seventh, when the walls fell down. It accompanied the Israelites to Shechem, where the elders of each tribe laid their hands on it (after the cursings of the Law had been read from Mount Ebal, and the blessings from Gerizim), while all the Congregation swore to observe the Covenant. After the subjugation of the land, it was placed in the tabernacle at Shiloh, till the time of Eli, when it was taken into the camp, and captured by the Philistines, who carried it to Ashdod, placing it in the Temple of Dagon, whose image fell down before it and was broken. The plagues of emerods and mice compelled them to send it away at the end of seven months, and it was conveyed by two milch kine in a new cart into the field of Joshua at Beth-shemesh. From thence it was carried to the house of Abinadab at Kirjath-jearim, from whence David tried to fetch it; but on the way Uzzah was struck dead for touching it, and David, fearing to continue the removal, left it in the care of Obed-Edom the Gittite, where it remained three months. David then fetched it up to Mount Zion, and placed it in a tabernacle he had erected, where it continued till Solomon transferred it to his new Temple on Mount Moriah, placing it in the Holy of Holies. At the Captivity it is said to have been buried by Jeremiah the prophet. This ark is called in Hebrew Arôn, not (as 1. and 2.) Têbah.

ARMOUR was in use in Saul's time. Goliath wore a brazen helmet, a coat of mail (weighing from 80 to 100 lbs.), greaves of brass on his legs, and a brazen target between his shoulders. He had also a spear, a shield, and a sword. Ahab was likewise encased in armour.

ARMOUR-BEARER. An attendant upon a warrior of rank, who bore his heavy arms (spear, shield, quiver, &c.).

ARMS. The chief offensive weapons were a sword, spear, javelin, dart, bow and arrows, sling, and dagger. In David's army there was a company of slingers. (For defensive arms, see ARMOUR.)

ART. The Egyptians were skilled in painting and sculpture before the Israelites settled in their country; but a rigid interpretation of the Second Commandment excluded the Jews from the culture of these arts, though they excelled in music and poetry. But God Himself authorised some departure from this strict interpretation, by ordering the brazen serpent to be made, and the two cherubim of gold for the overshadowing of the mercy-seat in the tabernacle. He also sanctioned the representation of the cherubim worked upon the veil, and the figures of twelve brazen oxen, on which the molten sea rested in Solomon's Temple. Mural paintings and wood-panelling in the decoration of houses; ivory carving on the royal thrones, and for the embellishment of palaces; chasing and embossing of pillars, candelabra, and other ornaments in metal, for adornment of the Temple and houses; embroidery in needle work, the interweaving of patterns and figures in tissue of wool, linen, and silk (for which Damascus was famous); and skill in dyeing (as Tyrian purple, &c.), are other evidences of the cultivation of art among the Hebrews and their neighbours.

ARTIFICER. An artist, and skilled workman in designing and executing works of art, especially in the casting, carving, and chasing of metals, carving of wood, and plating it with gold, the setting of precious stones, and designing of embroidered fabrics.

ARTILLERY is used as a general term for all kinds of projectile weapons, e.g. bows and arrows, javelins, darts, &c.

ASCENT. This word is used of a covered way connecting the palace of Solomon with the Temple.

It was the private passage of the kings of Judah to the place assigned to them in the house of the Lord.

ASS. The ass was introduced into Palestine by Abraham, where its adaptability to the needs of a mountainous country made it the favourite medium of locomotion. The proverb, "A whip for a horse, a bridle for an ass," shows the estimation in which these two animals were respectively held by the Hebrews. The former was the symbol of the might and oppression of the Egyptian and Canaanite, the latter of the peace and rest of the promised seed; the former was associated with the worship of the sun, the latter was the sacred animal of the servant of Jehovah, protected by special enactments of the Mosaic Law. The large Babylonian ass was that on which kings, judges, and prophets rode: so that the expression, "Ye that ride on white asses," was equivalent to "Ye that sit in judgment" (Judg. v. 10). Hence, when Christ rode into Jerusalem on an ass, He was hailed as the predicted "Son of David." See Ridgway's "Sketches from the East," art. Bethany.

AVENGER. "Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed," was, and still is, the universal law of the Semitic race, and its execution primarily devolved upon the nearest kinsman of the deceased, but extended also to the whole tribe. It overruled every other obligation, even that of hospitality; hence perhaps Jael's murder of Sisera was, according to the views prevalent in that age, justifiable, if not obligatory. The Hebrew code restricted this law by providing "Cities of Refuge," to which the manslayer might flee in cases of "manslaughter," until he had been tried before the Congregation.

BAALISM was the worship of Natural Causes, practised by the Canaanite race, and distinguishing them from the Semites, who worshipped a Divine Primary Cause. The creed of the former was, that out of a self-existent chaotic deep sprang spontaneously the heavenly bodies and the earth; that, from the procreative power of the sun, acting upon the fertile womb of the earth, all visible matter was produced: hence, the significance of the abandonment by God of Ahab and his subjects to the sole influence of these natural elements, which resulted in the almost entire destruction of animal and vegetable life. The word "Baal" means Master, Owner, Possessor.

BAND of soldiers. This was the Roman cohort, the tenth part of a legion. It consisted nominally of six hundred men under the command of six centurions. A century really contained about sixty men. The "Italian band" was composed of soldiers from Italy; but the "Augustan band" consisted of native recruits, whose headquarters were Cæsarea Augusta (so called in honour of the Emperor Augustus, in whose reign it was rebuilt), which was the centre of the military organisation in Palestine.

BARNS. The ancient granaries of Palestine were caves in the limestone rock, entered by an aperture in the ground, carefully concealed by a stone covered with turf or brushwood, to hide the grain from Arab depredators (Judg. vi. 11). Such subterranean caves may still be seen in use on the hill of Jezreel. Barns existed in Egypt in Joseph's time, and in Palestine in that of our Saviour (Luke xii. 18).

BASIN. Many basins are mentioned in the Bible. 1. A hand-basin, used for ablutions; probably the same as that in which the blood of the Paschal lamb was received for sprinkling the door-posts. 2. A covered basin, or tankard, used in the Sanctuary for drink-offerings and libations. 3. The "omer," or common domestic vessel in Egypt for cooking purposes, containing half a peck. 4. A foot-basin, in which our Lord washed the disciples' feet; probably the same as that which is called "wash-pot" in the Psalms.

BASKET. Baskets were of various kinds and sizes:—1. The Cophinus, reticule, or hand-basket, usually carried on the arm by every Jew (cf. Juvenal, Sat. iii. l. 14). It was this basket which each Apostle filled with the superfluous fragments after the feeding of the five thousand. 2. A light, open, wicker basket, used for carrying food upon the head. Pharaoh's chief baker carried upon his head several tiers of these, containing white bread and baked meats. Such are commonly represented on Egyptian monuments. 3. A market-basket, such as that in which the lad was hawking the barley loaves and fishes. 4. A larger kind, or store-basket, in which were gathered the fragments after the feeding of the four thousand. 5. A larger and stronger kind, used for hoisting supplies up to the battlements of a besieged city. It was in one of these that Paul was lowered down from the walls of Damascus.

BATH. Bathing was a luxury, or rather a necessity, in the hot climate of Egypt, and also in Babylonia; but among the Hebrews it was practised mainly as a religious ceremonial, for removal of legal pollution, or as the symbol of repentance; from whence arose the Ordinance of Baptism, which was the prescribed form for the admission of women proselytes into covenant with God in the Jewish Church.

BED. The word bed, wherever used in the Bible, must be understood to refer only to the mattress on which people slept. It was much thinner than anything we know under that name, and rather resembled a very thick quilt, which was rolled up and taken away during the day, and only spread at night, in no fixed place, but at the will of the sleeper, generally in the open air, on the housetop, protected from the summer sun by boughs of trees. Such open-air bedrooms may be constantly seen in Palestine at the present day. It was one of these little mattresses which our Lord bade the paralytic man roll up and carry to his home. It is the universal custom for the natives of Syria and adjacent countries to sleep on mattresses, spread upon the floor, and covered by a thick counterpane, the under sheet being tacked to the former, and the upper to the latter; but the poorest classes lie upon loose straw, their covering being the camel's-hair coat worn by day. Bedsteads of any kind are wholly unknown.

BOOKS. Hebrew books were anciently written upon whole skins of parchment, and sometimes of leather; but in Egypt on papyrus. At first they were written in whole lines the breadth of the skin, but subsequently the parchment was cut into strips and divided into pages, but only written upon on one side. Each end was attached to a roller, with handles which were rolled inwards towards one another. The book commenced on the right side, and as each page was read, the reader rolled it round the roller in his right hand, at the same time unrolling a fresh page from that in his left. This was called "a roll of a book," and each book of the Bible formed a separate roll, which, when not in use, was carefully put away in a metal cylinder.

BOTTLE. Bottles were made of goatskin, which was stripped from the animal without cutting it open (after the head and feet had been removed). The inside of the skin was then dressed with tannin; the apertures at the legs and tail were firmly tied, and the skin filled with a decoction of bark and water until saturated. When used for wine, the skins were hung up in the houses, and so became smoked and shrivelled; hence the Psalmist's simile, "Like a bottle in the smoke." They were mended by stitching on a patch, and covering it over with pitch. They are still extensively manufactured at Hebron, and are used by the vendors of water and wine at Jerusalem, who carry them strapped to their backs, and draw the liquid from a tap fixed in one of the hind legs.

BRACELET. Bracelets for the arms and anklets for the legs were commonly worn by Eastern married women of all ranks, and were regarded as an eligible mode of investing money, since they could not be taken for the debts of the husband. They were usually cable-like rings, with an opening through which the wrist could be slipped; but the higher classes wore bracelets formed like broad bands, richly chased, jointed and closed by a pin passing through sockets. The anklets were similar in form, but frequently adorned with little bells. Both are still common in the East, with scarcely any variation in the patterns; they are of gold, silver, brass, and coloured glass, the last being extensively manufactured at Hebron. Those worn by the Hebrews were never jewelled; but men seem to have used bracelets as well as women (2 Sam. i. 10).

BREAD was mostly in the form of cakes, baked upon the hearth or in the oven; those eaten by the poor were made of barley-meal, with oil instead of butter. They were leavened or unleavened, and kneaded in a trough. Wheaten flour was common in Egypt, but a luxury in Palestine, and was one of the offerings in the Sanctuary. The Congregation were bound to offer fine flour for twelve cakes ("shewbread"), to be placed every Sabbath in two rows on the table of shewbread, which was to be eaten by the priests in the Holy Place.

BREASTPLATE. See PRECIOUS STONES, p. 106, 107.

BREECHES. These were among the official vestments of the high priest, but did not form a part of the ordinary dress of a Hebrew man. A Syrian of the present day wears a sort of petticoat, gathered in at the waist and ankles, two holes only being left at the bottom for the feet to pass through. The women wear cotton trousers, concealed by a sheet (Izzar) worn over the head, which envelopes the whole figure; but those of the Lebanons wear jackets and trousers of coloured stuff, without veils or other outer covering.

BRICKMAKING, as described in Exodus, may still be seen in Egypt. Outside Cairo are extensive brickfields, with vast hills composed of the débris of centuries, where bricks are daily made of a clay so little tenacious that it is mixed with short straw to bind it together. Ancient bricks have been found in that part of Egypt bearing the brand of Thothmes III, whose date is as far back as the Exodus.

BRIDE. A bride was bought from her father by the bridegroom, the negotiations being conducted by the friend of the latter, who was responsible for all the preliminaries up to the actual marriage. After her espousal she was placed under the charge of trustworthy matrons. She was subjected to a course of purification (Esth. ii. 12), preparatory to her marriage. At the latter she was attended by a company of virgins, who followed her to her new home, in the nocturnal procession, when escorted thither by the bridegroom. The Bride is regarded, in both Testaments, as a type of the Church. See MARRIAGE.

BRIDEGROOM. A preparation, with fasting, before marriage, was required of every Jewish bridegroom, who was clothed at the ceremony in a "robe of righteousness." (See COAT and VESTMENT.) He was a type of Christ.

BURIAL of the dead was practised by the Hebrews from the earliest times, and three of their most ancient cemeteries still remain, viz. Machpelah, Shechem, and the Valley of Jehoshaphat. Cremation was only used for the bodies of persons who were denied religious burial; "the burning for the dead" was that of sweet perfumes, as a mark of especial honour, at the funeral of kings and other distinguished persons. Embalming was common in Egypt in the time of Joseph, from whence the Israelites derived the custom of winding the bodies of their dead in fine linen cloths, with sweet spices. Burial was always extra-mural, and the dead were carried to the grave on biers, accompanied by the wailing of their friends, especially of women. The days of mourning were thirty. Burial was refused to criminals; and the "burial of an ass" was exposure to birds and beasts of prey. Tombs were usually in caves in the limestone rock, and were closed by a stone at the ends, or on the surface; the mouth of some is guarded by a complication of stones, each "sealing" the other. Around Jerusalem are large caves, containing many chambers or vaults for bodies, resembling the Roman catacombs; there are likewise some in the rocks around the Church of the Holy Sepulchre.

BUTLER, or cup-bearer, held an honourable office in royal households, since the king's life was in his hand, he being held responsible for the purity of the liquor and its freedom from poison. Nehemiah faithfully discharged this duty to the Persian king, to whom his race was in humiliating slavery.

BUTTER. The Hebrews were ignorant of the art of churning butter; but they made a kind of clotted cream by subjecting new milk to fermentation, which imparted to it a pleasant acid flavour somewhat resembling that of lemon cream. Even now churned butter is never used by native Syrians, but this clotted cream, called Lebban, continues to be universally consumed, as one of the most refreshing necessaries of daily life. This was doubtless the "butter in a lordly dish" which Jael brought to Sisera, when she had "opened a bottle of milk."

CAMEL'S HAIR. Raiment of camel's hair was not a skin, but a coat of cloth, woven from the hair of the camel. Such is the ordinary outer garment of the Bedawin Arab of to-day. The present common dress of a shepherd on the hills of Judæa is a loose coat of camel's hair, in broad stripes of black and white, girt around the loins with a leathern belt. It has narrow sleeves, does not come below the knee, and seems to be his only garment except short drawers. This was, doubtless, the raiment of John the Baptist.

CANDLE was an earthenware lamp, shaped like a butter-boat partially covered over, in which oil was burnt, the wick protruding through a lip or spout. It was set on a pedestal of the same ware; and was either united to this "candlestick" by a handle, or the two were moulded in one piece. The woman seeking her lost piece of silver would have this candlestick in one hand, and a short hand-broom in the other, as she stooped and swept the house.

CHAMBER is the general term for any room in a house. It is only in the houses of kings and nobles that it means a "bed-room," since the majority of houses were only one story high. The "upper chamber," or "upper room," was an apartment on the highest story, set apart exclusively for religious purposes, in which daily family or private prayers were said, circumcision and the rite of matrimony performed, the passover eaten, and the dead laid out, &c. It contained only one window, always turned towards the Temple at Jerusalem. With the poor, the flat roof of the house served this purpose.

CHARGER. A large, round, deep dish, called in Deborah's Song, "a lordly dish."

CLOTH was woven, dyed, and fulled with soap, by the Hebrews, and was made from flax, silk, and wool. The sailcloth, made from the wool of Cilician sheep, was a great article of commerce in the Mediterranean, and was largely used as a covering for tents in Syria. Its manufacture was the trade of Paul, Aquila, and Priscilla. The Tyrian purple dye (sold by Lydia) was unequalled.

COALS. There is no coal in Palestine, though lignite is found. A "fire of coals" most probably means a charcoal fire.

COAT was the square garment of fine lamb's wool ordered by the Law to be worn by every male Israelite, to remind him of his duties; there was a hole in the centre, for the head to go through, and the garment hung down before and behind. At each corner were fringes, symbolising the enactments of the Law, and a hem of blue, representing the holiness of God's people. It was his coat by day, his covering by night, and his shroud in the grave; if pledged, or seized by a creditor, it must be returned at sun-down. This was the seamless coat of Jesus, whose hem the woman with the issue touched. See Ridgway's "Sketches from the East," art. Childhood of Jesus.

CONDUIT. To remedy the deficiency in the supply of water at Jerusalem Solomon dug reservoirs, which still remain, in the hill country of Judæa, from whence he conducted the water to the pools of Gihon, on the sides of Mount Zion. A conduit, hewn out of the solid rock, 1,750 feet in length, unites the Pool of Siloam (now called the Virgin's Fountain) with Bethesda, in which an ancient inscription has recently been discovered.

CORN. Rubbing corn in the hands on the Sabbath, and even walking on ripe grass, which might tread out the seed, was forbidden by the precepts of the Elders, as equivalent to threshing.

CORN (treading out). In Syria and Asia Minor, at the present day, grain is trodden out of the ear. The unthreshed wheat is laid upon the ground in a circle, and a yoke of oxen driven round and round over it, dragging after them a heavy log of wood, on the under surface of which are inserted rows of thin flint stones, about two inches apart, and projecting half an inch from the surface. On this the driver stands, or sometimes sits in a chair.

COUCH was the framework on which, in the houses of the rich, mattresses were spread to form divans for use by day.

CRUCIFIXION was unknown to the Jews, until introduced by the Romans, who only used it for the punishment of slaves and the lowest malefactors.

CUSTOM (the receipt of). The dues or taxes paid on persons and goods transported across the Sea of Galilee.

DANCING was anciently practised as a religious ceremonial (e.g. Miriam, David, the Shilonites, &c.); but, in later times, dancing girls formed a part of the amusements provided for guests at feasts (e.g. Herodias' daughter).

DAYSMAN. One who fixes "a day" for hearing and arbitrating on some dispute. Compare 1 Cor. iv. 3, where "man's judgment" is in the Greek "man's day."

DEPUTY. The governor, or vicegerent, deputed by the Roman Emperor or Senate to represent them in their distant provinces. Disturbed districts were immediately under the Emperor, whose deputy was called pro-prætor, a military officer in command of an army of occupation; while peaceful ones were under the Senate, whose deputy was a pro-consul, a civilian.

ELDERS. A body of men, selected for wisdom and experience, to administer justice in their respective localities. Moses chose six from each tribe to aid him in the government of the Israelites. A similar body, called the Sanhedrin, was the executive and deliberative council after the Captivity.

FARTHING is (1) the Roman as (Matt. x. 29, Luke xii. 6)=about one halfpenny English; (2) the Roman quadrans (Matt. v. 26, Mark xii. 42), which was the fourth part of an as.

FOWLS. "Fatted fowl" (probably turkeys) formed part of the delicacies of Solomon's table. The cock, hen, and chickens are mentioned in the New Testament, but never in the Old. They were unknown in Palestine till after the Captivity.

GABBATHA. The Roman "pavement" of the courtyard in front of Herod's "Judgment Hall" (from which the name arose) may now be seen in the cellars under the Convent of the Sisters of Zion.

GALL was given to persons under crucifixion, to deaden the pain.

GARDEN. That part of Jerusalem where the Church of the Holy Sepulchre stands was outside the city when it was destroyed by Titus. He encamped on that side, and took possession of "the gardens," which covered this quarter, outside the Gennath (or Garden) Gate, where were the tombs of high priests and other illustrious men. The foundations of walls still mark the city boundary. The Garden of Gethsemane, with its ancient olive-trees, is still preserved at the foot of Mount Olivet. The "garden house" (2 Kings ix. 27) was the town of En-gannim (now Jenin).

GARMENTS. The garments of Syrian men in the present day differ but little from those worn in the time of Moses. The chief are a coarse linen shirt, linen drawers, loose pantaloons (see BREECHES) with a girdle to sustain them, an inner vest buttoned to the throat, a long loose robe with a leathern girdle, an embroidered cloth or velvet jacket, a kaffieh or silk handkerchief for the head (secured by a cord), hose and sandals. Besides these, a long loose robe with short sleeves was worn in full dress (instead of the jacket or girded robe), and the aba, a coarse cloak of goat's or camel's hair, very large so as to form a covering by night as well as by day; it was the former our Lord laid aside when He washed the disciples' feet, and the latter with which Elijah smote the waters of Jordan. Women's dress varied according to their estate in life (e.g. maid, wife, or widow). It differed from the men's principally in the veil and cap, fitting close to the head and concealing the hair, and profusely covered with gold and silver ornaments and with charms. The list of female clothing in Is. iii. 18—23, is scarcely intelligible.

GATE. The gate of a city was the place of public assembly, for business, judgment, and legislation. It was the exchange, court-house, and council chamber of modern times. Over the gate at Mahanaim was a chapel, where David mourned for Absalom; at the gate of Hebron Abraham bought Machpelah; at that of Shechem the covenant of intermarriage was made with Jacob and his sons; and at Bethlehem, Boaz made his contract of marriage with Ruth.

GROVE is often a mistranslation for the wooden image of Ashtaroth, or Astarte, the moon, or chief female goddess of Baalism.

HELL is from a root meaning "to hide," so that the original sense is "the hidden or unseen place" (Skeat). It serves as the translation of two words, viz. 1. Sheôl (Heb.), or Hades (Gr.), the abode of departed spirits, as in the Apostles' Creed. 2. Geenna (Greek form of Heb. Gê-hinnôm), the Valley of Hinnom, the dark gorge on the west side of Jerusalem, where was the furnace (Topheth) in which idolaters offered human sacrifices, and "made their children to pass through the fire to Moloch;" and in which persons convicted of aggravated wilful murder were burnt to death; hence it was synonymous with a place of torment—"hell-fire" (Matt. v. 22).

HOSPITALITY. The exercise of hospitality was incumbent on every Hebrew, but generally devolved upon the chief of a tribe or head of a city, who was bound to provide the wayfarer, free of expense, with food and lodging for himself and his beast, and water for his feet. See INN.

HOUSES generally were only of one story, but in towns the rich built theirs of two or three stories, of which the ground-floor contained the day-rooms, the first floor the bed-rooms, the third a devotional room or upper chamber. The roof was formed of rafters, across which was laid a wattling of branches or brushwood, covered over with mud or mortar, in which tiles were embedded for throwing off the rain. This roof was reached by an outer staircase, and an entrance into the upper room (as in the case of the man with the palsy at Capernaum) could be easily effected by removing the tiles and mortar, and pushing aside a few of the sticks. These larger houses were frequently built in a quadrangle, approached by gates with a wicket-door; the courtyard had its fountain and sheds for the cattle, while the roof was the garden, playground, and drying-ground, and therefore ordered by the Mosaic Law to be fenced in with a battlement.

HYMN. The hymn sung by our Lord and His Apostles after the Last Supper was the "Great Paschal Hallel," or "Hymn of Praise," consisting of Pss. cxiii.—cxviii.

INN, or Khan ("a night's rest"), was originally a plot of ground, near a spring or well, allotted for the use of travellers as a camping ground. This was often secured by a wall or fence. In later times, some wealthy prince or benefactor raised the wall, built a few arches, united them to the wall by a roof, closed them with doors, and separated them by partitions, thus providing a separate room for each party; while the cattle were littered in the central open space, or in sheds abutting on the outside wall, or in natural caves around it. Such was "the inn" at Bethlehem. See Ridgway's "Sketches from the East," art. Bethlehem.

JEWELS. Precious stones are nowhere mentioned in the Bible as personal ornaments, except in connexion with religious worship, but "jewels of gold and silver" were so worn, the chief of which were bracelets, anklets, chains, ear-rings, brooches, and medallions on the forehead. All these were worn by women; but men wore bracelets, official gold chains, and signet-rings. The Ishmaelites wore ear-rings; and the Amalekites adorned the necks of their camels with gold chains.

JOT, or Yod, the smallest letter of the Hebrew alphabet.

JUDGE. In the time of anarchy after Joshua's death, a "judge" was a religious and political patriot, inspired with zeal to head a revolution against tyrannical oppression, or to resist threatened invasion. He rallied round him a voluntary army, and was temporarily invested with supreme power, which he laid down when the emergency was over; but the exercise of this power gradually became more permanent, until it was terminated only by death. It was ultimately divided between a civil and a military officer, the former being the high priest, who added to his sacerdotal duties judicial functions also. Thus the way was paved for a permanent monarchy. "The judge" in the New Testament was in Jerusalem a member of the Sanhedrin, in provincial towns one of the "rulers of the Synagogue," who combined the regulation of Divine worship with the functions of a magistrate. "The officer" was his attendant in both capacities; the Chazzan "the minister" (or verger) of the Synagogue and policeman of the court of justice.

KIN. The distinctions of kindred were not accurately defined, and there was a paucity of words to express them; thus all collateral relations were called "brothers" or "sisters," those of further degree were "cousins," and descendants in the direct line, however remote, were "sons" or "daughters."

LANDMARKS were usually a single block or small pile of stones laid upon the ground, and are still so in Palestine; hence the severe curse upon their removal. In Egypt, the land had to be re-measured and allotted after each inundation of the Nile.

LANTERNS are still commonly used in Jerusalem; any one going through the streets at night without a light is liable to be arrested as a dangerous character. A servant holds the lantern close to the ground, immediately in front of his master's feet—a practice rendered necessary by the entire absence of pavement, and by the numerous obstructions in the streets of Eastern cities; cp. "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path" (Ps. cxix. 105).

LEATHERN GIRDLE. Worn round the loins, over a loose coat, woven in camel's hair or wool, and reaching to the knee; it is still part of the ordinary dress of a shepherd on the Judæan hills.

LINEN CLOTH was the cere-cloth, imbued with unguents and spices, in which a dead body was wrapped as a partial embalmment, where the poverty of the relatives precluded them from undertaking the complete process.

LOCUSTS. On the 1st and 2nd of June, 1881, in the vicinity of Ephesus, the writer saw the whole heavens black with the flight of millions of locusts, brought up by the East wind, and witnessed the consternation of the inhabitants at the certain destruction of their corn crops, already ripe for harvest. It was obvious that no human power could avail against such an invasion.

MANTLE. See GARMENTS.

MARRIAGE. This ceremony was performed in the "upper room" of private houses. The betrothed pair stood under a canopy, the bride being veiled, both wearing crowns, which were several times exchanged during the ceremony. The officiating minister was not a priest, nor necessarily a rabbi, but an elder, who, standing behind the canopy holding a cup of blessing, invoked a benediction on the assembly. He then gave a cup of wine to the betrothed, who pledged one another, the bridegroom draining his cup, dashing it to the ground, crushing it with his heel, and swearing fidelity until its powdered fragments should be re-united. The marriage contract was next read, and attested by each person present drinking of a cup of wine. The friends next walked round the canopy, chanting psalms and showering rice upon the couple. The ceremony was concluded by the elder invoking the seven blessings upon them, drinking the benedictory cup, and passing it round the assembly. It was for this cup that our Saviour supplied the wine at Cana. After dark, the bridegroom led the bride homewards, attended by the friends of each, while others joined the procession on its way, bearing hymeneal lamps in token of respect. Arrived at the bridegroom's house all were invited to a feast, which by the rich was repeated for seven nights, the festivities being prolonged to a late hour. See Ridgway's "Sketches from the East," art. Cana.

MEASURE. In Eastern markets, it is very common to see the seller press down the grain into the measure, then pile it up into a pyramid, until it trickles down the sides, when he pours it into the lap (or "bosom") of the flowing garment of the buyer.

MILK. The mountainous nature of Palestine seems ill adapted for the pasturage of cows, and the milk with which it "flowed" must have been chiefly the product of goats. The latter are frequently mentioned in Scripture, but cows seldom, and mainly in connexion with the plains of Philistia, Esdraëlon, &c. "Butter of kine," from its peculiar designation, would seem to have been a luxury, while the undulating downs would produce goats' milk in abundance, far beyond what could be expected from such a limited area. See BUTTER.

MILL was not a building, but a pair of millstones of granite or basalt, placed one upon the other, the lower one being larger and stationary, and the upper loose, with a hole in its centre into which the corn was put, and it was turned briskly round by two wooden handles, fixed opposite to each other in its upper surface near the circumference. A woman seated on the ground, on each side of it, moved a handle in the same direction, each passing it on to the other, and so whirling the stone round. The "nether millstone" became a proverb for weight and hardness. The Mosaic Law forbade the seizure of millstones for debt.

MITE (Gr. lepton, Mark xii. 42, Luke xii. 59. xxi. 2), from the same root as minute, anything very small. "Sche cast two mynutis, that is, a ferthing" (Wycliffe). Very small coins, known as "beggars' money," not current in the market (being scarcely of estimable value), may still be seen used as alms in Asia Minor.

MONEY. The coins mentioned in the Bible mark the supreme power predominant at the time; thus, we have the Hebrew talent, shekel, maneh; the Persian daric; the Greek drachm and stater; and, lastly, the Roman denarius, as, and quadrans. In our Lord's time these were all current in the market, but the offerings in the Temple had to be made in the Hebrew coinage, which was circulated in Palestine alone, where, however, Roman money was found to be the more convenient medium of traffic. Hence, money-changers became a necessity, and during the great festivals they removed from their shops in the city to stalls within the sacred precincts, where worshippers from all parts thronged to make their offerings.

MOTE. A small particle, like those which are brought to light by a ray of sunshine (Eastwood and Wright, "Bible Word-Book").

NECROMANCER. One who professes to foretell the future by consulting the spirits of the dead, as the witch of Endor.

NETHINIMS were the descendants of those Gibeonites whom Joshua reduced to slavery, making them hewers of wood and drawers of water for the Sanctuary (Josh. ix. 27). They accompanied the Jews to and from captivity, and lived with the other servants of the Temple on Ophel, a small hill south of Moriah.

OBEISANCE was the salutation of an inferior to a superior. It consisted of bowing the head and body forward, with the hands extended, and their palms turned downwards. It varied from a slight inclination to complete prostration, with the forehead and hands in the dust, according to the rank of the person saluted.

OBSERVER OF TIMES was one who foretold events, or chances, by observing the motions of the clouds.

OMEGA. The last letter of the Greek alphabet, used, with Alpha, to express the eternal existence of the Son of God.

OMER is an untranslated Egyptian word, being the name of the most common domestic bowl, or kit, used by the Fellahs of Egypt for a vast variety of household purposes, and adopted from them by the Hebrews. It held about half a peck.

ORACLES were the responses gained by divination. They were supposed to be supernatural revelations through divinely-inspired persons. Such were the oracles of Delphi, &c., and of the girl at Philippi. In Egypt, divination was practised by means of cups (Cylicomanteia). Among the Hebrews, God allowed enquiry to be made of Him through Urim and Thummim (q.v.), and prophets, and gave oracular responses, even in temporal matters (e.g. military campaigns, &c.). The revelations made to Moses in the Law are called "the Divine oracles:" hence the word is also used for the place where a prayer is offered for advice, and an answer given; "toward Thy holy oracle" (Psalm xxviii. 2).

OVENS are still, in the East, rough erections of brick or stone, detached from houses. In Palestine, they are often hollowed out in the rock, with chimneys of mud, and the fuel consists mainly of dried weeds, stubble, and dung baked in the sun.

PENNY. The Roman denarius, value about 8 1-2*d*. In our Lord's time it would seem to have been a fair day's wage for a labourer in a vineyard.

PHYLACTERIES. The Hebrews were commanded to have the enactments of the Law on their hands and as frontlets between their eyes, and to write them on the door-posts of their houses, that they might always see their duty before them to guide and restrain their actions (Deut. vi. 9). They were familiar with the Egyptian custom of wearing amulets on the forehead, and of inscribing mottoes on the walls of their houses. They therefore wrote the summary of the Moral Law (Deut. v. 6, 21) on three strips of parchment; two of these they rolled up, and placed in two small cylinders or cups of skin or leather about the size of a wine-cork, binding one on the forehead, the other on the centre of the back of the right hand with leathern straps, that of the latter encircling the forefinger and palm, each thrice, and the fore-arm nine times, in three triplets, so that each formed the representation of the first letter of Shaddai ("The Almighty"). These are called Phylacteries, and are still worn by Israelites in their houses. The Pharisees added other enactments, forming three little square volumes, which they bound together upon their persons. The third parchment was placed in a case of wood or metal, called a Mezuzeh, and affixed to the posts of their outer door and gates. It had a small aperture in front, through which was seen the word Shaddai.

PILLOWS were wooden stands supporting a crescent-shaped frame thickly padded, which fitted into the arm-pits, sustaining the body, when seated upon a divan, or on the ground with the legs tucked under it, the usual posture of an Eastern man or woman when in repose.

PINS were made principally of wood, and were often the spikes of the nubk thorn (about two inches long), cut with a small portion of the branch to form a head. The wealthy used ivory pins, great numbers of which have been found at Pompeii.

PLOUGHING. The plough was, and still is, a rough instrument made of a few stakes, easily carried to and from the field on the shoulder of the labourer. It had a coulter and ploughshare, but merely scratched a small groove in the surface of the soil, which could only be broken up when softened by rain. Hence, ploughing in winter and spring is very common, and, for mutual protection, the ploughers work in companies, often to the number of twelve ploughs with their respective yokes of oxen, one sower being sufficient to follow the whole. The harrow is little used. Progress is slow; corn may be seen in all stages of growth, and seed-sowing at the same time, in the same field.

POLITARCHS (Acts xvii. 6). This word, rendered literally "rulers of the city," has been found, from an inscription still legible on one of the gates of Thessalonica, to have been the official title of its chief magistrates.

POOLS. Jerusalem, being on the top of a mountain, had an insufficient water supply. One never-failing spring, issuing from Mount Moriah, was collected in the pool of Siloam, and its overflow in the well of Joab. At Enrogel, besides these, were the two pools of Gihon on the western shoulder of Zion; that of Hezekiah, by the Jaffa Gate; that of Bethesda, and that now called Birket Serai, near St. Stephen's Gate, fed from a spring or reservoir under Pilate's house and the adjoining barracks. The houses of the wealthy had, and still have, extensive cisterns for storing rain-water. See CONDUIT.

PORTERS were "the door-keepers" and police of the Temple. They lived on the adjoining Mount Ophel. They were divided into companies, under the command of the "Captain of the Temple," and one division was always on duty, keeping guard day and night. It took twenty of them to shut the great brazen gates (Acts xxi. 30).

POTTAGE, made of red lentiles boiled in water, is a savoury and highly nutritious dish, of which the Arabs at the present day are especially fond.

POTTERS, turning the tables with their feet, and moulding with their hands the clay as it spins round upon the table, are constantly to be seen in the East. In Egyptian literature, the potter is used to illustrate the work of the Supreme Being in the creation of man.

PRAYER. The ordinary attitude of prayer was standing, with the arms stretched forward, the hands extended with the palms upwards, and the face raised towards heaven. It was in this posture that Moses was sustained all day by Aaron and Hur during the battle at Rephidim. The next was one of adoration, or "worship," the head bent forward, the body stooping, the hands resting on the knees. Penitential prayer was made kneeling, with the body inclined forward or prostrate, the forehead and hands resting on the ground.

PRESBYTERS (see ELDERS, of which it is the Greek form) was the general name given to those appointed to exercise authority in a community. They were chosen for their mature age, experience, and wisdom; sometimes elected by the tribes, sometimes selected by higher powers. They interpreted the Law, decided doctrine, judged causes, exercised discipline, but discharged no priestly function.

PRIEST. In patriarchal times, the head of each family was its priest, and the chief of the tribe its high priest. Under the Mosaic dispensation, the family of Aaron and their descendants were set apart by God to discharge all the sacerdotal functions of the whole nation. These, being prospective of Christ the true High Priest, were concentrated in Him; and He called to Him "twelve disciples," whom He named Apostles, and afterwards other seventy also, whom He sent two and two before Him. Before His ascension He breathed on the former, saying, "Receive ye the Holy Ghost;" "As My Father hath sent Me, even so send I you;" "Go ye, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost."

PROPERTY, by Hebrew Law, could not pass out of the family; if mortgaged or seized by creditors, it reverted to the owner in the following year of jubilee. The earliest recorded conveyance of property to a purchaser and his heirs is that of the field of Machpelah by Ephron to Abraham.

PROPHET is one who speaks for another. A prophet of the Lord is a term applicable to one who predicts, forewarns, proclaims glad tidings, instructs, or exhorts, as a messenger of the Lord. In Scripture it is used in all these senses.

PUBLICANS were native Jews, who farmed the taxes from the Roman knights, who in turn farmed them from the Imperial treasury. The taxes were annually let to the highest bidder, who paid each instalment in advance, recouping himself by collecting the taxes from the people. As many of these arose from an ad valorem duty on produce, stock, and land, of which the publican was also the assessor, his opportunities for extortion were unlimited: and as the tax was the result of subjection, its collector was regarded as a political renegade and a social outcast.

PURIFICATION was not so much a cleansing of the flesh from dirt, as a ceremonial washing from the typical pollution imparted to a sanctified people by contact with heathens or sinners, or their symbols. Cups, pots, plates, food bought in the market, were washed before use, lest a heathen or a sinner might have touched them. So every impure act virtually excluded the participator from the presence of the all-pure God, and needed to be expiated by a fresh baptism or sacrifice.

PURSE. A leathern bag attached to the girdle.

QUATERNION. A Roman guard of four soldiers, detailed to act as sentries over a prisoner. In the strictest custody (as in the case of Peter), each hand of the prisoner was handcuffed to a separate soldier, inside the cell, while the other two kept sentry outside the door. These four were relieved every three hours day and night, so that there were four quaternions required for one day's service, and four for the night watches. To the quaternion charged with Christ's crucifixion His clothes fell as a perquisite.

QUICKSANDS. The greater and lesser Syrtis, near Tunis, on the N.E. coast of Africa.

REFINING-POT. The crucible, in which gold was melted to a white heat, and the impurities skimmed off, so that only the purest metal remained.

RUDDERS. Ancient vessels were steered by two oars or paddles, passed through the vessel on each side of the stern. When the vessel was stationary, they were lashed to its side by "bands," which were also used to secure and steady the paddle when in use.

SALUTATIONS between one wayfarer and another, and to labourers in the field (such as "Peace be to you!" "The Lord prosper you!" "We wish you good luck," &c.), are in daily use in Syria. A nearer greeting, answering to our shaking hands, consists in placing the right hand upon the forehead, then upon the mouth, next upon the heart, lastly extending it towards the person greeted, symbolising, "With my head I worship, with my lips I honour, with my heart I love thee."

SANCTUARY. See TABERNACLE.

SHECHINAH. "A term used by the later Jews, to express the visible majesty of the Divine Presence, especially when resting, or dwelling between the Cherubim on the mercy-seat in the Tabernacle and in the temple of Solomon" (Smith's "Dictionary of the Bible").

SHIPS. Alexandrian corn ships carried one large square sail, which was lowered upon the deck. In a storm the strain upon the hull was very great; the planks were liable to start, and the ship to founder; to avoid which they passed stout cables under the keel, drawing them tight to each gunwale by grappling irons; they then turned her head to the wind, hoisted a storm-sail for steering, and drifted. "Ships of Tarshish" were large Phœnician trading vessels, plying between Tyre and Tartessus in Spain. They passed the Straits of Gibraltar, crossed the Bay of Biscay to Britain, and doubled the Cape of Good Hope. Hence they gave their name to all merchantmen.

SHOE. Shoes were only soles strapped under the foot. To unloose their clasp (or latchet), bring them, or carry them away, was the office of the lowest slave. "To pluck off the shoe" was the striking of a contract, like signing and sealing a document. To kick, or cast off, one's shoe over a person, was the symbol of his greatest humiliation, like treading on his neck; while to wash the feet of another was an act of abject servility (e.g. "Moab is my washpot"). To shake off the dust from the shoe was an imprecation of a curse upon individuals, a declaration of war against nations.

SOAP. Both Borith and Natron are translated "soap" in the A.V.; the former was some cleansing preparation of a vegetable alkali (the Kali of the desert); the latter was the product of Egypt, i.e. nitre. Extensive hills of alkali refuse are still seen at Ramleh, Gaza, Jerusalem, Edlip, &c. Those at the last-named place must, from their vast extent, have been the accumulation of very many centuries. Near to each of these places were large olive groves, from whence the fruit bearing the oil was obtained. At this day there are many wealthy soap manufacturers, to whom most of the olive groves in Central Palestine are mortgaged. (Cp. Parable of the Unjust Steward.) The manufacture of soap is still very extensively carried on in all parts of Syria.

STAFF was the long walking-stick, like an alpen-stock, so necessary to the pedestrian in a mountainous country. Its metaphorical use in Scripture is very frequent.

TABERNACLE. An oblong tent, with a wooden framework covered with cloth and skins, made by God's order as a moveable place of worship in the wilderness. It was set up, taken down, and carried by the Levites; when stationary, the Pillar of Cloud rested on it. It consisted of a small inner room, the "Holy of Holies," containing nothing but the ark with its mercy-seat, entered only on the Day of Atonement by the high priest alone; and a larger room, the "Holy Place, or Sanctuary" (in which were the altar of incense, table of shewbread, and golden candlestick), used for the daily service. These two were separated by a thick veil. When settled in Canaan Joshua set up the tabernacle at Shiloh, where residences for the priests were added to it, and it assumed so permanent a character that it is even called "the temple" in 1 Sam. iii. 3. After David had set up a new tabernacle on Zion for the reception of the ark, the old one at Shiloh fell into disuse.

TABLE (writing). The Law was engraved upon two stone slabs. Subsequently "writing tables" (or tablets) were in common use, made of wood whitened, and written upon with a black fluid, like the modern Arab slate, or covered with wax and written upon with a metal pencil or style, like the Roman tablet.

TABLE. The Hebrews in the time of our Lord had adopted the Roman custom of reclining at table on cushioned divans, resting themselves on the left arm. The tables were in three portions, forming three sides of a square, the seats being placed along the outer sides, and the servants waiting in the inside. The seat of honour was that on the right of the host, who sat in the middle of the cross-table; the honoured guest thus reclined, as it were, on the bosom of his host. The places next in honour were the centres of each side-table, for generally only three persons occupied a table. This was, doubtless, the form of table used when our Lord ate the "Lord's Supper" with His Apostles; as also when He dined with Simon the leper, and when the woman came behind the divan and wept upon His extended feet.

TABLETS, mentioned by Isaiah (iii. 20) among a woman's ornaments, are still in use. They are little cylinders (like bodkin-cases) of wood or metal, attached to chains, and used as charms, in which women place little rolls of parchment on which their secret wishes are written. The R. V. however, renders the Hebrew word "perfume boxes."

TEETH. "I have given you cleanness of teeth ...want of bread" (Amos iv. 6). It is still customary for beggars in Palestine to scrape their teeth with their thumbnails, and then display the clean nail to those from whom they crave alms, as an evidence that no food has been masticated that day.

TEMPLE was the name given to the whole sacred precincts of Mount Moriah, including the "fane" erected by Solomon on the summit, the various "courts" of Israelites and women, each on their separate platforms below it, and the great area, "court of the Gentiles," at the foot of this pyramid of "courts" and steps. The "fane" was a permanent copy of the temporary tabernacle, so far as its ground-plan was concerned, having its "Holy of Holies" (through whose floor projected for a few inches the time-honoured apex of Mount Moriah), its "Holy Place," in which, however, there were ten tables of shewbread and ten golden candlesticks (five of each on each side), and the great brazen "laver" standing on twelve brazen oxen, with their faces outwards. It occupied only one-third of the uppermost platform, the rest being the "court of burnt-offering," in which was the great altar. Below the first series of steps (extending round three sides) was the "court of Israel;" below the next flight, the "court of women;" and at the base of the succeeding flight of steps was a trellised fence, on which were "notices" in various languages, warning none but the circumcised to pass within the sacred enclosures. Then came the great area, "court of the Gentiles," extending 600 feet each way, but nearly doubled in its extent by Herod the Great. This area was reached by a succession of terraces or steps, cut in the face of the mountain on its eastern and southern sides.

TERAPHIM were little household gods of clay, often carried about the person as charms, and had their origin in Mesopotamia. These were the images which Rachel stole from her father's house, and which the Assyrian settlers in Samaria brought from their native lands, and worshipped together with the true God.

TITLE, or superscription. Over every crucified malefactor was inscribed his name, residence, and offence. This was the official warrant for his execution, and was copied from the register in which his sentence was recorded. What Pilate "had written" on the cross of Jesus he "had written" also in the official record, which it was illegal for him to alter.

TITTLE. The fine, minute stroke which often distinguishes one letter from another in the Hebrew alphabet.

TOMB. See BURIAL.

TOPHET was the furnace in the Valley of Hinnom in which human sacrifices were offered. It derived its name from the tabrets (Topheth) with which they drowned the cries of the victims. See TABRET (Section XLIV, p. 109); also HELL.

TREASURE. On account of the insecurity of property, it is still usual in Palestine for the owners to bury their money and valuables in the ground. That this was the case in our Lord's time is proved by the occasional discovery of coffers of Roman coins of that date, whose owners had doubtless been killed or died suddenly, without revealing the place of their concealment.

TREASURY was a vestibule in the Temple of Herod the Great, in which were placed thirteen large money-chests with trumpet-shaped mouths, into which the worshippers dropped their offerings for the maintenance of the public services of the Temple.

TRIBUTE was of two kinds: 1. The half-shekel, which every Jew, wherever resident, was bound to contribute for the maintenance of the Temple. 2. The tax, custom, dues, &c. exacted from them by their Roman subjugators for the maintenance of the civil authorities. The former was paid in Jewish, the latter in Roman coin. It was the former which our Lord paid with the money from the fish's mouth, and the latter which bore Cæsar's image and superscription.

UNDERGIRDERS. See SHIPS.

UNKNOWN GOD. An altar at Athens was thus dedicated. It was probably a thank-offering for some special deliverance, of which the Athenians could not identify the author.

UPPER ROOM. See CHAMBER.

URIM AND THUMMIM ("Lights and Perfections"). These were the sacred symbols (worn upon the breastplate of the high priest, "upon his heart"), by which God gave oracular responses for the guidance of His people in temporal matters. What they were is unknown; they are introduced in Exodus without explanation, as if familiar to the Israelites of that day. Modern Egyptology supplies us with a clue: It tells us that Egyptian high priests in every town, who were also its chief magistrates, wore round their necks a jewelled gem, bearing on one side the image of Truth, and on the other sometimes that of Justice, sometimes that of Light. When the accused was acquitted, the judge held out the image for him to kiss. In the final judgment Osiris wears round his neck the jewelled Justice and Truth. The LXX. translates Urim and Thummim by "light and truth." Some scholars suppose that they were the twelve stones of the breastplate; others that they were two additional stones concealed in its fold. Josephus adds to these the two sardonyx buttons, worn on the shoulders, which, he says, emitted luminous rays when the response was favourable; but the precise mode in which the oracles were given is lost in obscurity.

VESTMENT. It was and still is customary for every Jew, on entering the Synagogue for religious worship, to put on the Tallith or scarf of white lamb's wool with blue stripes and fringes at each end. This was worn over the shoulders, except during prayers, when it covered the head. It marked the worshipper as being a true Israelite. This was perhaps the "wedding garment" of the parable. It was no doubt some similar vestment which Jehu ordered "him that was over the vestry" to supply to each worshipper of Baal (2 Kings x. 22), the acceptance of which was the profession of being a true Baalite.

VESTURE. See COAT and GARMENTS.

VINEGAR is probably used for the sour wine which was the ordinary drink of the Roman soldier.

WAGES were not only money payments, but also "rations," especially those of soldiers on service.

WASHPOT. A footpan, for ablution of the feet. See SHOE.

WATCHMEN were servants, or soldiers, placed as "lookout-men" in towers, on city walls, in palaces, and vineyards, to give timely notice of the approach of invaders and Arab marauders. Watch-towers are still in use in Palestine.

WATER, cup of. In hot countries, the offer of water is most acceptable to the wayfarer. Hence it is now, as of old, one of the most binding duties of hospitality; so the traveller is often met with the friendly offer of "a cup of cold water," accompanied by a salutation or benediction.

WATER-CARRIERS. See BOTTLE.

WATER-POTS were earthenware jars, used in the houses of the poor, to supply the place of cisterns for storing water for domestic purposes. They are still used, and are let into stone racks, near the entrance door.

WEDDING. See MARRIAGE.

WEEKS. Feast of PENTECOST. On the fiftieth day, or seven clear weeks after the second day of the Passover, began the Feast of Weeks, or thanksgiving for the harvest. Loaves made of the new meal, and grain, were offered as first-fruits, and a new sheaf was waved before the Lord.

WINDOWS were mere holes in the wall for the admission of light and air. They were sometimes partially closed by lattices, or wooden trellis-work, or curtains; sometimes entirely shut by trap-doors. An obscure word in Genesis vi. 16 (tsohar) is translated "window." It is supposed to denote some means of illumination, but the passage is not clear.

WISE MEN. The Magi were a Persian caste of philosophers and men of science, who devoted themselves to literature and study, especially to astronomy and astrology. Their learning, and abstinence from political intrigue, rendered them valuable counsellors to the king. The priests belonged to the same caste.

WRITING MATERIALS (see BOOKS and TABLE). Books, written upon papyrus nearly four thousand years ago, have been found in Egyptian tombs; one in the Louvre, dated B.C. 2017, is only a copy of a more ancient work. Ink, inkhorns, and pens made of reeds, are mentioned in Scripture, and have been found in Egypt, where the act of writing is delineated upon the monuments; and a box of colours and pencils, coeval with Abraham, may be seen in the museum at Boulâk. Hebrew writings on leather skins are in the library at St. Petersburg, and sacred parchment-rolls innumerable have been found in the ancient tombs of Palestine. The ruins of Nineveh have yielded whole libraries of standard works, the letters being impressed on clay tablets. Hebrew writing was from right to left; Egyptian varied. Official documents and letters were not signed in writing, but by the impress of a signet-ring or seal.

YOKE. The cross-bar to which draught oxen were fastened by the horns or neck, for drawing carts or ploughs. The affection known to exist between a pair of oxen yoked together is a fruitful source of illustration, e.g. Paul speaks of his true "yokefellow."

YOUNG MEN. The attendants upon a court in the judgment-hall, and upon the Apostles when sitting in council at Jerusalem (Acts v). It is possible that these last suggested the order of deacons.

ZEALOTS. A fanatical section of the "Galilæans" (q.v.). It is supposed by some that the apostle Simon Zelotes was one of them. They are mentioned in Acts xxi. 20, 38; xxii. 3.
